HERE IS HUSKIEST BABY BOY

Thirty Months Old, Weighs 45 Pounds, Walks About Like Little Man.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — Mr. and Mrs. George M. Kennedy, of Scipio township, near Mosherville, claim to have one of the huskiest 2½ year old children in the state.

Master Carl John Kennedy is 42½ inches tall, weighs 45 pounds, acts like a child of six years, and wears at six-year-old boy's overcoat. He has walked two miles and a half along a country road and then all about town without showing any ill effects. When born the child weighed 13 pounds.

CAR KILLS HOSPITAL HEAD

Supt. J. B. Draper of Ann Arbor, Run Down on Way Home.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Superintendent J. B. Draper, of the University hospital, was almost instantly killed when he was struck by an Ann Arbor street car at the corner of Twelfth street and North University avenue as he was on his way home. Both legs and one arm were cut off.

The accident happened almost opposite the Homeopathic hospital and he was rushed to the operating room there, but died within ten minutes.

BAD CARTRIDGE SAVES HIM

Laborer Attempts to Kill Employer; Gun Only Snaps.

ESCANABA, MICH. — Only the fact that a cartridge failed to explode prevented a murder at La Crosse. August Wenzel was chased into the home of E. W. Fosterling by Joseph Wensock.

The latter pointed the gun at Wenzel and pulled the trigger, but only a snap followed. Wenzel's refusal to pay Wenscook for labor caused the row.

PLAY INDIAN, BOY IS SHOT

Eleven Year Old Lad Kills Brother After Exclaiming "Look Out."

ALPHA, MICH. — While playing Indian, Harold De Long, fourteen years old, was shot through the heart by his brother, Carl, eleven years old. Death was instantaneous.

Carl pointed a small rifle at his brother and pulled the trigger after exclaiming, "look out, Mr. Indian!" Harold fell dead at the lad's feet. No arrest will be made.

ITALY SENDS NOTE ON ANCONA SINKING

Declares Attack on Liner "Unparalleled Atrocity."

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Secretary Lansing personally received from Macchi di Cellere, the Italian ambassador, a communication addressed by Italy to all neutral nations denouncing as "an unparalleled atrocity" the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona, with scores of neutrals and other noncombatants aboard.

The statement recites the circumstances of the attack, charging that "without even a blank shot" of warning from the attacking submarine the vessel was shelled and that the killing and wounding of passengers continued after the ship had stopped.

The belief here is that the entire question of the submarine warfare and the obligations of a submarine commander to see that neutrals are in a place of safety before destroying a prize will be taken up by the United States with the Austrian government.

THANKSGIVING

Show us the way to see the good
That comes into our lives each day.
The blessings dimly understood
That gives us cheer along the way
Give us content, with gold and gear
Though much of little we possess—
Let us be glad for what is here
On this, our day of thankfulness.
But broaden to the soul and mind
So that our thanks will not be found
By custom's rule and rote confined
Within this one day's narrow bound.
Let us be glad for early rain
That bids the flowers wake and creep.
Let us be glad for snowy plain
That holds them in their winter sleep.
Give us the heart to understand
The graciousness of spreading trees:
The changing seasons, wisely planned,
The storm and sunshine—all of these,
For all the brightness of the dawn,
And cheerfulness of noon and night:
And all that joy builded on
Give us the grace to see aright.
Let us remember each kind word
By weight of goodly feeling blest
Each gentle thing we've said or heard
And blot from memory the rest.
Give us the grace to see and know
The benefits along the way—
The many things that help us so.
Let us be thankful every day.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY STORIES

And every story a good one. They are entertaining, but that is not all you can say about them. You know there is hardly a periodical published that is not full time-wasting stories, but not a single story in The Youth's Companion is a time waster. Take the stories of C. A. Stevens. It would be hard to pick out one from which you can not learn something useful and yet entertaining.

Some of The Companion stories refresh your knowledge of geography; some tell you the mysteries of chemistry, some reveal the secrets of forestry and of general farming. They cover a wide range. They are chosen with an eye to the possible likings of every member of a Companion family—stories of vigorous action and stirring adventure for boys, stories of college life and domestic vicissitudes for girls, stories that range all the way from sheer drollery to deep seriousness for men and women. There are no stories quite like those in The Companion.

If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is today, let us send you sample copies and the Forecast for 1916.

New subscribers who send $2.00 for 1916, will receive free a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1916, in addition to all the remaining 1915 issues from the time the subscription is received.

MR. BOB

There was a good attendance at the Universalist church for the presentation of Mr. Bob by the seniors of Tecumseh High School. The comedy was a very funny one and each character was well sustained. "Bob" was a jolly young girl who fitted the name to perfection. Patty the maid was every where present and was a maid worth having. It is hard to tell which were best among the actors.

This is the third canvass of this kind put on by the church. As the former canvasses were great successes there is no doubt this will be the same. All the work will be done in the afternoon, and at 5:30 the canvassers will return to the church to make their report, and with their families have Sunday evening lunch together. The amount to be raised for the coming year is $3000.

IF YOU HAVE CATARRH READ THIS

Breath Hyomei Four Times a Day and Watch Results. Gives Prompt Relief.

The pleasantest, most convenient and most scientific method for the treatment of catarrh is Hyomei. Simply put a few drops of Hyomei in the inhaler that comes with every complete package and then breathe its air for a few minutes, four times a day.

It seems remarkable that so simple a way of treating catarrh will effect such quick relief, but the most important discoveries of science have always been the simplest. By breathing Hyomei in this way every particle of air that enters the air passages of the throat and head and goes into the lungs is charged with a healing balsam that kills the germs and bacilli of catarrh and soothes and allays all irritation.

The first day's use of Hyomei will show an improvement and in a short time there should be no further trouble from catarrh. Its action is rapid and lasting.

You take no risk in buying Hyomei. A complete outfit is inexpensive but if after using you can say that it has not helped you C. A. Wright & Son will return your money. What other treatment for catarrh is sold under a guarantee like this? adv

HARD COAL FACTS

It is a well reconised fact among stove and furnace experts that the larger sizes of hard coal are much more economical and more lasting than smaller coal.

They may be a trifle more slow in starting if your fire is low, but if you keep your fire-box full at all times regulating your fire from the drafts you will always have a quick fire.

Another reason in favor of the larger coal is the price, another is the breaker boys can see and remove impurities from the larger coal as they are so much quicker seen on account of their size. No one ever saw a large piece of slate in egg coal.

In all our experiences with different coal we never have seen a coal so free from impurities, burn to a fine white ash, give out no end of lasting heat like the PLYMOUTH.

If you are not a user we both are the loser, to have us both winners order a ton of PLYMOUTH of us the next time you need hard coal.

A BOY PARTY

Ralph Field Celebrates Ninth Birthday Wednesday

Ralph Field reached the ninth milestone on his journey of life and to celebrate the event, eighteen of his boy friends were present with Miss LaPointe his teacher who acted as chaperon and helped them with their games indoors and sports outside. And then, that chicken pie supper! We have it on good authority that each boy ate a whole pie, one little fellow remarked, "When we couldn't eat anymore, Mr. Field tried to stuff us through our ears" and another said, "It was such a nice party, not any girls in it, and so much to eat."

In the bean bag contest Lucian Williamson won first prize, and Raymond Austin the consolation. Ralph received many nice and useful presents and we think he may set up opposition to the public library as he had eleven new books added to his stock

BADLY BURNED

While at work for the Williamson Bros, in the poultry dressing department, Roy Smith was the victim of a peculiar accident. A hen getting away flew into the hot water tank. Mr. Smith had one hand seriously scalded by the splashing water. Dr. Briegel rendered the necessary aid making him as comfortable as possible under the circumstances

"KILKENNY"

A Crowded House Greets Fiske O'hara.

"Kilkenny" an Irish comedy with Fiske O'Hara in the leading role was the attraction at the Opera House Tuesday evening. A record breaking house greeted Mr. O'Hara and his excellent company Many coming from Clinton and Manchester by special train.

The scene of the play was laid in Kelkenny an old town in Ireland A story of an artist who fell in love with his model. His suit is opposed by her guardian who favors another suiter, but after much opposition the artist wins.

The work of Fiske O'Hara as Richard Desmond demonstrated his ability as a real star his easy grace winning for him the admiration of his hearers, In his musical selections he charmed his hearers with his clear sweet tenor voice he sang, "Ireland is Ireland to me", "Contrary Mary Clary" Girl of my Heart" and "Dear Mother Mine," Monsieur Hoyne the Irish Frenchman, who spells his name with a dash over the e was worthy of mention also the work of Murphy Kale the blind piper A strong cast supported Mr. O'Hara.

The costumes worn were elaborate and a carload of fine Scenery and effects were used in the three acts of the play.

We regret that Mr. O'Hara found it necessary in the second act to come out of his cast and rebuke a company of young men seated in the balcony who were making light of a certain act. The rebuke was warranted and we trust that it will have a wholesome effect.

Kilkenney is by far the best attraction which has been seen in Tecumseh in many years.

WILSON RECOGNIZES NO "LES MAJESTE"

Ousted Man Who Criticised Marriage Ordered Reinstated.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A reinstatement with "no ifs or howevers about it," was ordered by President Wilson for George Burkitt, assistant postmaster at Winnetka, Ill., who had been ousted by his postmaster, apparently with the sanction of the postoffice department, largely because of deprecatory remarks he had made concerning the approaching marriage of President Wilson.

This declaration came from the White House at a time when it was known that a statement was being prepared by the postoffice department showing that alleged "disloyalty" on Burkitt's part was not the only charge against him. It was made clear that the president, thoroughly distressed by the incident, hoped to end it as quickly as it should come up.

"You may say that the President has ordered Mr. Burkitt's reinstatement," said Secretary Tulmulty. "There are no ifs or howevers about it."

SEASON HALF OVER; SLAIN DEER SCARCE

Dead Hunters Few; Game Officials Are Pleased.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 22.—With one-half of the regular open deer hunting season ended, state officials are more than pleased with the workings of the one-deer law passed by the 1915 legislature.

Based on reports received so far, the legal shipping of deer will be about 40 per cent of last year's record. This same 40 per cent applies also to the number of hunters. Deputy Game Wardens Ely and Gates, who have charge of the checking of the deer as they come south at the straits, report that up until Friday midnight 450 deer had crossed. This is just about 40 per cent of last year's record. At the same time 2,154 hunters had crossed going north, whereas at the same time last year the number was close to 5,000.

Game Warden Gates and his assistants are so far exultant over the new law. They think the small number of deer killed will help to pass a buck law, which the department was after in the last legislature but failed to get. Violations of the law are as numerous as ever, chiefly in the sections which class the alien as a non-resident. Several convictions on this charge have been secured as well as several for selling deer. Accidents have been reduced to a minimum. Two deaths—one of these fro mheart failure and the other where the hunter accidentally killed himself—have been reported. One man was struck in the hip by a stray bullet.

SUFFRAGISTS GATHER IN NATIONAL CAPITAL

Will Try to Wring Votes for Women from Congress.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, has accepted the invitation of the Women's Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage to assist in receiving delegates and guests of the convention which will meet in Washington simultaneously with congress.

The reception will be held on the evening of Dec. 7 and will be the occasion of the opening of new quarters which the Congressional Union has taken in Washington in a residence facing LaFayette park, opposite the White House. Invitations have been mailed to the wives of all the cabinet officers to join the receiving line, and it is expected, particularly in view of the many conversions to suffrage in President Wilson's cabinet this fall, that a number of the cabinet ladies will accept.

The suffrage hosts are already gathering here for the demonstrations which are to be made the week of December 6-13 to impress on congress the strength of the woman suffrage movement. The first demonstration will be held at the capitol on Monday, December 6, on the day that congress opens. The two envoys bringing a monster petition from the women of the suffrage states to congress asking that suffrage be granted to all women by means of a constitutional amendment will arrive here that morning and present their petition to the house and senate.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Preparations for what the police believe to have been a plot to blow up the home of John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil company and business partner of John D. Rockefeller, were discovered when four sticks of dynamite were found concealed within fifty feet of the building.

The explosive was wrapped in coarse yellow paper and around each of the four sticks was wound copper wire.

FLEET TO SHELL PORTS OF GREECE

Allies Decide On Drastic Measures With Constantine.

COMPLETE BLOCKADE PLANNED

Unfavorable Reply by Greek Ruler to Demands of Kitchener Will Bring Attack—Troops of Allies Continue to Land at Saloniki—Destructive Submarine Identified.

London, Nov. 22.—The complete commercial and economic blockade against Greece, it was learned here, was the first step taken by the allies to force compliance with the demand made by Earl Kitchener on King Constantine that Greece either join the allies, in accordance with her treaty obligations and promises, or demobilize her army at once.

The Greek cabinet has been again in session and the decision should be known soon.

Allied troops are still landing regularly at Saloniki and a large allied fleet is in that port ready for action if the Greek decision should force it.

Greece Is Given Ultimatum.

London, Nov. 22.—Greece must disband its army or put it into the field on the allies' side.

This demand, says a Malta dispatch, has been presented to the Athens government. The information is not official, but the censor passed it. It is therefore accepted as accurate.

The entente powers do not insist that Greece fight in their interest, but they do require Greek assurances that they will not be interfered with in their Balkan campaign, that there will be no demand for their troops' withdrawal from Greek territory, and that no attempt will be made to intern them if they should be driven temporarily out of Serbia, Bulgaria, or Turkey back into Greece.

Their view is that Greece will be powerless to make such an attempt if its army is demobilized and its demobilization is the form they want the Greek guarantee to take.

Demand After Kitchener Visit.

The Malta dispatch does not tell the method in which the demands were given to the Greek government, but an Athens message to Reuter's Telegram company says that Earl Kitchener, British secretary for war, after an audience with King Constantine lasting more than an hour, conferred with Premier Shouloudis and then left Athens.

"The anxiety felt over the announcement of the allies' intention to bring pressure to bear on Greece in order to assure the unmolested passage of the allied troops through Greek territory in case such a course is necessary," adds the correspondent, "has been perceptibly allayed by Lord Kitchener's visit."

The dispatch adds that both the king and Kitchener were cheered by the people as they left the conference.

May Bring About Revolt.

If the Greek king fails to comply with the demands it is expected that the allies will resort to force at once. This will cause revolutionary uprisings in Greece, it is widely believed. There already have been disorders by the pro-allies in various districts.

Destructive Submarine Identified.

Rome, Nov. 22.—The Idea Nazionale says that the German submarine which torpedoed the British armed boarding steamer Tara in the eastern Mediterranean on Nov. 5 and two Anglo-Egyptian gunboat in the gulf of Sollum on Nov. 6, also torpedoed the Italian liners Ancona, Firenza and Bosnia. The newspaper adds: "The characteristics of the submarine, its displacement, armament and course, were already sufficient proof of its identification. Now Germany's confession brings additional confirmation. Hence further hesitation on the part of the Italian government is impossible."

Russ Recapture City After 24 Hours.

London, Nov. 22.—The Russians recaptured Czartoryak just twenty-four hours after it was taken by the Germans, according to Petrograd advices. The czar's troops withdrew to the right bank of the Styr and shelled the Germans out. The Slavs also captured Kozlinitchy.

Germans Claim Gains by Mines.

Berlin, Nov. 22.—Bitter warfare by the use of mines is taking place in the Souchez district, according to an official report. German forces occupied the hole made by a French mine and retained it. Near the Ypres-Zonnebek railway a German mine was exploded inside the French line.

Bars Food Price Increase.

Paris, Nov. 22.—The government took further action to prevent an increase in the price of the necessaries of life and speculation therein by drafting a penalty clause to the present law. The new article provides for imprisonment varying from six days to six months and a fine of 5,000 francs ($1,000) in any case of illegal increase or of speculation in such commodities.

82,500 MILES IN ONE MILE

Pleasure Boat on Reed's Lake, Grand Rapids, Makes Unique Record.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 22.—The Major Watson, a steam pleasure boat operated on Reed's Lake, near this city has a distinction not possessed by any other boat. Although it has traveled more than 82,500 miles, it has never been more than a mile in a direct line from the spot where it was built.

The boat has been in operation for twenty-five years. It makes three trips an hour, eleven hours each day around the lake, which has a circumference of more than three miles. It runs five months every year. This gives a yearly average of 6,600 miles and a total mileage of 82,500.

Escapes on Way to Trial.

Detroit, Nov. 22.—James C. Clarke, known to Detroiters as the "Pontchartrain bandit," has escaped. While en route from the Leavenworth prison to Portland, Ore., to testify in the case against two of his accomplices, Clarke escaped near Sand Point, Idaho.

IMPRISONED IN ROOM FOR TWELVE YEARS

Young Woman Loses Voice and Becomes Living Skeleton.

Aston, Md., Nov. 22.—So long isolated from mankind that she has lost the power of speech, Miss Grace Marshall, twenty-eight years old, is to be taught all over again how to talk. Physically a wreck and mentally unbalanced, the young woman has just been rescued after twelve years' imprisonment in the home of her father, Frank Marshall, a farmer near St. Michaels. During several years of that time, if not all, she was confined to a small, unventilated, unlighted and unheated room.

In spite of the fact that she had been reduced by imprisonment to a living skeleton of fifty-seven pounds; that she has forgotten how to talk, and almost how to think, Dr. Davidson said he believed she would live, and that her mind would respond to human treatment. Her father and mother say they imprisoned her because she was insane.

S. GOMPERS IS RE-ELECTED

Veteran Is Again Chosen Head of American Labor Federation.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—Samuel Gompers of New York city was reelected president of the American Federation of Labor at the concluding session of the annual convention here.

Of three dissenting votes, one was announced as that of Adolph Germer, a Socialist of Collinsville, who asked that official record be made of his voting against Gompers.

All the officers of the federation were re-elected almost unanimously.

WIRELESS SPEED INCREASED

Oregon Man's Invention May Make Revolution in Air Work.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 22.—Perfection of a device for automatically receiving and relaying wireless messages at a speed of 60 per cent greater than under present methods is announced here. Dr. Ray E. Hall, scientist, of Portland, Ore., is the inventor.

Experiments conducted here show that the new instrument can receive, record, and relay messages automatically at a rate of nearly 200 words a minute.

KILLED IN GARMENT STRIKE

Young Man Clubbed to Death in Mistake for "Scab.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—The second life sacrificed to violence in the garment makers' strike was snuffed out when Michael Guszkowski, a young union tailor and a bridegroom of four months, was clubbed to death in front of a saloon at 1801 West Division street by fellow unionists out on strike.

Guszkowski was mistaken for an employe of a nonunion shop and a strikebreaker.

ALLEGED SCHEME WILL BE BARED

History of Teutonic Propaganda to Be Made Public.

DUMBA NAMED AS PRINCIPAL

Ex-Ambassador from Austria Said to Have Engineered Colossal Conspiracy Against Industries in United States in Favor of Germany and Central Powers.

New York, Nov. 22.—The skeleton story of the criminal part of the Teutonic propaganda in this country with the names of the master minds who originated it, the men who financed it, the executives who supervised parts of the work and many of the German or Austro-Hungarian agents who carried out their orders is likely to be told to the federal grand jury within a few days, if in fact part of the plot has not been presented to it.

It deals with a conspiracy against the industries of the United States munition plants, arms factories and other plants that have been filling orders for the allies. It treats of plans to cripple many factories and, if suggestions are correct, it may deal with still graver affairs.

Sensational Evidence in Hand.

The evidence that has been gathered from the letters which Captain James F. H. Archibald carried for Dr. Constantin Dumba, dismissed Austro-Hungarian amb[illegible]try, Captain Von Papen and other diplomatic agents, forms only a small part of the case now being worked up. The charges made by Dr. Joseph Goricar, ex-Austrian consul in this country, against Count Von Bernstorff, German ambassador to this country, Captain Boy-Ed and against Dr. Elexander Nuber Von Pereked, have been regarded as sensational, but the evidence which Dr. Goricar can present is hardly needed for the substantiation of the details of the alleged conspiracy.

Should indictments be returned—and there seems to be little doubt of that—the details will come out in full. The department of justice has been working on the case for months and the evidence is said to have been submitted to President Wilson. Delay in presenting the evidence to a grand jury is believed to have been due to the desire of the President to make sure of every specific charge and to have each allegation supported by uncontrovertible evidence.

The great genius in the propaganda, it is said, was Dr. Dumba. It was because of his rare gifts that he was selected by the central powers for the task of taking steps here that would cripple the enemy's preparations for the fighting in the trenches.

Germany, it is said, was to furnish the money. Dr. Goricar alrady has charged that Count Von Bernstorff had at least $40,000,000 at his command; Franz Rintelen, the mysterious German who spent many months in this country, is said to have boasted that he could command $30,000,000 for any necessary work.

Funds have been traced with the utmost accuracy. Evidence has been dug up to show how money travelled through various channels to men who have done work in behalf of the Teutonic cause.

His Closest Lieutenant Captured.

The man, who is believed to have been Dr. Dumba's closest lieutenant in much of the work that the ex-Ambassador planned is Franz Rintelen.

Since Rintelen was captured by England when on his way to Rotterdam, the German government has taken unusual steps to have him released. The Kaiser is reported to have offered to exchange for Rintelen any officer captured by Germany or even several officers.

Rintelen, however, is now in the tower of London with enough evidence gathered against him to lead to his hanging as a spy, unless it should happen that he be brought back to the United States.

WILSON TO EAT GIFT TURKEY

President, Fiancee and Family to Pass Thanksgiving Day in Washington.

Washington, Nov. 22.—President Wilson will take Thanksgiving dinner with his family and his fiancee, Mrs. Galt, at the White House.

A thirty-five pound turkey fattened by South Trimble, clerk of the house of representatives, on his Kentucky farm, has been shipped for the occasion and it is said that the trimble turkey actually will be served on the White House table. The distinction is claimed annually for a flock of a dozen or more from all parts of the country.

URGES BIG STATE EXHIBIT

General Fair Manager Dickinson Sends Letters to Executive Heads.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 22.—G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the Michigan state fair, has sent out letters to the executive heads of the various Michigan schools, colleges, reformatories and other institutions and departments, inviting them to make exhibits at the 1916 exposition. If sufficient acceptances are received, Mr. Dickinson plans to convert the second floor of the Automobile building into a hall for state exhibits exclusively. He is of the opinion that such displays will be of great benefit educationally as they will show to a great extent what the various state officials are doing for tax payers of Michigan.

Last September the Michigan Agricultural college, Michigan state prison, state dairy and food department and Michigan fish commission brought exhibits to the state fair and all attracted considerable attention.

CHAUTAUQUA ASSURED FOR 1916

The local committee have made a contract with the Colt Alber Chautauqua Co. of Cleveland, O., for a Chautauqua to be held in Tecumseh in the early part of August.

A liberal number of guarantors has already been secured which practically assures the success of the Chautauqua.

It will be a five day attraction with talent equal to any Chautauqua Company on the road. Hudson and Adrian have dealt with the Company for several years and have signed up for another year.

The contract signed with the Colt Alber Chautauqua People is more favorable to the people of Tecumseh than that of the Lincoln Chautauqua held here for the past two years.

This Company pays all local bills, advertising, hotel bills for talent, electric light bills etc., furnish chairs and even the platform. The guarantors are held responsible for the sale of 400 tickets at $2.00 each.

The local committee have made [illegible] view of what seemed to be a general desire for a Chautauqua.

TECUMSEH vs [illegible]

Sunday Nov. 21.

The Tecumseh foot ball team played their first game at home Sunday holding the strong Adrian Independents to a scoreless tie. The playing of the Tecumseh team was a vast improvement, over that of earlier in the season. Two weeks previous the Tecumseh team was defeated by Adrian to the time of [illegible] to 0.

Practically all of the first two periods of the game, the ball was in Adrian's territory, Tecumseh clearly out playing them during this time, but being unable to score.

Adrian showed their best attack in the last few minutes of play fowing the ball to Tecumseh's ten yard line and losing the ball on an incomplete pass over the goal line, the ball going to Tecumseh on her 20 yard line as the whistle blew.

Tecumseh plays Clinton in Tecumseh on Thanksgiving Day. This game will be begun at 2:45 sharp.

A THANKSGIVING REVERIE

I'd like to spend Thanksgiving day back home back on the farm, where every homely object holds the old familiar charm: I'd like to see the old red barn, 'neath whose projectin' roof bedraggled farmyard gentry oft from drenching held aloof, where in the dim light of the mow, amid the fragrant hay, with pigeons broodin' in the eaves, a boy I used to play.

I'd see the windmill once again, and hear its ghostly clack, would ease my heart, and speedin, bring the fond, memories back.

I'd like to see the patient kine awaitin' the hired man, an' dippin muggy noses in the pails of moistened bran.

I'd like to see the well-fed cats that used to haunt the place, and have the ever-friendly dog yearn up into my face I'd like to take the old flint-lock, an' go out after quail, er, mebby, nigh the hazel [illegible] scare up a cotton-tail.

An' smell again the savory smells of mince and pumkin' pies an' stuff yerself with white-meat so's yer most too full ter rise.

But, no—I call a taxicab, and dine at some cafe, where there's a decent orchestra, or lively cabaret: I wasn't brought up on the farm; with me it ne'er agreed—I only wrote this verse because it's what folks like to read.

WHAT DID YOU DO?

Did you give him a lift? He's a brother of man,
And bearing about all the burden he can.
Did you give him a smile? He was downcast and blue,
And the smile would have helped him to battle it through.
Do you give him your hand? He was slipping down hill,
And the world, so he fancied, was using him ill.
Do you give him a word? Did you show him the road,
Or did you just let him go on with his load?
Do you know what it means to be losing the fight,
When a lift just in time might set everything right?
Do you know what it means—just the clasp of a hand,
When a man's borne about all a man ought to stand?
Do you ask what it was—why the quivering lip?
Why the half suppressed sob, and the scalding tears drip?
Were you brother of his when the time came of need?
Did you offer to help him or didn't you heed?

CARD OF THANKS

To the friends and neighbors who came to us in the hour of our deepest sorrow to comfort and assist us; to the pastor for the beautiful sermon; to those who gave the wealth of beautiful flowers to garland the grave of our dear one, we wish to express our most grateful thanks.

A Garrick Incident.

David Garrick, where speaking was concerned, was the pride of London. Members of parliament envied him his powers. Burke envied him. There is that instance in parliament when, during a heated debate, a member moved that the gallery be cleared. This was ordered to be done, and the strangers withdrew, all save Garrick. Still the member objected. Then up spake Burke. Would it be fair to exclude from their debate the master of eloquence, the genius who taught them the art of speaking? he demanded. For himself he was proud to acknowledge his indebtedness to Garrick. Fox followed in the same strain, and Townshend. The house then voted that the "stranger should remain." And Garrick did not budge.—St. James' Gazette.

Soho Square, London.

Soho is perhaps the most curiously derived place name in London. According to Samuel Pegge, the antiquary, Soho square, which has given a name to the district, was first called Monmouth square when the ill fated Duke of Monmouth had a house there. Upon the duke's defeat and execution in 1685 the square was ordered to be called King's square, and a statue of King Charles II. was set up in the middle of it. But the partisans of the Duke of Monmouth, wishing to preserve a distant remembrance of their leader, called it Soho square from "Soho!" a hunting cry adopted by the duke as his watchword at the battle where he was taken prisoner.—London Saturday Review.

Justice.

A Sunday school teacher had been telling her class of little boys about crowns of glory and heavenly rewards for good people.

"Now, tell me," she said at the close of the lesson, "who will get the biggest crown?"

There was a silence for a minute or two, then a bright little chap piped out:

"Im wot's got t' biggest 'ead."—London Tit-Bits.

Futility of Argument.

Plato defined man as "a two legged animal without feathers." Diogenes, who heard this, plucked a cock. "This is Plato's man," said he. But never you think the old timer lacked a "come-back." He added to his origiual definition the words—"With broad flat nails." Such is the futility of argument.—Springfield Republican.

The One Advantage.

"Traded your motor boat for an aeroplane, eh? What's the idea?"

"Well, there's this about an aeroplane—even if the engine does break down, you're bound to land somewhere."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A LESSON FOR THE NURSE.

She Didn't Like It When She Was Paid In Her Own Coin.

A mother overheard her nurse girl talking to the child she was putting to sleep, and among other legends of the nursery in which she was indulged was this: "If you don't go to sleep this very minute a great, big, awful, black bear, with eyes like coals of fire and sharp, white, cruel teeth, will come out from under the bed and e-a-t-y-o-u-a-l-l up!" The poor little thing nestled down under the clothes to dream of horrid bears eating her up.

That night when the stolid nurse had composed herself in her own comfortable bed and had put the light out there came a sudden rap at the door, and the voice of the mistress called loudly through the panels: "Maggie! Maggie! Get up as quick as you can! There's a burglar under your bed!" At the word "burglar" the girl sprang screaming from the bed, tore open the door and fell into hysterics in the hall.

The lesson was more instructive than the mistress designed, but when the girl's fears had calmed she said to her: "You did not hesitate to tell my delicate child, who could not possibly know that it was a lie, a cruel story about a bear under her bed. Now, when I treat you to the same kind of a story, you are nearly frightened to death. Tomorrow you can go into the kitchen and work there. You are not fit to care for little children."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Desperation.

Lady Visitor—My poor man, what first drove you to a career of crime?

Desperate Criminal—Trying to match samples for my wife.—Baltimore American.

There never was an excuse as interesting as a duty well done.—Toledo Blade.

ENTERTAINMENT

The B. Y. P. U. girls gave a very nice little entertainment Friday evening at the Church. A program was given as follows.

Piano duet by the Brooks twins, Marion and Mildred. This was followed by a recitation by Mrs Ferman who also responded to an encore, Mrs. Ferman is certainly fine in this line and met with hearty applause by the audience.

Miss Hoops was next with a vocal solo which was delightfully rendered. She responded to an encore.

After this came a farce presented by eight of the young ladies in full dress costumes gathered from the old trunks in the attic saved from the days of long ago.

Sewing for the "Heathen" was the event presented. After much preamble the ladies busied themselves with red flannel petticoats, long protectors, sweaters and etc for the benighted heathen in Africa.

The most notable character was the cook and maid of all works "A Dutch Girl" true to nature Miss Lula Stahler has surely mistaken her calling and should be on the stage.

"Grandma" with her ear trumpet whose hearing was "just as good as it ever was," was well represented by Miss Lillian Cole in fact every character was all right. The big event of the sewing bee was the arrival of a box from the husbands of the ladies which proved to be some article of clothing belonging to them with the request that their wives sew on the buttons, mend the rents and darn the socks etc, sewing for their own heathen first. Those present thoroughly enjoyed the little entertainment.

EAT A SQUARE MEAL AND NOT FEAR INDIGESTION

There are hundreds of people in Tecumseh who were not the least bit surprised when they read in the Herald that C. A. Wright & Son are selling Mi-o-na on a guarantee to refund the money in case it did not relieve. This remarkable dyspepsia remedy will relieve the worst case of indigestion headache, dizziness, or the general played-out condition that afflicts every one suffering with stomach trouble. Mi-o-na does not simply relieve, it aims to cure.

C. A. Wright & Son can tell you of many well known people in this city who this remedy has restored to health, often after they have tried many other methods of treatment with little or no benefit. No other dyspepsia remedy has made so large a percentage of cures as Mi-o-na. It is so large that C. A. Wright & Son stands ready to refund the price to any customer whom it does not help.

The best kind of advertising is the praise of a pleased customer and there are hundreds in Tecumseh today praising Mi-o-na because it does what it is advertized to do. A few months ago they could eat nothing without wondering what the result will be. Since using Mi-o-na, they eat what they want and when they want, with no fear of suffering.

Showing How the Eye Sees More Than One Thinks It Does.

Writing on psychological subjects in the Ladies' Home Journal, H. Addington Bruce says:

"From Dr. A. H. of Pennsylvania, one of our well known psychologists, I have received this impressive piece of testimony to the power of the eye to see more than one consciously apprehends:

"'Three summers ago, when I was on a visit to my old home town, I took a short cut across familiar fields where a fair growth of weeds covered the ground. I was going along at a rapid gait, with my mind wholly occupied with matters other than my path, when suddenly, quite reflexly, my left foot, instead of going down on the spot where it should, jerked itself over to the left, and I went on fully ten steps before I realized that I had made the sharpest kind of an offset in my path. I wondered what made me do it, turned, retraced my steps and found an adder still coiled and ready to strike, exactly, as I judged, where my foot would have gone.'

"Dr. A. H., recognizing the correct explanation of his fortunate misstep, adds:

"'During my boyhood summers I used to go barefooted much of the time. Through sad experiences with stubble fields, brier patches and stony paths I learned automatically to pick my way without giving thought to the matter. As a result, I find myself frequently in my walks avoiding obstacles which at the moment I do not consciously discern.'"

Autos to Be Exhibited.

According to General Manager Dickinson the exhibit of automobiles at the State Fair will be much larger than a year ago. The manufacturers of pleasure cars as well as motor trucks are anxious to display their models at the State Fair, where they will be inspected by thousands from Sept. 6 to 15.

GUNPOWDER IN WAR.

For Centuries Its Use Was Opposed In the Name of Humanity.

There was a period when any kind of "explosive" fighting in war was considered barbarous. The discovery of gunpowder put a stop to the old fashioned method of attack, in which only missiles and sharp edged weapons were considered ethical, but gunpowder did not come into approval without a struggle. In fact, it was under the "humanity" ban for almost three centuries.

This remarkable compound of saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal, which was given its first tryout at the siege of Constantinople in 1453, had been known to both the chemist and the soldier for a hundred years or more. It is said to have been discovered by Roger Bacon in England about the year 1200 and by a German monk named Schwarz twenty years later. Another independent discoverer of the same dangerous mixture was an unknown and uncelebrated Moor, whose secret was ultimately carried into Europe in the fourteenth century. Even he was not the first to make an explosive compound. The Chinese "beat him to it," having used this same kind of mixture for rocket signals before the Christian era.

The fall of Constantinople was brought about by the use, the wholly unethical and altogether barbarous use, of cannon balls, and it was not until about a century later that the world gave its full sanction to the killing of men by means of gunpowder.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Japanese Bandages.

The triangle bandage first introduced by the Japanese during the Russo-Japanese war is now being widely used in the European war. It has been found that bandages of this type are suitable for binding up wounds in any part of the body and that one can be carried by each soldier without inconvenience. The Germans improved it by printing on the bandage itself, in sterilized ink, various figures showing how it is to be applied. The British war office then adopted the idea, and every British soldier now carries one of the printed bandages in a special pocket of his tunic. This bandage is often applied without assistance by the wounded soldier.—Popular Mechanics.

GOLDEN WEDDING

ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. ALFRED JACKSON CELEBRATED SUNDAY NOVEMBER 21.

Big Dinner Served to Twenty three Relatives. Fifty Dollars in Gold Among Gifts.

The 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jackson was celebrated at the Jackson home on Oneida street Mr. and Mrs Jackson were married at Coldwater on the 22nd day of November 1865. They have lived in Lenawee county all of their married life with the exception of eight years. For many years they lived on a farm west of Tecumseh. Twenty years ago they moved to Tecumseh and have lived here since.

The celebration was a surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson who had been spending some time in Flint with their son Glenn and family coming to Tecumseh with them Saturday. A bountiful three course dinner was served with covers laid for twenty-three.

The place cards were in the shape of orange blossoms and placed at each plate was a beautiful embossed card printed in gold with the pictures of Mr and Mrs. Jackson the dates 1865—1915 and the following verse:

"Eat, drink and be merry
For right here we wish to say,
This is a time to be long remembered
Our Golden Wedding Day"

In the center of the table was an immense pumpkin cut in half, filled with fruit, and decorated around the edge with fifty small candles.

Guests present from out-of-town were: their daughter, Mrs. James Woodard and family of Clinton; their son Glenn and family of Flint; Mrs. Lilly, a sister of Mr. Jackson, and husband from Bronson; Elbridge Jackson, a brother from Chesaning; two neices of Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Buck and her husband of Coldwater and Mrs. L. Wilcox and husband of Union City; and Mrs. Layern Barrett their daughter and family of Tecumseh completed the family group.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful presents, among them was a purse of $50 in gold. The house was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums and other flowers.

There are but very few who reach the 50th anniversary of their wedded life, who are as bright and cheerful as Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and we hope they may be spared just as long as they can enjoy life and the companionship of of their family and friends.

TECUMSEH SHOE HOUSE CHANGES HANDS

J. J. Belcher Sells Out To Charles Broderich of Ann Arbor.

As was hinted in an article in a late issue of the Herald J. J. Belcher will make a business change in the near future. He has sold his business to Charles Broderich of Ann Arbor who will take possession Jan 1. 1916.

Seventeen years ago Mr. and Mrs Belcher came here from Leslie, Mich. and opened up a Shoe Store in the place now occupied by John Nyland,

A year ago last August Mr. Belcher purchased the building formerly occupied by the Tecumseh State Savings Bank moving his stock from the store now occupied by Jones & Son where he had been the last few years.

Mrs Belcher has spent most of her time for a number of years in the store and proved herself a faithful helpmate and friend to all and with Mr. Belcher has won many friends who will regret to hear of their change

Mr Belcher has always taken a lively interest in everything that was for the good of Tecumseh and for the past two years has been president of the Commerce Club where his influence was ever for good.

A staunch republican, he has always been an active worker, and has been a member of the Republican County committee for several years.

We understand that Mr. Belcher has come into possession of a large farm six miles north of Ann Arbor through the deal, and may decide to follow the simple life in the future.

Mr. Belcher will be greatly missed in the business rank upon our street and in the social life as well.

Our best wishes go with him and his estimable wife, wherever they may decide to cast their lot in the future.

HER JAMIE

A Historical Story of England and America.

By F. A. MITCHEL

It was a sorry day for me when my father came to me and told me that I must give up all thought of my Jamie and marry Sir Ernest Merivale. The one I loved, but I knew that he was unsteady; the other I respected and was sure that he would make me a good husband. There were whisperings concerning Jamie that I did not like. It was said that after the defeat of the cavaliers by the roundheads he had followed in the footsteps of so many of the king's adherents and taken to the road to make a living. As for Sir Ernest, he was as steady as a rock and as true as steel. But Jamie had won me by that sweet smile of his, and I did not love Sir Ernest.

The Merivales had lived near us for many years. Ernest and Jamie were cousins, though Ernest was a good ten years older than Jamie. Ernest was an only son, and when he came into the title and estates by the death of his father his mother urged him to marry that he might have an heir. I was then a little girl, and he said he would wait till I had grown, and he would marry none but me. But of this I knew nothing at that time, though I noticed he seemed fond of me and gave me many a trinket.

Sir Ernest did not approve of many of the king's acts and sympathized with the parliament. Though he did not take up arms against the king, the royalists were bitter against him and vowed that when they had overcome their enemies they would punish him for not defending his sovereign.

When father told me that I must give up Jamie and marry Sir Ernest I shut myself up in my room and wept bitter tears. But after awhile I grew calm and began to think, not like a foolish girl caught by a bauble, but as one called upon to decide between that bauble and the promise of a life of comfort. And yet the former was unattainable, for Jamie had no fortune, and I knew that the report concerning him was true. He had made himself an outlaw.

There was nothing left me but to marry Sir Ernest, and that I did. He was very loving and tender with me, treating me as a bit of china that he feared to break. When he said to me, "Joanna, I would not have you do violence to your heart, and I conjure you not to marry me without your love," I was ashamed that I was about to do that very thing. But I resolved that I would put Jamie out of my mind and live only for my husband.

When King Charles II. was restored to the throne those who had sworn vengeance upon Sir Ernest trumped up charges against him. Knowing that he was in great danger and wishing to keep it a secret from me or perhaps fearing that his enemies would inflict some direct punishment on me, he sent me to an aunt in Scotland to abide till the storm should have blown over and he might again feel a measure of safety.

While I was in Scotland my husband sent me letters by the post, but there came a long interval between his writings, and I wondered. When a month had passed and no word had come from him I told my aunt that I would go back to England. Then she told me that Sir Ernest had been arrested for high treason against the king, that his estates had been sequestered and that, having no home, I should remain with her in Scotland.

Despite her pleadings I left her and made the journey to London, for my husband had been sent to the tower, and I expected to find him there. Moreover, I intended to go to the king and plead for him. But when I reached the capital I found that the king was so engrossed with milady Castlemaine that I could not get a hearing. I went to the tower and asked to see my husband, but was told by the lieutenant that he was not there. He had been received there as a prisoner, but after a time had been delivered to Lord Carbondale by order of the king.

Now, I knew that Lord Carbondale was the bitterest of all Sir Ernest's enemies, and it was he who had made the threats to be revenged for my husband's support of the parliament, though this was not the true cause of his lordship's enmity. The two had been fellow students at Oxford, and Ernest had accused Carbondale of cheating at cards. I feared that this enemy, with the king's permission, had taken my husband's life or had kept him a secret prisoner. I spent months trying to find a trace of him, but no trace could I find.

One day there came news from America that the English had taken from the Dutch the town of New Amsterdam and renamed it for the king's brother, the Duke of York. In the account of these proceedings mention was made of one Merivale. Could this be my husband? If so, what did it mean that he had gone to this new country, leaving me, his wife, in England, ignorant of his going? I believed that his enemies had contrived to have him sent out of the country or that he had been given the choice between death and betaking himself to a remote locality, where he could make no effort to regain his estate, which had passed into the possession of Lord Carbondale for services to the king's father during the parliamentary war. Possibly he might have fled thither, as certain regicides had done.

I saw no hope of learning the truth as to whether this Merivale mentioned as being in New York was my husband without going there to see for myself. So I took ship for that country, though my friends endeavored to dissuade me. I was sick at heart at seeing those with whom I would have to voyage for so many weeks, for they were a motley crew. Some were criminals, who had been given their lives and liberty provided they would go to the new continent. Some were broken down spendthrifts, and there were among these a sprinkling of the younger sons of gentlemen.

When I sailed up the bay to New York I saw that the country was beautiful. But the people proved uncouth—that is, they were living in conditions far different from what pertained to England. As soon as I had found an abiding place I began a search for the man I believed to be my husband; but, although there were few people in the town, I did not find him.

But one day I met a person who told me that he had knowledge of one Merivale, who had set out northward to engage in the trade of skins of wild animals. I was discouraged at this and began to think that I had been unwise in coming on so long a journey to find a husband who did not think it worth his while to inform me of his whereabouts. Moreover, my informant could not tell me what manner of man this person was, and he might not be my husband after all.

However, having come so far, I resolved to go further. I took passage in a sloop bound for a trading post on the west bank at the headwaters of Hudson's river, and reached it after a few days' travel. At this trading post, which is now called Albany, I made inquiries for the Merivale I had followed so far, only to learn that he was out trapping wild animals for their skins.

So I must needs wait for him to come in. While I waited I received a letter that had been brought by one who had come in a ship soon after I had left England and sent on to me at Albany, which informed me that it was believed my husband had been put on a ship by his enemies and sent to America, but the writer did not know for what port the vessel had sailed.

I was now encouraged to believe that the man I was looking for was my husband, though I could not understand how he could have contented himself to engage in an occupation instead of returning to me or sending for me. And yet, while making a living he might have written for me to come to him.

But this man for whom I waited did not return, and in time I learned that he inhabited a trapper's cabin near a town to the northward called Schenectady, where skins were brought in by the Indians. This town was not far distant, and I went over there with the next party that journeyed thither. As soon as I arrived I made inquiries and learned that a trapper named Merivale had built him a cabin on the bank across the Mohawk river, near the council grounds of the Indians.

By this time I had learned much self reliance and, securing the loan of a boat, I rowed myself across the river and directed my steps toward the cabin which had been pointed out to me from the opposite shore. As I left the boat a man came out of the cabin and stood looking down at me. He did not have the appearance of my husband, but as he advanced toward me there was something in his walk that set my heart wildly beating. As he came nearer I looked upon his features with a view to noting if I had seen him before, but they were covered with a thick beard and I could not be certain. When we came close together both stopped and peered into each other's faces. I was about to fall backward in a swoon when he sprang forward and caught me in his arms.

He was my Jamie.

Then and there he told somewhat of those things that had happened to him since we had parted.

When he heard of my marriage he resolved to join those who were going to America and bury himself where he would never again see me, and where he might make a more honorable living than on the road. From New York he had drifted to Albany and thence to a point nearer the grounds where furs were to be obtained.

I had set out from England to seek my husband and had found a lover whom I had discarded for that husband. And now I must return without either the husband or the lover. But Jamie knew what I did not know. He had received information which concerned us vitally. His cousin had not been sent to America, but had been made away with. Since Jamie was thus made the legal heir to the title and estates, which were entailed, Carbondale had hunted for him with a view to turning him over to the law to be dealt with as a highwayman. If he could secure his execution none would be left to dispute Carbondale's right to the property. But of all this Jamie had not heard till after his arrival in America.

There is much to tell of how in due time Jamie and I were married, how I returned to England and secured a pardon for him from the king and how Jamie followed me and eventually, as a favor to me, his estates were returned to him. But of this more at another time. We both lived to see the Duke of York as King James II. driven to France, and William and Mary proclaimed king and queen of England.

PORTER CHARLTON LIBERATED

Expects to Reach Father in Porto Rico to Spend Christmas.

New York, Nov. 22.—Porter Charlton, who on Oct. 25 in Como, Italy, was found guilty of the murder of his wife, has just been liberated by the Italian authorities and expects to return to this country in time to spend Christmas with his father in Porto Rico.

Charlton had an actual sentence of only twenty-nine days to serve, as under the Italian law his previous imprisonment, awaiting trial, was counted against the term of six years which was imposed.

Scene Painting.

In the past half century and more, especially since the improvement of the electric light, scene painting has become very elaborate and very expensive. Instead of being kept in its proper place as the decoration of the drama, as a beautiful acessory of the action, it has often been pushed to the front, so as to attract attention to itself and thereby to distract attention from the play which it was supposed to illuminate. Shakespeare has been smothered in scenery, and the art of the actor has been subordinated to the art of the scene painter.—Brander Matthews in Scribner's Magazine.

Phonetic Spelling.

Phonetic spelling was evidently in fashion in the sixteenth century, when even Shakespeare could not spell his own name consistently. There is a letter dug from the correspondence of a lady of the sixteenth century in the book of the "Cotswold Family"—the Hicks-Beaches. Juliana writes—it is a matter of debt between the cautious widow and "My lord a Kalder"—"My lord Ammarll and your wife I honour and love, but your false swearing and promise I hoterle a pore." What she really meant was "utterly abhor."—London Telegraph.

Fifty-fifty.

"Jinks gives his wife half his salary every week."

"And what becomes of the other half?"

"She still has to get that in the old way—out of the pockets of his trousers."—Richmond Times Dispatch.

QUARREL, REMORSE, DEATH AND SUICIDE

Father's Fatal Accident Causes Son to End Life.

MENOMINEE, MICH. — Albert Hagel, the man who was driven insane through remorse because he had a quarrel with his father who was shortly afterward killed by a fall and who was found dying in a Milwaukee rooming house on Jackson street as the result of his turning on the gas, was buried from his home at Devil's Creek, a short distance from here.

Mr. Hagel was at one time a prominent politician in Menominee. He was elected as a supervisor and it was during his term of office that he quarreled with his aged parent. The father, Julius, seventy-eight years old, then came here to visit with a daughter.

On the day that his son came to attend a meeting of the board of supervisors he put on a new pair of shoes and went out on the porch. He slipped and fell, broke his neck and died instantly.

This blow unsettled his son's mind and he was finally committed to the Newberry asylum. He was dismissed as cured and completed his term in office. But his trouble returned again and he went to Milwaukee, where he killed himself.

CLAIMS HE IS WRONG NEGRO

Man Who Shot Sam McGregor Defends Act—Denies Other Crimes.

MENOMINEE, MICH. — "I did not beat up Peter Fish and then shoot his son, Edward, when he tried to help his father," declared Jerome Wilson, the husky black man who instigated a reign of terror in the upper peninsula of Michigan Sunday night when he is supposed to have killed one, injured three, robbed a saloon and terrorized a girl.

He says that he was in Marinette, Wis., a few hours on Saturday, but that he was never in Powers, Mich., where the Fish home was raided by a black fiend. "I shot Sam McGregor," said the negro. "I was sitting in the L'Anse station with my shoes off, for my feet hurt. McGregor came in and pointed a gun at me. I thought he was going to rob me, so I shot three times. I guess I was a good shot."

IMPRISONED IN ROOM FOR TWELVE YEARS

Young Woman Loses Voice and Becomes Living Skeleton.

ASTON, MD. — So long isolated from mankind that she has lost the power of speech, Miss Grace Marshall, twenty-eight years old, is to be taught all over again how to talk. Physically a wreck and mentally unbalanced, the young woman has just been rescued after twelve years' imprisonment in the home of her father, Frank Marshall, a farmer near St. Michaels. During several years of that time, if not all, she was confined to a small, unventilated, unlighted and unheated room.

In spite of the fact that she had been reduced by imprisonment to a living skeleton of fifty-seven pounds; that she has forgotten how to talk, and almost how to think, Dr. Davidson said he believed she would live, and that her mind would respond to humane treatment. Her father and mother say they imprisoned her because she was insane.

Rockefeller, were discovered when four sticks of dynamite were found concealed within fifty feet of the building.

The explosive was wrapped in coarse yellow paper and around each of the four sticks was wound copper wire.

FLEET TO SHELL PORTS OF GREECE

Allies Decide On Drastic Measures With Constantine.

COMPLETE BLOCKADE PLANNED

Unfavorable Reply by Greek Ruler to Demands of Kitchener Will Bring Attack—Troops of Allies Continue to Land at Saloniki—Destructive Submarine Identified.

LONDON, ENG. — The complete commercial and economic blockade against Greece, it was learned here, was the first step taken by the allies to force compliance with the demand made by Earl Kitchener on King Constantine that Greece either join the allies, in accordance with her treaty obligations and promises, or demobilize her army at once.

The Greek cabinet has been again in session and the decision should be known soon.

Allied troops are still landing regularly at Saloniki and a large allied fleet is in that port ready for action if the Greek decision should force it.

Greece Is Given Ultimatum.

LONDON — Greece must disband its army or put it into the field on the allies' side.

This demand, says a Malta dispatch, has been presented to the Athens government. The information is not official, but the censor passed it. It is therefore accepted as accurate.

The entente powers do not insist that Greece fight in their interest, but they do require Greek assurances that they will not be interfered with in their Balkan campaign, that there will be no demand for their troops' withdrawal from Greek territory, and that no attempt will be made to intern them if they should be driven temporarily out of Serbia, Bulgaria, or Turkey back into Greece.

Their view is that Greece will be powerless to make such an attempt if its army is demobilized and its demobilization is the form they want the Greek guarantee to take.

Demand After Kitchener Visit.

The Malta dispatch does not tell the method in which the demands were given to the Greek government, but an Athens message to Reuter's Telegram company says that Earl Kitchener, British secretary for war, after an audience with King Constantine lasting more than an hour, conferred with Premier Skouloudis and then left Athens.

"The anxiety felt over the announcement of the allies' intention to bring pressure to bear on Greece in order to assure the unmolested passage of the allied troops through Greek territory in case such a course is necessary," adds the correspondent, "has been perceptibly allayed by Lord Kitchener's visit."

The dispatch adds that both the king and Kitchener were cheered by the people as they left the conference.

May Bring About Revolt.

If the Greek king fails to comply with the demands it is expected that the allies will resort to force at once. This will cause revolutionary uprisings in Greece, it is widely believed. There already have been disorders by the pro-allies in various districts.

INDIANA DOCTOR IS HEAD OF THIEF GANG

Charles W. Pagel, Greensburg, Also Paroled Convict.

SULLIVAN, IND. — With the announcement by the police that Dr. Charles Greensburg (Ind.) physician, has signed a typewritten confession covering nineteen pages, in which he admitted stealing automobiles in this vicinity, it is said that the fight to keep him and James Leonard of this city, an alleged accomplice, out of prison has been abandoned. Dr. Pagel confessed that he was the head of a gang that has been stealing automobiles in Indiana and Illinois cities, and that in the last three weeks he had sold seventeen stolen cars.

Both men, who are under parole from the state prison, are on their way to Michigan City, in charge of Augustus H. Knosman, a parole officer.

Pagel, whose license to practice medicine in Indiana was revoked recently, was arrested in Chicago a few days ago, charged with stealing an automobile belonging to William Hampke of Carlisle, Ind. He has been in prison for forgery.

POLITICAL POTS ALREADY BOILING

Preliminary Moves of 1916 Campaign Being Made.

REPUBLICANS SEEK HARMONY

Roosevelt's Probable Attitude Is Matter of Anxious Conjecture—Reunited Party, So Say Wiseacres, Is Only Thing That Can Defeat President Wilson.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Republican political pot is already boiling, all parts of the country being intensely interested in guesses as to what the next Republican convention will bring forth.

The attitude of Theodore Roosevelt in the coming campaign is the absorbing question here among Republican politicians of every faction. Will he assist in the selection and give his powerful support for victory or will he blast the hopes of party leaders through the opposition?

Colonel Roosevelt has given no intimation as to his course, and his closest friends are silent as the grave on the subject. But it is significant that the colonel has begun to counsel with his friends and something is expected from him soon.

Colonel's [illegible]

Of these facts there is little doubt: The colonel will not enter the primaries for the nomination.

He will not support a candidate selected by a Republican convention from among the standpat or reactionary element of the Republican party.

But can he be induced to harmonize with Republican leaders and factional differences, help in selecting a Republican candidate and throw his old-time vigor into a campaign in support of that candidate? That is what Republican leaders here of all factions and shades of Republican belief are hoping, and many of them will make important sacrifices to bring that condition about.

More and more forcibly it is being driven home to all Republican leaders that hope of Republican victory next fall lies in a unified party capable of giving enthusiastic support to the candidate named by the nominating convention. It is believed that such a candidate can put up a winning fight against President Wilson, who it is generally believed will be the Democratic standard-bearer.

Warning to Standpats.

"Wilson will be hard to beat," is the warning cry from New York, New England and the great voting states of the middle West, like Illinois, Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin. The warning gives caution against over-confidence, growing out of the belief that there will be a heavy loss to the Democratic ticket from German and Irish votes.

Republican leaders will not hazard a guess as to who may be the Republican standard-bearer. To many of them it seems that the man to be selected finally has not been named. Applying process of elimination used by all practical politicians they cannot see how either of the several candidates now before the Republican voters can get the nomination. At best each holds the position only of favorite son of his own state and some of them will have a contest to get this indorsement.

Roosevelt Not to Support Root.

NEW YORK — A close friend of Colonel Roosevelt told a reporter that there is no possibility that Colonel Roosevelt will support Elihu Root if Mr. Root is the Republican nominee for president next year. "The situation is just this," said this friend: "The Progressives will not support Mr. Root and Colonel Roosevelt will not support him because the Progressives will not."

SEASON HALF OVER; SLAIN DEER SCARCE

Dead Hunters Few; Game Officials Are Pleased.

LANSING, MICH. — With one-half of the regular open deer hunting season ended, state officials are more than pleased with the workings of the one-deer law passed by the 1915 legislature.

Based on reports received so far, the legal shipping of deer will be about 40 per cent of last year's record. This same 40 per cent applies also to the number of hunters. Deputy Game Wardens Ely and Gates, who have charge of the checking of the deer as they come south at the straits, report that up until Friday midnight 450 deer had crossed. This is just about 40 per cent of last year's record. At the same time 2,154 hunters had crossed going north, whereas at the same time last year the number was close to 5,000.

Game Warden Gates and his assistants are so far exultant over the new law. They think the small number of deer killed will help to pass a buck law, which the department was after in the last legislature but failed to get. Violations of the law are as numerous as ever, chiefly in the sections which class the alien as a non-resident. Several convictions on this charge have been secured as well as several for selling deer. Accidents have been reduced to a minimum. Two deaths—one of them [illegible] heart failure [illegible] the other where the hunter accidentally killed himself—have been reported. One man was struck in the hip by a stray bullet.

URGES BIG STATE EXHIBIT

General Fair Manager Dickinson Sends Letters to Executive Heads.

LANSING, MICH. — G. W. Dickinson, general manager of the Michigan state fair, has sent out letters to the executive heads of the various Michigan schools, colleges, reformatories and other institutions and departments, inviting them to make exhibits at the 1916 exposition. If sufficient acceptances are received, Mr. Dickinson plans to convert the second floor of the Automobile building into a hall for state exhibits exclusively. He is of the opinion that such displays will be of great benefit educationally as they will show to a great extent what the various state officials are doing for tax payers of Michigan.

Last September the Michigan Agricultural college, Michigan state prison, state dairy and food department and Michigan fish commission brought exhibits to the state fair and all attracted considerable attention.

LENAWEE'S COUNTY HOUSE

A committee of ladies from the Monday Club, together with the editor, paid a visit Wednesday afternoon to our county house and infirmary. The ladies took with them Thanksgiving baskets which had been provided by the club members. The baskets contained useful gifts, fruit, candy, etc., and the contents were distributed among the inmates.

We received a most cordial welcome from Mr. and Mrs. Young who allowed us to visit every nook and corner of the place, giving their time to assist and show us through.

A little over a year ago this county house was in the lime light. Articles setting forth the deplorable conditions to be found there appeared in the Adrian paper and in most of our county papers. We are not prepared to say how much of this was true but there is no doubt that some conditions existing there badly needed changing.

Our trip through the institution Wednesday did not reveal filth and in general conditions were much more wholesome than when we visited there a year ago. True the rooms were not carpeted and furnished with the comforts which we enjoy nor do most of these inmates require it. They are, however, clothed in plain, warm clothing and given plenty to eat. The building is equipped with a steam heating plant and each room is lighted with electricity. Bath rooms are provided and the inmates are required to keep themselves clean.

Evidently our board of supervisors thought something had to be done out there, for last year they built a building for a hospital. The building is separated somewhat from the main building and contains about 12 rooms. Here our county sick are taken care of. This hospital had two patients at the time of our visit. It is also equipped with bath rooms and lavatories.

We did not see any signs of the much talked of bed bug and Supt. Young stated that he would give anyone $1.00 for each bed bug they found in the building.

Some 60 or 70 people are cared for here, the larger proportion of them being women. They range in age from 6 to 94 years. We found a few possessed of a sound mind but nearly all are feeble minded and one entirely demented who should be in Kalamazoo. Imagine a full grown woman asking the ladies for a doll and when she received it was as happy as a child. Picture books would please them or some trinket to play with.

It is no easy task to care for such a family of unfortunates, to keep the building clean and also their charges. The most crying need in our county house today, in our opinion, is more help. The superintendent and his wife cannot do this work alone nor are these inmates capable of aiding much. Help should be provided whereby all inmates should receive the personal care they require and the building kept in order. We owe this to these poor unfortunates of our county.

The ladies of the Monday Club by their thoughtfulness have given these people a great deal of happiness and so added to their own Thanksgiving cheer.

THE ENTRANCE HALL.

Make It Suit Not Visitors, but the Occupants of the Home.

Is anything new to be said about the entrance hall? The smallest room in most houses, it is usually given in the plans an amount of attention that might seem out of all proportion to the rest of the house. And yet the ordinary entrance, whether it be a mere vestibule, a spacious hall of the colonial style or as in our present day fashions, a part of the living room set off by an archway, is quite unsatisfactory. It is unsatisfactory for this reason—that the entrance way is designed and decorated from the standpoint of the impression it makes on visitors, whereas the impression we should seek is not that made upon guests, but upon ourselves, the occupants of the house.

Too often we give the entrance a severe treatment that impresses the student of beauty or that amazes the less discriminating visitor by the other extreme of lavish display. But how does either of these two types of entrance affect those who come into the house many times every day, the good man and his good wife and their children? Is it a room that by its suggestion of rest and repose tempts one after a hard day's work at the office to drop into the first easy chair that comes along, or does it irritate the nerves and keep one going restless and uneasy, wandering from the entrance to the living room and from the living room to the study and thence to the attic by way of the basement?—Good Health.

Suppressing Swearing.

Profane as well as lewd oaths have been the subject of many parliamentary measures in England. No fewer than five separate bills having the prevention of swearing for their object were presented during the reign of James I., but it was not until 1623 that an enactment was finally carried defining and controlling the offense. In 1635 a public department was established to collect the fines enforced by this law. The officials of this department, of whom one was appointed in every parish, were allowed 2s. 6d in the pound on the money thus collected, and the balance was paid over to the bishop for the benefit of the deserving poor. These penalties ceased to be enforced after the restoration, but were revived by a statute of William and Mary and still further increased under George II.

Stinging Rebuke.

A society man said in Newport apropos of a current scandal:

"It reminds me of a very trenchant anecdote. A young married woman at a seashore hotel went up to a pretty girl in white who had been dancing like mad with the first one's husband and said:

FORMER SHOE MERCHANT DIES: INVALID 15 YEARS

Ambrose B. Clark, Who Retired Twenty Years Ago, Succumbs at the Age of 64 Years.

Nov. 17, 1915

Ambrose B. Clark, who twenty years ago was a well known shoe dealer of Elkhart—partner of his brother, the late Charles H. Clark—died at 10:45 o'clock this morning at his home 104 East boulevard, the former residence of the late Judge J. M. VanFleet.

Mr. Clark and his brother, who died January 5 1907, established a shoe store here in 1885, and conducted it about seven years. A. B Clark then lived fourteen years in Three Oaks, and returned to Elkart four years ago. He had been unable to work for fifteen years, the result of an attack of blood poisoning coupled with heart disease. For the last five weeks he had been confined to his bed, and on Tuesday became unconscious.

Mr. Clark was a member of the Elkhart tent of the Knights of the Maccabees.

Surviving Mr. Clark are his wife, Ida Petit Clark, to whom he was married here on April 9, 1890, and four sons—Brewster, Charles and Clyde Clark of Detroit and Arthur Clark of Elkhart, who, with his bride, lives in the parental home. The first two mentioned are sons of Mr. Clark's former marriage. In addition, there is a brother, William Clark of Britton, Mich., and two sisters living in Michigan towns. Mr. Clark's birth took place at Raisinville, Mich., on May 3, 1851. —Elkhart Review

THE NARROW BOSPORUS.

At Its Greatest Width It Measures Only 9,838 Feet.

The Bosporus contains few dangerous submarine rocks or shoals. The locality of these few is indicated by lighthouses or buoys. The water is only slightly tinged with salt and is marvelously clear. The sands, glittering apparently near the surface, may be twenty feet below.

On a map, of whatever scale, each of those familiar straits, which cleave lands and continents asunder, seems hardly more than a silvery thread. Yet as one sails over their famous waters the opposing shores on either hand sometimes appear far away. The strait of Gibraltar, which wrests Africa from Europe, is sixteen miles wide: that of Messina, forcing its way between Italy and Sicily, is from two to twelve; that of Bonifacio, which, like a blade of steel, cuts Corsica and Sardinia apart, is seven miles in width at its most contracted point; even the Dardanelles expands from over one to four.

But the illusion as to distance created by the map is reality as to the Bosporus. Off Buyoukdereh, where it attains its largest breadth, its hemmed in waters broaden to only 9,838 feet, or about one and four-fifths miles. Between Roumeli Hissar and Anadoli Hissar they shrink to one-sixth of these dimensions, or to 1,641 feet.—From "Constantinople," by Edwin A. Grosvenor.

THE MUDDY MISSOURI.

How the River Lowers the Surface of the Land It Drains.

The Missouri is the muddiest river in the Mississippi valley. It carries more silt than any other large river in the United States except possibly the Rio Grande and the Colorado. For every square mile of country drained it carries downstream 381 tons of dissolved and suspended matter each year. In other words, the river gathers annually from the country that it drains more than 123,000,000 tons of silt and soluble matter, some of which it distributes over the flood plains below to form productive agricultural lands but most of which finds its way at last to the gulf of Mexico.

It is by means of data of this kind that geologists compute the rate at which the lands are being eroded away. It has been shown that the Missouri river is lowering the surface of the land drained by it at the rate of 1 foot in 6,036 years. The surface of the United States as a whole is now being worn down at the rate of 1 foot in 9,120 years.

It has been estimated that if this erosive action of the streams of the United States could have been concentrated on the isthmus of Panama it would have dug in seventy-three days the canal which was completed after ten years' work with the most powerful appliances yet devised by man.—Geological Survey Bulletin.

Old Soldiers at Fair.

General Manager Dickinson announces that the old soldiers will be invited to attend the State Fair again this year, and one day will be set aside for the veterans of the civil war. Tents will be provided, where the veterans of the conflict may convene and discuss old times.

Stereoscopic Surveying.

There is in use a stereoscopic method of photographic surveying. Photographs are taken at two points with a surveying camera, the plates being exposed in the vertical plane passing through both stations. The developed plates, or positives from them, being then placed in a stereoscopic measuring machine that combines the pictures, a brief calculation gives the exact position of any desired point. The effective range of the instrument is put at about five miles and the method is said to be of particular advantage in mapping large areas of mountainous country.

WHISPERING GALLERIES.

Old World Churches With Remarkable Acoustic Properties.

The most celebrated whispering gallery is that which surrounds the base of the interior of the dome of St. Paul's cathedral, London. A person speaking near its surface can be heard distinctly by one listening near the smooth wall at the other extremity of the diameter, but not elsewhere.

In the cathedral of Gloucester a whispering passage leads from one aisle to the opposite behind the east window of the choir. It is seventy-five feet long, six and a half feet high and three feet wide in the form of half an irregular octagon. The walls and ceilings are of freestone, and the slightest whisper travels from end to end.

The cathedral of the Taj Mahal in Agra, India, has most marvelous echoes and reverberating qualities, but is scarcely a whispering gallery. The whole cathedral of Girgenti, in Sicily, has this character owing to the peculiar structure of its walls. These remarkable properties also belonged to the "Ear of Dionysius," cut in the rock at Syracuse in the shape of a parabolic curve, ending in an elliptical arch. It is said that the tyrant seated in a small chamber over a hundred feet from the spot occupied by his captives by this means could hear every word spoken by his prisoners.—London Answers.

If Animals Could Speak.

It is a startling fact that if some animals could tell their life history they would be able to recall events which happened hundreds of years ago. A Russian eagle, for instance, would be able to remember watching with greedy eyes as one by one the French soldiers under Napoleon fell exhausted out of the ranks in their awful retreat from Moscow in 1812. There are crocodiles alive in India today which saw the first English traveler set foot there, while there are whales in the sea which may have skirted the coast of France when it was invaded in 1415. A great many elephants could recall historical events of a hundred years ago, while there are ravens still living whose memory could go back twice that period.—London Answers.

Plenty of Room.

The young man who writes verses was standing out in the night gazing at the sky when a friend ran across him.

"What are you doing—studying astronomy?"

"Go away and don't disturb me. I am gazing into infinite distance."

"I don't see what satisfaction you find in that."

"That's because you never had any experience with editors. You don't know what a comfort it is to find some place where nothing is crowded out for lack of space."—London Tit-Bits.

The Colossus of Rhodes.

The remains of the Colossus of Rhodes have been dispersed beyond possibility of recovery or even of tracing. It stood for little more than half a century and then, in 224 B. C., was overthrown by an earthquake. The Rhodians raised from benevolent outsiders large sums of money for its restoration, but divided the fund among themselves, asserting that the oracle of Delphi had forbidden them to set it up again. So there the ruin lay until 672 A. D., when the Saracens sold it to a Jewish merchant, who loaded 900 camels and went away—literally—with the brass.—London Spectator.

A Cruel Comparison.

"I don't make much," said the fond suitor. "My salary is $30 a week. Could we live on that, dear?"

"Ah," sighed the maiden dreamily, "just the price of a tire for father's motorcar."

Then something told the f. s. that he was wasting time.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Engaged.

Stranger (impatiently)—Say, isn't that newspaper to be had yet? I've been waiting for it for two hours. Waitress—I'll see about it. Farmer Cross has it in the side room. He's teaching his little boy to read.—Fliegende Blatter, Munich.

And So It Is.

"What do you consider the greatest human paradox?"

A secret session of a woman's club."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Friends are lost by calling often and calling seldom.—Swift.

LIFE AND LONGEVITY.

Simply Prolonging One's Days on Earth Is Not Real Living.

What really constitutes life? Is it action, or is it merely existence? Who is the more useful, the man who gives his all in energy to service or he who conserves his forces and thereby prolongs his days? He lives most who accomplishes most. Activity in useful, productive or constructive effort is the real test of life. Length of years may content some, but restless, energetic souls will press forward, regardless of time, striving for a goal they may never attain, but always striving, and these only really live.

Life insurance presidents, being interested in the prolongation of existence of risks, bend their efforts to the teaching of elements of living, the avoidance of excesses, exposures or unnecessary risks of any kind and in this way really serve the world because they increase the productive years of man.

As a result of modern methods man really lives longer and better, but this is not the all in all of life. To live is to be active, to have a part in the creative effort of mankind, regardless of whether the span be long or short, so long as it is busy, for "an end is an end, whether it cometh on the winged heels of a week or the dull stretch of a century."—Omaha Bee.

STRUGGLES OF AN ARTIST.

Story of the Peasant Painter Millet and "The Angelus."

It was only after long years of struggle and dire poverty, through which Millet was consoled and supported by his wife, that the peasant painter was able to take the three roomed cottage at Barbizon and "try to do something really good."

It was then that he began to paint that most beautiful poem of poverty, "The Angelus," which is today one of the most valuable pictures in the world. Again and again he threw aside the picture in despair of ever finishing it to his satisfaction, and as often his wife replaced it on the easel and induced him to continue.

On one occasion he was so incensed at not being able to produce a certain effect that he seized a knife and would have destroyed the canvas and ended the matter once for all had not his wife fortunately seized his hand and induced him to give the picture another trial.

Thus it was that at last "The Angelus" found a place on the walls of the Louvre. The success it won encouraged Millet to paint many more pictures and thus place himself among the immortals in art.

A Sign of Rain.

An east side girl says she has come upon an infallible weather indicator. She can tell if it is going to rain without even glancing at the sky or casting her eyes over the weather forecasts in the daily papers. And it's the simplest thing in the world—just the disappearance of all umbrellas in sight.

"Umbrellas are perfectly safe in our office up to twenty-four hours before a storm," said she, explaining. "You can leave them anywhere. Even the pearl and gold handled ones are immune from abstraction. Indeed, one can hardly chase them away. So if I want to know the weather for a day ahead I must glance at the umbrella racks. If I find them becoming empty I make a bee line for the best rain shade of those that are left and make all other necessary plans for rain."—Columbus Dispatch.

"MR. BOB" REPEATED

By request, the seniors of the T. H. S. presented their play "Mr. Bob" for the second time Tuesday evening at the Universalist church.

That the fame of this two act production had been spread abroad in Tecumseh was proven by the fact that nearly every seat in the church was occupied and as our local stars progressed in their work they were interrupted frequently by applause.

This little band of seven students showed some real talent in dramatic art. There was a lot of hard work in preparing this play and a great deal of credit is due to those who took part as in no place during the whole performance was there a hesitation by any performer in their lines and the acting showed the effect of good coaching.

The cast was as follows:

Jenkins, the butler.......Jason Meade
Miss Rebecca Luke..Margaret Rubadou
Patty her maid......Camilla Hayden
Katherine Rogers, her neice..Ruth Kotts
Philip Rayson, her nephew..
J. Gordon Bachman
Marian Bryan, Katherine's friend,..
Winnifred Mitchell
Robert Brow, a law clerk..
Burton Garlinghouse

The cast was all good, those deserving especial mention were: Camilla Hayden, Margaret Rubabou and Burton Garlinghouse. We understand that the senior class netted between $25.00 and $30.00 from their entertainment.

RECEPTIVE CANDIDATES

Mr. Taft, judicially: Well—let me see- I'm not quite free,
To choose the one I like the best.
It's such a task, if you should ask,
So compromise—forget the rest."

Mr. Wilson, coyly: "We public men must be discreet,
As any one should know,
But, 'twixt the two, I think 'twere meet
For me to stand 'neath the mistletoe."

Mr. Burton, learnedly: Go take this little tip and raise
The noise as far as Rio,
You need—I might suggest the praise—
A president from Ohio."

Mr. Roosevelt, belligerently: "Avast! Away! What's this I hear???
These men? You're simply mad!!!
There's but ONE man for president,
And that man's ME, by Gad!!!!"

The Public, plaintively: "I wonder if
I am supposed,
To be a party to it?
It seems to be Cut our for me
To stand and simply view it."

DO YOUR VERY BEST.

Be Earnest and Thorough and You Are Bound to Succeed.

There is a feature of Dickens' character which cannot be too often or too seriously insisted upon, and that is his intense earnestness and thoroughness in everything he did. He said to me more than once:

"My dear boy, do everything at your best. If you do that neither I nor any one else can find fault with you, even if you fail. For myself, I can honestly say that I have taken as great pains with the smallest thing I ever did as with the biggest."

In giving advice to a young author he said on one occasion:

"If you want your public to believe in what you write you must believe in it yourself. When I am describing a scene I can as distinctly see what I am describing as I can see you now. So real are my characters to me that on one occasion I had fixed upon the course which one of them was to pursue. The character, however, got hold of me and made me do exactly the opposite to what I had intended, but I was so sure that he was right and I was wrong that I let him have his own way."

Whatever he did either in work or at play he always gave of his very best. He hated slackness or half heartedness in any shape or form.—Harper's Weekly.

ODDITIES OF VISION.

Peculiar Optical Effects and the Yellow Spot in the Eye.

If one places a pinhead up close to and directly in front of the eye the head of the pin appears transparent and things may be seen as easily through it as through a sheet of isinglass, the head appearing simply as a misty round cloud. If it is placed somewhat closer no pin or head can be seen at all.

If one goes into a very dark room and puts a lighted candle near the side of one eye very pretty and peculiar effects are observed. A tracery, forming a regular network, can be easily detected, and this is merely the shadow thrown by the candle on the retina of the eye of the small capillary blood vessels between the retina and the candle.

If one looks to the side of a dim star in the heavens the star appears a great deal brighter than direct vision makes it appear. This is because the light in the direct view falls on what is known as the "yellow spot" or point of keenest vision. As this is not put directly behind the front of the eye the side glance is necessary. Some people can see stars that way that they cannot perceive at all on direct vision.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

RANGE FOR CHICKS.

The problem of supplying a range or green feed for chicks does not receive sufficient attention. This is an important side of the proper rearing of poultry, and the farmer who has sour skimmilk or buttermilk to spare and a good green range has more than half his chick problem solved.

For temporary feeding one can soak oats overnight in water, wash them thoroughly next morning and spread them in half inch layers in boxes or trays. Place these trays in the shade outdoors and sprinkle with water twice daily. In from three to six days the oats will be ready for feeding. For baby chicks feed when the sprouts are one-half inch long, giving once daily what the chicks will eat in about ten minutes.

Rape may be sown and when grown cut up and fed to chicks. Cabbage, lettuce, mangels, beets and turnips can also be used for green feed.—Colorado Experiment Station.

SOMETHING DOING

Williamson Bros. supplied over fifty thousand pounds of turkeys for the Thanksgiving market besides an equal number of pounds of ducks, geese and chickens. A force of buyers were kept busy and at the plant some 25 men were employed preparing the poultry for the market. The last few weeks have been busy ones and next comes Christmas with its demand for the same.

NO MORE BACKACHE NO MORE MISERY

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides or have any signs of kidney or bladder trouble such as rheumatic pains, puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired and run-down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Solvax will quickly and surely relieve you of your misery.

Solvax is the most potent remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such troubles. It neutralizes, dissolves and makes the kidneys sift out all the uric acid and poisons left by the blood, and renders the kidneys and urinary organs clean, vigorous healthy.

C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist, say that no medicine ought to be paid for unless it does the user some good. They therefore sell Solvax under a positive guarantee to quickly relieve the worst cases of kidney trouble or refund the money. Try Solvax today and if you cannot see and feel a decided change for the better just go to C. A. Wright & Son and tell them you want your money back and they will return it without question. This is the strongest argument that can be offered in behalf of any medicine. adv

THE UNIVERSE.

Our Own Stellar System and What May Be Beyond It.

In one of the latest conceptions of astronomers the stellar universe has a diameter of 10,000 to 15,000 light years, with a thickness of 2,000 to 3,000, and our sun has a place a little removed from the center. It embraces 30,000,000 to 50,000,000 stars within the range of telescopic visibility, with dark and invisible bodies whose number cannot be computed.

So far as can be determined the stars are surprisingly uniform in mass, the range of variation being not more than fiftyfold, but in density the range is from more than twice that of the sun to only one-millionth and in absolute luminosity or brightness from 8,000 times that of the sun to about one three-thousandth. The temperature rises from near absolute zero in the nebulae to 20,000 degrees C. in certain giant hot stars.

It is suggested that our universe may be not the only one and that the small Magellanic cloud, for instance, perhaps 80,000 light years distant, may be a relatively small universe of about 1,000 light years in diameter.

Another separate star system at similar distance is possibly, astronomers hold, the Andromeda nebula.—Newark News.

GEOLOGIC PERIODS.

Stories of Time Told by Fossilized Plants and Animals.

Scientists hesitate to estimate geological time in terms of years. Such estimates have, however, been made, and one published by Professor Charles Schuchert in 1910 states that about 12,000,000 years have elapsed since the close of the carboniferous age, an age, as the name suggests, in which great deposits of carbon, in coal, were being formed in many parts of the world. This age has been divided by geologists into the Mississippian, Pennsylvanian and Permian epochs, of which the Mississippian is the oldest and the Permian the youngest. The Pennsylvanian epoch alone is estimated by Schuchert to have covered 2,160,000 years, and animal life is supposed to have existed on the earth for over 14,000,000 years before that time.

Geologic periods are recognized primarily by the animals and plants that lived in them, so that the study of fossils plays a very real and important part in the progress of geologic knowledge.

Rocks of carboniferous age, as shown by their fossils, have a wide distribution in the United States, and they are apt to abound in these remains of plant and animal life. The fossil shells which are found in them, however, may vary greatly from point to point, because the animals they represent lived in different periods of geologic time or in different regions in the carboniferous ocean.—Argonaut.

Languages.

The principal languages of the world are listed in order as follows: English, spoken by more than 150,000,000 people; German, more than 120,000,000; Russian, more than 90,000,000; French, more than 60,000,000; Spanish more than 55,000,000; Italian, more than 50,000,000, and Portuguese, more than 30,000,000. These seven are the principal languages of Europe and America. There are said to be 3,424 spoken languages or dialects in the world—1,624 in America, 937 in Asia, 587 in Europe and 276 in Africa. Among other important languages are the Chinese, Japanese, Scandinavian branches, Slavonic speeches and dialects and the various languages of India, Persia, Arabia and modern Greece.

A Poor Present.

A wounded soldier explained his grievance to his nurse.

"You see, old Smith was next me in the trenches. Now, the bullet that took me in the shoulder and laid me out went into 'im and made a bit of a flesh wound in his arm. Of course I'm glad he wasn't 'urt bad. But he's stuck to my bullet and given it his girl. Now, I don't think that's fair. I'd a right to it. I'd never give a girl o' mine a second 'and bullet."—Exchange.

TONNAGE OF A VESSEL.

Just What It Is and the Methods by Which It Is Measured.

To find the tonnage or displacement of a ship is rather puzzling. The tonnage of a ship is the measure of its cubical or carrying capacity expressed in tons. At the present time there are four methods in use of expressing the tonnage of a ship, known respectively as the gross tonnage, the net register tonnage, the deadweight tonnage and the displacement tonnage.

In calculating the gross tonnage the whole interior capacity of the ship below the tonnage deck is found, including that of all covered in spaces on deck used for stowage, and the result in cubic feet is divided by 100.

The net register tonnage is the gross tonnage minus all the spaces used for the accommodation of the crew and instruments and the working parts of the ship. It is on the net register tonnage that almost invariably dues are paid.

The deadweight tonnage is the measure of the exact amount of cargo that a ship can carry without sinking too deep in the water.

The displacement tonnage is the space occupied by the ship in the water. The amount of water displaced by a ship is, of course, equal in weight to the ship and all it contains. As one ton is equal to thirty-five cubic feet of water, the displacement tonnage is found by dividing the number of cubic feet of water displaced by thirty-five when the ship is immersed up to its draft or load line.—London Standard.

Sit down and think it over. See whether you can afford to go on half sick.

The Cotton Net on New Handkerchiefs.

Sheer linen lawn is the material of which most of the handkerchiefs are made with the exception of the glove handkerchiefs, and they are usually made of crepe de chine. Cotton net or tulle forms the border band on which is gathered a plaited frill of the net, one inch wide. So it would seem that the frill has invaded even the realm of mouchoirs. Linen lawn in rose, straw and blue with rounded corners are the handkerchiefs that boast the net or tulle frill. Square corners are reserved for those with the hemstitched finish.

The Signal Of the Rose

A Girl Who Had Everything She Wanted

By AGNES G. BROGAN

David Bourne turned from the wild commotion of the "pit," with its babel of high keyed voices, and passed out into the morning sunshine. "So old Richards has won again." Failure seemed a word unknown to this wizard in the world of finance. How did he do it? What "god of fortune" waited upon this great speculator, giving him infallibly the proper cue? And what new extravagance would this later victory bestow upon Paula—Paula, the daughter of whom her father so proudly boasted, "She shall have everything she wants?"

"The girl who has everything she wants," Bourne thought of her now as he strode along, and an inner light passed over his features, erasing all weariness. It had been a mistaken kindness upon the part of the doting father, carrying out this humble clerk in his employ to spend delightful days at his famous home on the Hudson. Had it been an intentional kindness, David wondered gloomily, or merely the insatiable desire of the man to impress another with his greatness? And the daughter, who was beautiful, had also been kind. David pictured her now moving with a sort of stately dignity, her little dusky head held high, her rare and radiant smile. And she had done justice to the generous advantage of her training; her touch upon the piano was a joy, her voice a charm to be remembered.

David sighed abruptly. "The girl who has everything she wants." He recalled half bitterly the luxury of her surroundings, the rich draperies which clung about her slender figure, the little jeweled fingers—Paula Richards, only daughter of the king of finance—and he, David Bourne, loved her. Sometimes he had fancied a tenderness in the girl's eyes upraised to his, a wistfulness answering to his own unspoken longing. But David put these dreams resolutely from him. He even laughed contemptuously as he squared his shoulders.

"You poor simpleton!" he breathed. Still it was growing—the little hoard in the bank—growing, oh, so slowly, with such painful self sacrificing, with almost hopeless desperation. Yet there were times when the hopelessness vanished, and David smoked on in subdued excitement as he planned his one plunge, his first venture in the pit of the Stock Exchange. And if he were successful, if he could follow the lead of his great employer, if his money should come back increased a hundredfold, why, then she might be his and still continue to be "the girl who had everything she wanted." Until then he must worship at her feet as long as she should be kind.

She met him that evening with her usual sweet gravity. He had always admired this pretty seriousness, lightened by her rare smile. Tonight the smile seemed more rare than ever. She glanced at him with concern.

"You are tired," said Paula, "or troubled."

David laughed shortly. "Troubled, I think," he replied. "Will you play for me?"

With her characteristic understanding the girl seated herself at the piano. Throughout the "Love Symphony" he wondered wildly if a millionaire's daughter might not possibly find happiness in a small apartment, if romance might not be made to atone for the absence of a retinue of servants, if and if— A song of Caruso's brought him back to the opera and Paula there in her father's box, with her the people of her kind.

"Paula!" he cried abruptly. The girl quietly arose and stood before him. David pointed a tentative finger at the diamonds upon her hands. "You love those things?" he asked.

"Why, of course," she answered, wondering. "I love everything beautiful." She smiled at the roses upon her breast. "I cover myself with roses, and I cover myself with jewels."

"And you may have for the wishing anything which money can buy?"

Paula nodded. "Yes," she said.

David jumped to his feet. "If I could say that," he cried, "I'd be the happiest man in the world!"

Her voice came to him softly. "Is there something, then, that you wish for so very much?"

He laughed shakily. "The moon, I think," said David.

"And," she persisted, "would money purchase this particular 'moon of yours'?"

"Perhaps not," he answered, "but it would at least give me a chance to try." Passionately he swung around upon her. "I'm quite mad tonight, Paula," he said tensely. "You and your music have sent me up into a fool's paradise of hope. I want to tell you something, not of my love for you; you have always known that. Your father's success has got into my blood. I've thought that if I could make one deal like his today I'd dare to voice the longing that's consuming my heart. I have been able to save a little money, and—and I'm going to make a plunge. If by any glorious chance it should win out I'll try again and again. If it doesn't"—David paused—"then I'll say goodby to you a little sooner. That's all."

Paula motioned him to a seat at her side. Her eyes had taken on a strange, calculating glint, which reminded Bourne forcibly of her father. When she spoke her tone was calm and impersonal, like his.

"If you succeed," she asked, "do you intend to ask me to marry you?" David nodded dumbly. "Then," she went on, "I am naturally interested. You have heard my oft given name, 'The girl who has everything she wants.' You will first understand that I wish to keep that name."

David was conscious of a keen thrill of disappointment. "I am merely honest," the girl nodded, with a smile to remove the sting from her words. "So," she continued hastily, "I ask a favor. Will you let me give you a 'tip' before you make this plunge? I mean," she replied to his look of amazement, "to get information from my father which I shall immediately pass on to you." An inscrutable smile played about the girl's lips. "Old man Richards cannot fail," she quoted.

David stared, wondering that the knowledge that she wished him to win should be so unpleasantly overwhelmed by the fact of her shrewd plan. "A balcony runs across one end of the exchange," she went on. "Father and I shall be there. You must stand beneath, and at the psychological moment"— A flush of excitement dyed her cheeks; her eyes shone. "I shall drop a red rose," she said. "And I," David answered slowly, "shall stake my all at the falling of that rose." Paula held her hands out to him. "If you are honest in your wish for the moon," she smiled, "you must trust me."

"Trust you I will. Now tell me what is your tip. Am I to sell short or long? What is the security to be put up or down? Is it to be manipulated by a pool or an individual?"

"I don't know what you mean by all this," replied Paula, "though I have heard father talk about 'pools' and 'squeezing the shorts' and all such unintelligible things. I only know that I asked him as a favor to me to tell me where there was a chance to make some money and how to proceed. He has told me to sell M. O. P. What that is I don't know."

"I do. Goodby." And he turned to go.

Impulsively she followed him to the door. "And, remember, if by chance my signal should fail"—she paused breathlessly—"well, I'm like my father," said Paula. "I'm 'game.' I'll marry you to atone."

"Marry him!" With a contradictory sense of joy and pain David went homeward through the night. When at her hasty summons he stood again in the "pit," the hurrying messengers, the darting, uncanny figures on the walls, seemed all part of a dream. Paula alone was real, Paula in the balcony with a crimson rose at her breast. With fixed intensity he watched her face, forgetting to return her smile. A moment's cessation in the babel seemed like the sudden silence preceding a storm; then swiftly, noiselessly, a red rose fell at his feet. An instant it lay crushed and fragrant. David was calling wildly for a messenger. Blindly his pencil flew across the paper, and here in the tiny folded scrap were the tireless savings of years.

When he looked up again she was gone. Like one dazed, he rushed through the streets. "Old man Richards cannot fail," he repeated, "and tomorrow—tomorrow"— When "tomorrow" came he sat before his humble desk in the great man's office. Beneath David's eyes were the dark circles of a sleepless night. About his mouth were lines which had not been there yesterday. Mechanically he reached for the telephone; then the blood surged to his face. "Yes," he answered, with difficulty, "I recognize your voice, Miss Richards, but I fear that the engagement for this evening must be canceled. You are aware, of course, that the signal failed, the signal of the rose." And Paula replied evenly, "I would like to see you, David, and shall expect you tonight at 8."

There was a bright happiness about the girl's greeting which, in face of his great disappointment, caused David's heart to contract painfully.

"The signal failed," he said dully. "Do you suppose that your father suspected your purpose and sought to frustrate it?"

Paula's eyes met his steadily. "I deliberately acted against my father's advice," she told him. "I gave you the only signal which could be the right signal, if you wanted me."

With unexpected passion she threw out her hands. "Do you think," she cried, "that I wanted you to be drunk with the wine of triumph, to win and go on winning money until you became the hard thing that he has become? Do you think that I want to live through the life that my mother found too hard to bear? Do you think that I could be satisfied forever with mere 'things' purchased for me by a love which had turned to a 'love of gain?'" Her voice broke tremulously. "The girl who has everything she wants," she mocked, "when all my life I have wanted the one thing which money can't buy!"

"Paula," David began, his voice hushed in the presence of this unbelievable joy, "surely it could not be right for me to accept your great sacrifice."

From the coils of her hair came tumbling a flower to rest there at his feet. Laughing, she raised her eyes to his. "Oh, don't you see," cried Paula, "it's your signal, David—a crimson rose!"

Then very tenderly and very reverently the man took her into his arms.

"I've a bone to pick with you." "Pardon me, sir, that's impossible. I'm a strict vegetarian."—Punch.

The United States has made clear its position to Germany. In words that cannot be misunderstood this nation has said that it intends to enforce its neutral rights. If the situation of Germany is unfavorable under current international law this country is in no way to blame. To raise the standards of international law, to change practices under that law to meet any specific injustice, would be unneutral. If changes could be made now for good they could also be made for evil. The protection of all nations, belligerents as well as neutrals, lies in following the existing international law.

It would also be unneutral to enforce neutral rights as against Germany while leaving them unenforced as against Great Britain. Such a course would leave the United States open to the accusation by unfriendly powers of using neutrality as a cloak for actual partnership, something unthinkable, of course.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

PERFUME OF MUSK.

The Odor Is Penetrating Because the Substance Is Radio-active.

The extraordinarily penetrating power of musk perfume is accounted for by the fact that it is radio-active. The United States consul at Chunking, China, writes that this property causes the odor to be carried through the air in a way that would otherwise be impossible. And he adds that this radio-active property "affects most peculiarly the natives who carry it. If it is held close to the body for any length of time it produces sores that are probably similar in character to those caused by pure radium."

Musk is a secretion of certain glands or pouches of the male musk deer and is secreted only during certain seasons of the year. It is difficult to obtain pure, and one of the largest French manufacturers of perfume keeps a representative at Tachienlu, near the Tibetan border, for the sole purpose of buying it.

Three thousand pounds of musk on an average are shipped every year from Chunking, and fully half of this has passed through Tachienlu, which is one of the principal musk markets of the world, though eighteen days' journey from Chunking, the nearest port.

The deer, which are seldom more than three feet long and twenty to twenty-two inches tall, are being slaughtered in such numbers that they are becoming more and more scarce and will eventually be extinct.

NAB TREASURER AND FORMER ASSISTANT

Grand Rapids Men Asked to Explain Peculiar Transaction.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 29.—City Treasurer James S. Hawkins and former Deputy City Treasurer Williard H. Olmstead were arrested again on a joint charge of embezzlement of municipal funds.

The warrant was based on information furnished to Prosecutor Bernard by Auditor George M. Patterson. Both demanded examinations, which were set for December 14. The complaint charges that Hawkins and Olmstead conspired to take from the city treasury money which belonged to the city, and that in September, 1913, $171.67, which had been paid to the city by W. A. Bellamy for a tax title, was not paid into the depository.

Hawkins and Olmstead, when arraigned, insisted that they knew nothing of that transaction and that it would unquestionably be cleared up as the work of auditing the city books progressed. Both asserted they were innocent of any wrong-doing.

CAMPAIGN IN SERBIA ENDS

Germans State They Have Attained Their Object.

NOW IN TOUCH WITH TURKEY

Remnants of Serbian Army Reported as Fleeing Into Mountains, Having Left 100,000 Soldiers as Prisoners to the Enemy and Having Sustained Great Loss of War Material.

London, Nov. 29.—The Austro-German-Bulgarian operations against Serbia, which were begun on Oct. 6, when Austro-German armies crossed the Drina, the Save and the Danube, have been completed, according to the official German statement issued at Berlin. The German object, the establishment of communications with Bulgaria and Turkey, has been attained.

The remnants of the Serbian army are reported to be fleeing into the mountains of Albania. Over 100,000 Serbian prisoners of war are claimed by the Germans, while the losses of the Serbians in dead and wounded are not estimated. Their losses in war material are described as "incalculable."

French and British forces continue to disembark at Saloniki and the French line in the southeastern corner of Serbia is still holding its positions. With the completion of their operations against Serbia, the Austro-German-Bulgarian forces, according to Rome dispatches, are now preparing to turn their attention to Roumania and to the Russian army, which is reported to be massing on the Danube for an invasion of Bulgaria through that country.

A dispatch from Rome telling of the preparations being made by the central powers against Roumania and the Russian Balkan army, says:

"Roumania has made an evasive reply to Russia's notification that her troops are concentrated in Bessarabia for the purpose of going to the aid of Serbia. The Roumanian answer implies that protests will be made against the crossing of Roumanian territory by these forces but that no active opposition to their transit will be made.

"As a result of the Roumanian position, Austro-German troops from Serbia are being rushed to Rustchuk, on the Bulgarian bank of the Danube, while Bulgarian forces are being concentrated along the lower Danube.

"Roumania opposed the concentration of the Austro-German forces on her frontier and has now declared the Danube and both its banks to be a zone of war, thus putting the river in the hands of the military authorities, and has massed troops on her Bulgarian and Hungarian frontiers withdrawing the troops on the Russian frontier for the purpose."

AEROPLANES FIGHT BATTLE

Conflict Rages Over Belgian Territory and Above the Ocean.

One of the German motor boats was sunk in this combat.

One of the victims, name also unknown, was shot in the back as he knelt in prayer beside his bed. The others were killed while asleep.

The victims include a prosperous dairy farmer, Samuel Weitzsmann, and his wife, their daughter and son-in-law, and two farm hands. One of the latter was the slayer. He was found dead with a revolver in his hand. He had been employed at the farm only a month.

MANY PULL FOR PREPAREDNESS

Two Conventions in Chicago Sound the Tocsin.

WISH UNCLE SAM TO BE READY

National Security League and Local Committee Both Wish Country to Be on Guard—Sweeping Policy for Active Campaign Is Mapped Out fo. Each.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—The National Security league—without specific criticism of President Wilson, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, or Secretary of War Garrison—demands immediate and adequate national defense.

Its plans of campaign, to be carried directly to congress in January, was formulated in resolutions adopted at the end of the first national conference at Hotel La Salle.

Make Public Plan.

The resolutions call for making public all plans of the general staffs for army and navy increases, a complete defense program, full development of the personnel of the navy, and the creation of a mobile army "sufficient to repel any expeditionary force," with an ample reserve army, and a system of training the unorganized men of military age.

By intimation, the announced plans of the president for national defense are set aside as unsatisfactory. The entire idea of the conference, carried through the committee reports and the debates that preceded the adoption of the resolutions, was that the administration suggestions are tremendously inadequate and unworthy of the United States.

Prominent Men Attend.

Some of the best known men of the nation participated in the conference during the day and at the banquet at night.

Some of the more conspicuous included former Governor Van Sant of Minnesota, Governor Philipp of Wisconsin, Victor Rosewater of Omaha, Bishop Burke of the Catholic dioceses of western Missouri; Mayor Fuhrmann of Buffalo, N. Y.; former Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson, former Governor Richard Yates of Illinois, Governor Dunne, and many Chicago men.

Dissension threatened to interfere with harmonious action. It was obvious that a large majority of the delegates disapproved the Wilson program, but there was a general reluctance to express outright disapproval of the nation's head.

To Unite Chicago Sentiment.

A campaign to crystalize public sentiment in Chicago for national military and naval preparedness was inaugurated by the organization of the Chicago committee on national defense.

Thirty members of the committee, which is composed of 100 of the city's leading business and professional men, met in the Hotel LaSalle and discussed the military and naval situation of the country and how the need for more adequate national defense can best be placed before Chicago citizens.

May Combine Reports.

Two resolutions were passed. One, was that a committee of seven be appointed to formulate plans for the cooperation of the committee with the National Security league and the Navy league and to confer with representatives of both organizations as to details concerning the program to be carried out.

The other resolution indorses the efforts of the National Security league toward arousing a patriotic public sentiment in support of preparedness.

BEATS GIRLS WITH HAMMER

Murderous Negro Probably Acting for Someone Else.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 29.—Probably acting for other persons who wished revenge upon City Detective C. C. Jackson, a negro, giving the name of Lee Holt, aged thirty, forced an entrance into the Jackson home, rushed to the sleeping room of Jackson's daughter and his niece, Miss Jessie Jackson, and beat them over the head with a hammer until their screams frightened him away.

He mounted a bicycye and rode to the Rock Island tracks, where he caught an outgoing freight train. A wild automobile ride by officers intercepted the train a mile from town, where it was flagged and Holt taken off.

Must Pay Own Expenses.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 29.—For the next month and a half, state employes who incur traveling expenses will have to spend their own money and wait until about January 15 to get it back. MARSHALL MAN, JILTED, ENDS LIFE WITH SHOTGUN

Blows Off Head in Presence of Mother; Refused by Jackson Sweetheart

Marshall Mich., Nov. 28—Just as his mother, Mrs. G. A. Briegle, opened the door of his bedroom this afternoon Clarence Briegle 28, pulled the trigger of a shot gun, the muzzle of which was in his mouth. He died instantly.

Young Briegle returned yesterday from the wedding of Louis Rentschler in Tecumseh apparently despondent.

This noon he told his father he was going to kill himself. It was understood that a Jackson girl with whom he had been going had refused to marry him. He went into his bedroom and when he did not come down at 2 oclock his mother went up to see him. Just then the shot was fired.

Coroner Church decided an inquest was unnecessary. Young Briegle was a member of the Marshall Gun Club, the Moose lodge and the Arbeiter Verein.

Besides his parents he is survived by a sister in Battle Creek.

The above clipped from the Free Press throws a shadow of gloom over the happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Reutschler whose wedding was celebrated Saturday evening.

BROOK TROUT.

Science Outdoes Nature in Raising the Young Fish.

The brook trout is a nest builder, but does not belong to the group of fish which cares for its eggs and young. When the function of egg laying is completed and the nest covered with gravel the parent fish seem to feel that their whole duty has been performed, and they depart, leaving both eggs and the young when they are hatched to the care of nature, and nature, it must be confessed, is generally neglectful of her charge.

Early in autumn the mature brook trout in pairs seek the gravelly bottoms of shoals and spring runs. Here with nose and fins they hollow out a shallow basin and make it scrupulously clean. This is their nest, and over the bottom the eggs are scattered, covered with gravel, and their duty to posterity is ended.

Only a small proportion of the eggs deposited naturally are fertilized, and many of these are destroyed by spawn eating fishes. Most of the tiny fish which do develop and succeed in punching a hole through the egg shell with their little tails and emerging into a watery world do so only to find quick lodgment in some larger fish.

As a foster parent the trout culturist is a greater success than Dame Nature. The latter, under the most favorable circumstances, rarely succeeds in hatching more than 10 per cent of the eggs deposited, while the former expects to develop into wiggling fishes nearly 50 per cent of the eggs obtained.

Not Quite.

"Young man," inquired her father sternly, "will you give her a home like the one she has been used to?"

"No," replied the truthful suitor, "for there will be no grumpy father to come home and make every one miserable by his kicking over trifles and swearing at matters in general. There will be no mother to scold her from morning to night for wasting time merely because she wants to be neat. There will be no big brother to abuse her for not doing half of his work and no little brother to make enough noise to drive her crazy when her head aches. There won't be any younger sister to insist on reading some trashy novel while she does all the work. She will not have with me a home like she has been used to, not if I can help it."—Boston Journal.

Pink Pearls.

One of the most important industries of the Bahama islands is the gathering of pink pearls. It is the only place in the world where these pearls are found. They are not taken from the oyster shell, but from a shell resembling a large snail shell, called a "conch." These pearls when perfect bring very high prices.

Getting In Trim.

"You're going to the gymnasium pretty regular now, aren't you?"

"Yes. Bill Hawkins called me a liar three months ago, and in about three months more I'll be ready to tell him he's another."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Ants Are Six Eared.

In the matter of some of their sense organs the ants are more than ordinarily endowed. Strange as it may seem, each ant has at least six ears. Aside from this multiplicity of ears, they are located in just about the queerest place imaginable—on the legs. They seem deaf to all sounds made by the vibration of the air, but detect the slightest possible vibrations of solid material. This is supposed to be to their advantage in that such things as approaching footsteps tell more of the possibility of danger than such sounds as are transmitted through the air. So sensitive are their feet that they detect the impact of a small bird shot dropped on the table from a height of about six inches and about fourteen feet distant from an artificial nest placed at the other end of the table.—St. Nicholas.

She Needed Them.

"I wish, John," she said regretfully, "I had had sense enough not to destroy all the letters you wrote me during the year and a half of your courtship."

He smiled in a gratified way. "I knew you would regret that some time," he said.

"Indeed I do," she replied. "I need a little change the worst sort of way, and the man who buys rags and old paper was here today. How wasteful we are in our youth!"

He looked at her reproachfully, and almost involuntarily his hand sought his pocketbook. It is seldom, indeed, that a resourceful woman has to make a direct request for money.—Chicago Post.

Cheerful Inducements.

The following advertisement once appeared in the London Post:

"A rock built, crenelated castle, buffeted by the Atlantic surge, at one of the most romantic and dreaded points of our ironbound coast, in full view of the Death stone; shipwrecks frequent, corpses common; three reception and seven bedrooms; every modern convenience; 10 guineas a week. Address," etc.

Hard Water.

The streams of water used in hydraulic mining are said to be so swift that if one tried to hack into them with a sword the weapon would fly to pieces. The water is moving so rapidly that it has no time to yield beneath the stroke and in consequence is like a bar of iron.

IS YOUR STOMACH CLOGGED WITH WASTE?

C. A. Wright & Son Guarantee to Return the Money if Mi-o-na Does Not Relieve You.

"It's a pleasure to sell a medicine when our customers come in afterward and tell us how much good it has done them," said C A. Wright & Son the the popular druggists to a Herald man, "and that is why we like to sell and recommend Mi-o-na, the dyspepsia remedy. We have so much faith in this article that we are going to guarantee it in the future, and will return the money to any purchaser of Mi-o-na whom it does not help. That may seem rash but our customers have said so many good words in its favor that we do not expect to have many packages returned.

Any one who has dyspepsia, whose food does not digest well, and who has to take thought as to what he can eat, and when he can eat, and when, can leave 50 cents deposit at our store and take his dypepsia he can withdraw his money."

This shows great faith in the merit of Mi-o-na. It is really a most unusual medicine and the rapid increose of sales since C. A. Wright & Son introduced it in Tecumseh shows that it does all that it is claimed to do—relieves dyspepsia, regulates digestion and enables those who use it to eat just what they want with no fear of trouble after. adv

TRICKING SUBMARINES.

Ruses by Which Vessels May Escape Their Torpedo Attacks.

It is the surprise attack which in nearly every case enables a submarine to torpedo a hostile ship. There are several maneuvers by means of which a ship can trick a submarine. Several vessels have diverted torpedoes by swinging round their stern until it points in the direction of the undersea craft. In this way the wash of the propellers has deflected the torpedo from its course and it has sped harmlessly past its mark. Another successful ruse is to stoke up the furnaces of a ship chased by a submarine, and thick, black smoke belches from its funnels and envelops the vessel in a protective shroud. In this way the submarine gunners are confused and cannot perceive the correct direction in which to send their torpedo.

A speedy ship which follows an erratic, zigzag course presents a poor mark to a submarine. When a torpedo is dispatched against a fast traveling vessel it is directed to a point just ahead of its mark, and the craft literally runs into the death dealing device. This obviously cannot happen, however, if a ship is swinging rapidly from side to side and alternately pointing the narrow expanse of its bows or stern to the undersea marksmen.

A submarine seldom attacks a vessel if it is not alone, for it can only attack one at a time, and while it is launching a torpedo at its first mark the second vessel has an excellent opportunity of ramming the submarine, which can be located by its telltale periscope.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Monstrous Tide.

The bay of Fundy forms a cul-de-sac at which the Atlantic ocean seems to have taken a special spite and at regular intervals pours into it an enormous amount of water. Take the harbor of St. John as an illustration of what this mighty tide must be. In most parts of the world a tide of ten feet is considered something abnormal, but at St. John it rises twenty to twenty-four feet in good weather. In stormy weather the monotony is varied by the high water mark being pushed up even ten or fifteen feet higher.

Drawing the Line.

Mrs. de Fashion—My dear, I have picked out a husband for you. Miss de Fashion—Very well, but I want to say right now, mother, that when it comes to buying the wedding dress I am going to select the materials myself, so there!—New York Weekly.

THE HIGH SCHOOL

The Senior play "Mr. Bob" was such a success that upon request it was repeated Tuesday, Nov. 23. Although a little weary from practising and other necessary work, the Seniors wear a beaming smile and feel well repaid for their work.

The basket ball girls are scheduled to play the Saline team at that town February 18th and at home the 23rd.

According to one teacher, "There has been too much time devoted to dramatic interests during the past few weeks." Which one can it be? Why! "X Y. Z."

Vera Schwartz, Ellen Snedecor and Florence Waldron enjoyed the program given Wednesday by the 9th, 10th and 11th grades.

The schools were closed Thursday and Friday for the Thanksgiving vacation.

Nights after school are reserved this week as follows:
Monday—Girls' Glee Club
Tuesday—Orchestra Practice
Wednesday night—Boys' Glee Club

Misses Margaret McWilliams and Clara Foster, students at Ann Arbor, attended the Thanksgiving program Wednesday, the program of which was as follows:

Music—Orchestra
"The First Thanksgiving Dinner"—Muriel Halladay
Vocal solo "The Dark Lament"—Edna Taylor
Thanksgiving poem—Perry Hayden
Piano solo—Lucile Conlin
Thanksgiving poem—Mura Rice
Solo, "Listen to My Tale of Woe"—Lillian Kennedy
Remarks—Mr. Reed
Music—Boys' Glee Club
Piano solo—Camilla Hayden

The original Thanksgiving poem given by Perry Hayden:

[illegible]ured
with Kipling's little tale;
About the female of the species
being stronger than the male
I have read it oft with diligence;
with labor and with pain,
And have found in many instances that it does not work the same
It is here I intend to show you just the way I think it falls,
That the female of the species is not deadlier than the male.

Now Alice, when out fishing, as she baits with angleworms,
Watch that female from the bank and observe her twist and squirm.
Now it stands to reason, clearly
Kipling here made some mistake,
Else the female of the species would be still for honor's sake;
And it also stands to reason when he wrote that little song
About the female being deadlier, that he got himself in wrong.

Perhaps Kipling knew our Miss
Becky in "Mr. Bob" last night,
Who, when she saw that Mr. Brown did scream with all her might.
Or perhaps he knew our Patty who with cats the bag she filled.
When Phil came home how she did scream and maintain that she was killed,
But of these he was not thinking
when he began to rail
About the female of the species
being deadlier than the male

Now when it comes to studies and knowing things right,
"Domain" surely is the one to be our shining light;
And when it comes to the "exams"
to see who'll get the "Es,"
"Country" proudly will step forth and show his "seventies."
When some of us, we realize and set up quite a wail
For the female of the species aint as deadly as the male.

Of course, now I'll be honest, when
Sunday night comes round,
And over there at Gibson's Pat
Murphy's to be found,
And Mrs. Gibson stands with grandeur upon the lonely stairs,
About the time the clock strikes twelve, you'll see that fellow tear.
Now I'll admit with candor he don't move like a snail,
And the female of the species does seem deadlier than the male

And when it comes Thanksgiving, and you're as full as full could be
Of turkey pies and cookies, and disaster you forsee,
You did eat with pleasure, with labor, THEN with pain,
Till you tho't that every mouthful was taken all in vain
Then you begin to realize and set up quite a wail
For the female with her cooking is quite deadly on the male.

But when it comes to dying as dead as dead can be,
There's not much difference between the two as far as I can see.
For let them both lie side by side,
beneath the cold, cold ground,
You can listen till you're old and gray, you'll never hear a sound,
For once we "kick the bucket," and once we "turn the pail,"
The female of the species dies no deader than the male.

HIGH VELOCITY STARS.

Their Fearful Rate of Speed In Space Is Somewhat Puzzling.

The average velocity of stars ranges from about six kilometers, or between three and four miles, per second for "young" stars to about thirty kilometers per second for "old" ones. But notable exceptions occur. At Mount Wilson solar observatory of the Carnegie institution some stars have been found to move with velocities of 141, 150, 179, 233, 316 and even 325 kilometers per second, the highest speed yet known.

These high velocity stars are sometimes described as runaways because they seem to be quite beyond the control of the gravitational power of the universe. At their speed the attraction of the entire known stellar system would be wholly insufficient to check the star's career through space.

The astronomer, Simon Newcomb, once calculated that the maximum velocity attained by a body starting with velocity zero at an infinite distance and passing through a stellar system containing 100,000,000 stars each five times as massive as our sun and distributed throughout a disklike spheroid of certain extent cannot exceed 40 kilometers per second. Yet the star "Groombridge 1830" has a speed nearly nine times this value, and the massive star Arcturus has a speed probably four times this value.

If existing velocities owe their magnitudes to the gravitation of the system the quantity of attracting matter in the whole stellar system would have to be at least eighty times that assumed by the calculations of Professor Newcomb.—Baltimore American.

VICTIM OF GAS

Charles Noble who was in the employ of Guy E. Belding some time since but now a clerk in Adrian was the victim of mistantaneous heating gas at his boarding place last Wednesday evening while in the bath room taking a bath. He was found by one of the other boarders lying on the floor in a helpless condition and was carried into another room and a doctor summoned at once who rendered the necessary aid. He is reported as all right again but had a narrow escape.

WHEN THE SUN DIES.

Deadly Havoc the Change Will Enact Upon Our Poor Planet.

"If the sun should go out how long would it be before darkness would appear on the earth?" asks a reader.

Eight minutes, eighteen seconds and five hundred and sixty-six one-thousandths of a second!

At the end of that brief interval of time the blue curtain of day would disappear as if an almighty hand had snatched it off, and the dome of night, spangled with stars, would instantaneously arch the earth. We would be plunged into darkness so quickly that for a moment nothing would be visible. Then the piercing rays of the stars would begin to affect our eyes, and after that, gradually, our immediate surroundings would dimly emerge from the gloom. There would be starlight, but no moonlight, for the moon shines only with reflected sunlight.

At first the disappearance of the light would be the thing most troublesome to us, but as time went on a chill would begin to creep over the sunless earth, and out of the dark and frozen air, all around the globe, a pallid snow would descend, as the atmospheric moisture condensed. When days and weeks had elapsed the awful cold of outer space would chill the atmosphere down to the earth's surface and animal and vegetable life would alike perish in the endless winter of universal night!—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

ACTION OF PEROXIDE.

It Cleanses a Wound, but Does Not Aid In the Healing Process.

"It would be well for people to understand what peroxide of hydrogen will do and what it will not do," remarked a dentist just after extracting two old roots on which a large abscess had formed. "It is one of the best, if not the very best, antiseptics we have, but it has no healing qualities. Many people imagine that it will heal a sore place in the mouth, yet that is just what it will not do.

"I have just injected peroxide and water into the cavities in the gums from which I extracted those roots. I did that to destroy the pus that had been left behind by the abscess, for that is the use of peroxide. It unites chemically with the pus and kills the germs that make it. But this is all that it does. And if you continue to use it you will retard the healing instead of hastening it. Peroxide, improperly used, has injured almost as many mouths as it has benefited. The sore place in your mouth is clean now and all it needs is something to keep it clean while nature heals it. Peroxide will not do that—in fact, it will retard it."

The dentist then prescribed a healing wash. There are many such on the market, but any one having a tooth pulled is foolish to select his own.—New York World.

The First Canal Builder.

General Goethals is the latest canal builder to achieve fame, but he has had many predecessors, and the earliest so far as is known was one Naram Sin, who nearly 5,000 years ago opened a canal from Nippur to the Euphrates. This was discovered by Dr George A. Barton in deciphering some of the ancient Sumerian tablets at the museum of the University of Pennsylvania. He found a tablet dated "the year when the divine Naram-Sin opened the mouth of the canal Erin at Nippur." This was not an Irish canal, so far as is known, but it was a great event in the history of Nippur, which gave it transportation facilities with the rest of the world. Naram-Sin was a king of Babylonia, and he is responsible only for financing the canal, and slaves probably did the work.—Baltimore American.

The "Land of Cattle."

Italy may fairly claim to be senior among the nations of Europe, so far as its name is concerned. The peninsula has been "Italia" almost as far back as even legend reaches. According to Mommsen, the "Itali" proper were the inhabitants of the southern part of the country. As to the origin of the name, there is the normal legend of a King Italus, but his name must have been pronounced Vitalus and Vitulus, which means a bull calf, and it is easy to recognize in it an allusion to Italy as the land of cattle.—Spectator.

HE ASKED FOR DONALD.

And Much to His Surprise He Got the Answer He Sought.

Dr. Norman Macleod, the famous Scottish divine, before visiting India, called on an old highland woman in Glasgow, says a writer in the Scottish American. "When ye gang tae India," he said, "ye'll be seein' ma Donal' that went awa tae India ten years ago an' never sent the scrape of a pen tae his mither since."

"But, Katie," said the doctor, "India is a very big place, and how can I expect to find him?"

"Oh, but ye'll just be askin' for Donal'. What for no?"

So, to please the old woman, he promised to ask for Donald, and he conscientiously kept his word. At various ports he made inquiry among British ships, although it seemed very much like looking for a needle in a bale of hay. But it is the unexpected that happens. As Dr. Macleod's steamer went up the Hugli river an outward bound vessel passed close by. A sailor was leaning over her bulwark, and, moved by a sudden impulse, the doctor shouted out:

"Are you Donald Mactavish?"

To his intense surprise the man answered, "Yes."

Dr. Macleod had only time to shout, "You're to write to your mother!" as the vessels drew apart. The result of his amazing meeting was that the old lady received a penitent letter from her long neglectful son.

WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Alleged Washington Resort Keeper Shoots Self In Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 29.—Under indictment in Washington, D. C., on charges of maintaining immoral resorts, said to have been patronized by capital society folk, Margaret Stone, aged thirty-three, attempted suicide in the Roch apartments here. She shot herself in the breast with a revolver owned by Patrolman Fred Stinett of Detroit, who was visiting her at the apartment.

Believed to be dying in Grace hospital the woman made a detailed confession of her past life. In a statement to Assistant Prosecutor Speed she offered to make exposures which, she said, would stir the entire country, and would expose a scheme whereby Washington detectives had received thousands of dollars "hush money" in return for protection extended to proprietors of fashionable resorts in the capital.

NEBRASKA FAVORS COLONEL

Roosevelt Will Be Candidate In Primary Unless He Withdraws.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 29.—Unless Colonel Roosevelt requests that his name be withdrawn, he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for president in the Nebraska primary next April.

That Genius Whistler.

Of Whistler Lady St. Helier in "Memories of Fifty Years" writes thus: "He was a genius and had all the defects and qualities of one. To him everything was a joke, the subject of a bonmot. The lightest and daintiest of persiflage was what he excelled in, and one never had a dull moment in his company. He was always late for dinner, arranging the immortal lock of gray hair in its proper place as he came into the room, with apologies and excuses, none of them true, of which he was perfectly conscious and also that they were not believed. Wherever he was there would be a circle listening to him, and his ringing laugh would be heard all over the room as he sent his shafts right and left into the joints of the armor of those who were attacking him. It was a great surprise and almost a shock when he appeared as a benedict."

In a London speech Mr. Shaw says: "I do not believe there can be any peace in the world until there is peace between England, France and Germany. In fact, Britain might drive Germany and America into one another's arms by carrying victory too far."

NEW SENSATIONS IN BOMB PLOT LIKELY

Capture of Crowley May Lead to Other Arrests.

Washington, Nov. 29.—New disclosures rivaling in importance those which led to the prosecution of Robert Fay in New York are expected by the department of justice, it has become known as a sequel to the arrest of C. C. Crowley in San Francisco in connection with alleged plots against munitions factories. Officials of the department, however, refused to discuss Crowley's case or to predict to what it might lead.

Crowley, according to information here, did not devote his attention to the Pacific coast alone, but traveled extensively throughout the country in the last few months. The ramifications of his undertakings are expected to be revealed when the trap which the department has set has been sprung.

For the present the department's bureau of investigation is using every precaution to keep its next move secret, but it was apparent that other arrests are looked for within a few days.

CONSUL GAFFNEY RETURNS

Will Attempt to Prove He Was Not Over-Partisan In Utterances.

New York, Nov. 29.—E. St. John Gaffney, who was asked to quit his post as United States consul general at Munich, Germany, because of complaints to the state department that his attitude on the war was partisan—that he was manifesting favoritism to Germany unbecoming a neutral representative—returned on the Scandinavian-American liner Oscar II., determined to vindicate himself and his conduct in office.

Evidence which he brought back in the form of a huge stack of documents, letters and newspaper clippings, he declared will disprove the charges unknown to him officially which impelled President Wilson to request his resignation.

ARREST SHATTERS ROMANCE

Girl Who Eloped With "Count" Will Have Marriage Annulled.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—A Thanksgiving romance that included in its cast one French count and the daughter of a wealthy Riverside, Il., merchant, has gone on the rocks.

Under the name of Louis Girox, Louis de Valliers, who admits he is a bonafide French count, was arrested on a charge of passing bad checks. He said he passed one for $30, according to the police, to have funds for his elopement and wedding with Miss Bertha Lemke. The couple married in Wheaton, Ill., Thanksgiving morning, a justice of the peace officiating. The girl, so the police say, said she still loves the court, but will sue for annulment immediately.

New York, Nov. 29.—The American steamer Zealandia, which was boarded and searched by a party from a British cruiser while in the harbor of Progreso, Mexico, slipped into New York harbor in a heavy fog.

An unknown cruiser hailed her off Brigantine shoals, but she escaped in the darkness and fled up the coast keeping within three mile limit.

CURIOUS COINCIDENCE.

An Unexpected Meeting With a Long Lost Set of Dishes.

In the American Magazine the story of a curious coincidence is told in a letter written by Elsie B. Hart of San Gabriel, Cal.:

"In the early days in California very little china was used that did not come from the orient. A man whose home was in Folsom, who preferred the china of Europe, took advantage of a visit to England to order a complete dinner set ornamented with a design of his own selection. In the course of time this was packed and shipped to San Francisco by sailing vessel round the Horn, but after long delay the vessel was given up as lost and was never afterward heard from.

"Years afterward the Californian while traveling in China was invited to dine at the home of a missionary. What was his astonishment to find the table set with his own dishes, purchased so long ago! Concealing his surprise, he commented on the beauty of the china, and this called forth an explanation from his hostess. She told him the china had an interesting history, as it had been washed up on the nearby shore, and they had bought it from the man who had recovered it from the ocean.

"Surprising as it may seem, he never told his host that he was eating off his own dishes!"

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's For One Thing Only and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills are for one thing only.

E. C. Brisbin, farmer, N. Democrat St. Tecumseh says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of the trouble and did me much good."

NEARLY THREE YEARS LATER, Mr. Brisbin said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this remedy and it acts promptly and effectively."

NAB TREASURER AND FORMER ASSISTANT

Grand Rapids Men Asked to Explain Peculiar Transaction.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — City Treasurer James S. Hawking and former Deputy City Treasurer Williard H. Olmsteal were arrested again on a joint charge of embezzlement of municipal funds.

The warrant was based on information furnished to Prosecutor Barnard by Auditor George M. Patterson. Both demanded examinations, which were set for December 14. The complaint charges that Hawking and Olmstead conspired to take from the city treasury money which belonged to the city and that in September, 1913, $471.67, which had been paid to the city by W. A. Bellamy for a tax title, was not paid into the depository.

Hawkins and Olmstead, when arraigned, insisted that they knew nothing of that transaction and that it would unquestionably be cleared up as the work of auditing the city books progressed. Both asserted they were innocent of any wrong-doing.

Believed to be dying in Grace hospital the woman made a detailed confession of her past life. In a statement to Assistant Prosecutor Speed she offered to make exposures which, she said, would stir the entire country, and would expose a scheme whereby Washington detectives had received thousands of dollars "hush money" in return for protection extended to proprietors of fashionable resorts in the capital.

ADMINISTRATION DENIES CHARGE

Old Not Overlook Offenses of Carranza's Soldiers.

CRUEL CRIMES NOT PROVEN

President Wilson, Private Secretary Tumulty and William J. Bryan Deny the Charges of Prosecution and Fiendishness Toward Clergy and Sisters of Roman Catholic Church.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Important documents designed to combat the charge that the Wilson administration overlooked the offense of General Carranza against the Catholic church in according his recognition and setting forth in a general way the administration's defense of its Mexican policy were made public at the White House.

Letters From Leading Men.

The documents consist of letters from President Wilson, Private Secretary Tumulty and ex-Secretary of State Bryan. The most striking feature of the correspondence is an official statement from the Very Rev. Antonio J. Paredes, Roman Catholic vicar general of the archbishopric of Mexico City, embodied in Mr. Tumulty's letter denying the charge of the Catholic clergy in this country that nuns were outraged by General Carranza's soldiery.

The vicar general's statement not only denies that nuns were violated but presents a list of crimes against Catholic clergy which shows that these were by no means as widespread nor as uniformly tolerated by Carranza officials as had been represented by ecclesiastics of the United States.

No Official Records of Such Crime.

Secretary Tumulty states in italicized type there "is no official record of a single proven instance of this dastardly crime in the files of the state department," although the consuls and special agents of the United States in Mexico "have diligently investigated reported cases."

With respect to the nuns who were driven from Zacatecas to Vera Cruz and later brought to this country on a ship chartered by the United States the unfortunate women who figured most largely in the reports of outrages broadcasted through the United States, Secretary Tumulty declares that not one of them ever told any of the American army officers who cared for them during their five months' stay at Vera Cruz that such attacks had been made.

It is understood that action was taken at the request of the British government.

No certificates of grade or weight are being issued. All boats loading at elevators for Buffalo or Canadian lower lake ports have been ordered to cease loading. All railway companies which have thousands of loaded cars in their yards are not allowed to unload.

MICHIGAN TOWNS ARE HITTING DIZZY CLIP

The increase since 1910, when the population was 1,252 has been 447 per cent. The present population comprises 6,835 whites and 18 negroes.

A similar census of Highland Park, Mich., shows its population on Nov. 15, 1915, to have been 27,156. The increase since 1910, when the population was 4,120 has been 559 per cent. The present population comprises 27,091 whites, 53 negroes, 5 Japanese, 4 Chinese, and 3 Indians.

Bucharest Correspondent Says Agreement Is Made.

PARIS, FRANCE — There is good ground for announcing that events of the past two days have strongly increased the probability of early intervention by Roumania on behalf of the allies.

In confirmation of this information comes a dispatch from the Temps correspondent at Bucharest stating definitely that the government has decided to act, the only difference between Premier Bratiano and M. Jonescu and Filipesco being one of the date and method, which difference may be expected to disappear shortly.

A Petrograd telegram states that a Roumanian commission sena to Petrograd to arrange with the Russian government for the transportation of munitions and goods across Russia to Roumania has telegraphed to the Roumanian government that Russia has accorded all facilities.

Instruction has been given for the enlarging of Kola, a port where munitions will begin to arrive in great bulk at the end of December.

DR. HAISELDEN SQUELCHED

Doctor's Bid for Additional Notoriety Cancelled In Name of Decency.

NEW YORK — "The Unborn," a drama upholding race suicide where a mentally or physically defective offspring is certain, and which was to have been publicly produced for the first time in the Princess theater, with Dr. Haiselden of Chicago as an added attraction, was ordered suppressed by License Commissioner Bell on complaint of Monsignor Lavelle of St. Patrick's cathedral, who spoke for Cardinal Farley.

Commissioner Bell made it his business to witness a rehearsal of the play. As a result he wrote a letter to T. R. Comstock, licensee of the Princess theater, telling him that the license department regarded "The Unborn" as "indecent, unhealthful, unclean and against public interest."

AUSTRIA SEEKING PEACE, IS CLAIM

Rome Tribuna's Correspondent Gives Out Story.

"ON GOOD AUTHORITY" HE SAYS

Correspondent Declares Berlin and Vienna Are at Odds—Separate Peace Attempted by Germany With Russia Said to Have Failed—Kaiser Visits Emperor Francis Joseph.

AMSTERDAM — A dispatch from Vienna says that rumors are current that the reorganization of the Austrian cabinet is imminent.

ROME — Austria is trying to conclude a separate peace with the allies. This statement is made by the Luzerne correspondent of the Rome Tribuna, who declares he obtained it from the most reliable sources.

According to the Tribuna, Germany and Austria are at discord on the question of peace. Both governments desire it but Germany is seeking to obtain peace with certain ones of the allies, hoping thereby to be able to continue with England under less of a disadvantage to herself.

Austria on the other hand, it is stated, is aiming at a permanent peace with all the entente powers, which would relieve her from the tremendous strain now being placed upon her financial and military resources. Steps to this end are alleged to have been secretly taken by Austria during the first ten days of the present month.

"I am able to state on the highest authority," the correspondent of the Tribuna avers, "that Prince von Buelow's efforts to open peace negotiations with Russia at the Red Cross conference at Stockholm have failed.

Delegates Were Warned.

"According to the original plan Prince Max of Saxony was to represent Germany, while the Grand Duke Michael, a relative of the Czar, was to be Russia's delegate. Suddenly Russia appointed as her representatives two plain citizens, Messrs Arhusoff and Marcaroff, who were empowered to discuss only technical questions.

"Furthermore, Germany's efforts to induce Austria to send to Stockholm Count Andrassy or Count Apponyi also failed in spite of Austria's strong wish to conclude peace."

Kaiser Visits Vienna.

Emperor William arrived in Vienna and paid a personal visit to the Austro-Hungarian monarch, Emperor Francis Joseph, at Schoenbrunn castle.

CAMPBELL IS DOOMED BY JURY TO GALLOWS

"Chicken Joe" Convicted of Warden Allen's Wife's Murder.

JOLIET, ILL. — "Chicken Joe" Campbell has been declared guilty and must hang for the murder of Mrs Odette M. Allen, wife of Edmund M. Allen, in the warden's quarters at the penitentiary.

The jury returned the verdict after forty-four hours of deliberation, at 9:17 a. m. Monday.

It is said the juy agreed on the first ballot as to Campbell's guilt, but disagreed on the penalty, three holding out for life imprisonment, which is his term now.

The murder of Mrs. Allen on June 20 shocked the state. Mrs. Allen, known and loved by all the charges of her husband, was brutally slain, her skull crushed with blows from a heavy alcohol jug or thermos bottle, and the room set afire to hide the crime. The very means the slayer took to hide the crime led to its discovery, as the incessant ringing of the fire alarm summoned scores of volunteer firemen and attaches of the penitentiary.

Campbell, Mrs. Allen's servant, was missing when the alarm of fire spread, and while the flames still were raging he was seen walking in the rear of the warden's home. All the servants in the warden's home were put through a grilling cross-examination and their stories checked up. Campbell was placed under arrest after several witnesses had given testimony contrary to his statements.

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR CATARRH

Just Breathe Hyomei Four Times a Day and Be Relieved.

DOOMED TO DIE

Horse Given Up To Die By Doctors Saved By Simple Remedy

that the European War had raised the value of livestock—particularly horses Therefore, it is now more necessary than ever to keep domestic animals in A-1 shape. To do this, a bully liniment to use is the same kind that George Wells of Syracuse, N. Y., used He says: And the only medicine used on the foot after the horse had been given to die by the veterinary surgeon was Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. This horse which the doctor said should be killed after it had run a nail in its foot, lived to do more hours of labor."

MILITARY TRAINING FOR AMERICAN SCHOOL BOYS

There is sufficient reason other than the military training given for the system in vogue at the Sumter schools Necessarily the training received by the boys makes for bodily development. The exercise of fifteen minutes daily drill gives an opportunity to every boy to work himself gradually into athletic trim, many of the boys being too frail at the outset to indulge in any violent exercise. However, a natural outgrowth of the military feature has been the tendency toward physical exercise of a beneficial nature on the part of the boys. The record of the Sumter schools in State athletic circles stands high, two football championships for high schools having been won and a high standing in track athletics being maintained Military training has been strongly urged for college students, especially those who did not make the football or baseball team.

The most important development, however, to the boys in the military is not physical but mental. The concentration required in going through the manual of arms and the intricate drill formations is a mental stimulant to the growing youth.

In connection with field maneuvers, the Sumter Battalion has the "open order" work. This gives actual training in warlike executions, including practice in getting into a skirmish line and the accompanying deployment. There is no element of the extended order" that is not taught the boys. A movement is on foot to form a number of military companies in nearby towns and out of this is expected to grow a sort of competitive warfare practice, including sham battles, among the various schools' military organizations.—From "Military Training in the Public School," by Leon M. Green, in the American Review of Reviews for November.

NO MORE BACKACHE NO MORE MISERY

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides or have any signs of kidney or bladder trouble such as rheumatic pains, puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired and run-down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Solvax will quickly and surely relieve you of your misery.

Solvax is the most potent remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such troubles. It neutralizes, dissolves and makes the kidneys sift out all the uric acid and poisons left by the blood, and renders the kidneys and urinary organs clean. vigorous healthy.

C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist, say that no medicine ought to be paid for unless it does the user some good. They therefore sell Solvax under a positive guarantee to quickly relieve the worst cases of kidney trouble or refund the money. Try Solvax today and if you cannot see and feel a decided change for the better just go to C. A Wright & Son and tell them you want your money back and they will return it without question. This is the strongest argument that can be offered in behalf of any medicine. adv

Berthollet and Robespierre.

It is said that the celebrated savant Berthollet in the most dangerous times of the republic sustained his fearless love of truth. Some days prior to the ninth Thermidor a sandy deposit was found in a barrel of brandy intended for the army. The contractors, suspected of poisoning, were immediately arrested, and the scaffold was already prepared. Berthollet, however, examined the brandy and reported it free from all adulteration.

"You dare maintain," said Robespierre to him, "that that brandy does not contain poison?"

As his reply Berthollet drank off a glass, saying, "I never drank so much before."

"You have plenty of courage!" exclaimed Robespierre.

"I had more when I signed my report," replied the chemist, and here the matter terminated.

PLOW OR DISK STUBBLE.

From tests that have been made plowing has been better for storing moisture than disking. If heavy rains fall the increase in moisture content of plowed land over disked land is greater. This is to be expected, since the plowing stirs the surface of the soil more thoroughly and puts it in better condition to catch any rain that comes. The plowing also will kill all weeds. The disk does not in all cases do this. It may be preferable—if a soil does not blow when it is fall plowed—to plow the stubble fields instead of disking them. This, however, is frequently impracticable, due to the dryness of the soil. Listing the soil has been almost as good as plowing. We have not, however, made many tests to determine the effect of listing.—Nebraska Station.

300 People Enjoy Event

The Odd Fellows gave an entertainment Tuesday evening in their hall which was certainly out of the ordinary. The Adrian lodge had been invited and turned out well, bringing over their degree team which puts on an initiatory degree which is wonderful to behold. The Britton lodge and their wives and the Rebekahs and families besides a number of invited guests brought the crowd up to about 300 and every last one had a jolly time.

A quartette composed of W. S. and Fred Dickinson, Harold Lowry and Floyd Juckett gave several selections, Rev. W A. Rex pleased his audience with some excellent readings and the giving of this initiatory degree was the crowning feature.

In an introductory speech it was said that the wives of the Adrian brothers had objected to their being out so late at lodge meetings but after they had seen this degree given they encouraged the attendance of their spouses and now we expect the local lodge members will have no more trouble in this regards. The regalia worn was of startling beauty? and the members taking part gave their lectures with due impressiveness

Brother Freidlander of the Britton lodge sang several comic songs accompanying himself and after lunch was served dancing was enjoyed.

Much of the credit for the giving of pleasure to so many people goes to Floyd Juckett and Earle Updike, the committee having it in charge, and many are the compliments they are receiving for the success of their efforts.

The Men's class of St. Peter's church are arranging for a class banquet to be held at Witherell hall, Friday evening December 10th. Much interest is being centered in the banquet as our governor, W. SIMPLE REMEDY FOR CATARRH

Just Breathe Hyomei Four Times a Day and Be Relieved.

If a few years ago some one had said you could treat catarrh by breathing air charged with a healing balsam, the idea would have been ridiculed and it remained for that eminent investigator, R. T. Booth, to discover in Hyomei this wonderful method of treatment.

Hyomei has performed almost miraculous results in treating catarrh and is today recognized by thousands of people as the only advertized remedy for catarrh that can be relied upon to do just what it claims. The complete outfit of Hyomei is inexpensive and consists of an inhaler, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei.

Breathe the air of Hyomei through the little inhaler druggists furnish with it for a few minutes four times a day and it will help the worst case of catarrh. It soothes and heals the mucous membrane of the air passages prevents irritation, and effects complete and lasting relief.

In Tecumseh there are scores of well known people who have been relieved of catarrh by Hyomei. If it does not help you C. A. Wright & Son will return the money you paid for Hyomei. This is the strongest evidence that be offered as to their faith in this remedy.

DOOMED TO DIE

Horse Given Up To Die By Doctors Saved By Simple Remedy

that the European War had raised the value of livestock—particularly horses. Therefore, it is now more necessary than ever to keep domestic animals in A-1 shape. To do this, a bully liniment to use is the same kind that George Wells of Syracuse, N. Y., used. He says: And the only medicine used on the foot after the horse had been given to die by the veterinary surgeon was Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. This horse which the doctor said should be killed after it had run a nail in its foot, lived to do more hours of labor."

Y. M. C. A.

The following boys attended the State Boys' Conference from the Ridgeway Group, David Underwood, leader, Ronald Pocklington, Chas. Underwood, George Baker, Waldo Ensign, Kenneth Pocklington, Glen Hines. There were forty boys with County Secretary Arnot who went from the county field. Twenty went from Adrian. The entire attendance at the Conference was something 1850. The Conference in many ways surpasses the previous ones. Hillsdale was honored with the Presidency in the person of Harold Johnson. The entire Lenawee County delegation went by special car from Jackson to Kalamazoo and return. The boys report a most enjoyable and profitable time.

E. J. Arnot,
County Secretary.

MILITARY TRAINING FOR AMERICAN SCHOOL-BOYS

There is sufficient reason other than the military training given for the system in vogue at the Sumter schools. Necessarily the training received by the boys makes for bodily development. The exercise of fifteen minutes daily drill gives an opportunity to every boy to work himself gradually into athletic trim, many of the boys being too frail at the outset to indulge in any violent exercise. However, a natural outgrowth of the military feature has been the tendency toward physical exercise of a beneficial nature on the part of the boys. The record of the Sumter schools in State athletic circles stands high, two football championships for high schools having been won and a high standing in track athletics being maintained. Military training has been strongly urged for college students, especially those who did not make the football or baseball team.

The most important development, however, to the boys in the military is not physical but mental. The concentration required in going through the manual of arms and the intricate drill formations is a mental stimulant to the growing youth.

In connection with field maneuvers, the Sumter Battalion has the "open order" work. This gives actual training in warlike executions, including practice in getting into a skirmish line and the accompanying deployment. There is no element of the extended order" that is not taught the boys. A movement is on foot to form a number of military companies in nearby towns and out of this is expected to grow a sort of competitive warfare practice, including sham battles, among the various schools' military organizations.—From "Military Training in the Public School," by Leon M. Green, in the American Review of Reviews for November.

NO MORE BACKACHE, NO MORE MISERY

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides or have any signs of kidney or bladder trouble such as rheumatic pains, puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired and run-down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Solvax will quickly and surely relieve you of your misery.

Solvax is the most potent remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such troubles. It neutralizes, dissolves and makes the kidneys sift out all the uric acid and poisons left by the blood, and renders the kidneys and urinary organs clean, vigorous healthy.

C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist, say that no medicine ought to be paid for unless it does the user some good. They therefore sell Solvax under a positive guarantee to quickly relieve the worst cases of kidney trouble or refund the money. Try Solvax today and if you cannot see and feel a decided change for the better just go to C. A. Wright & Son and tell them you want your money back and they will return it without question. This is the strongest argument that can be offered in behalf of any medicine. adv

Berthollet and Robespierre.

It is said that the celebrated savant Berthollet in the most dangerous times of the republic sustained his fearless love of truth. Some days prior to the ninth Thermidor a sandy deposit was found in a barrel of brandy intended for the army. The contractors, suspected of poisoning, were immediately arrested, and the scaffold was already prepared. Berthollet, however, examined the brandy and reported it free from all adulteration.

"You dare maintain," said Robespierre to him, "that that brandy does not contain poison?"

As his reply Berthollet drank off a glass, saying, "I never drank so much before."

"You have plenty of courage!" exclaimed Robespierre.

"I had more when I signed my report," replied the chemist, and here the matter terminated.

PLOW OR DISK STUBBLE.

From tests that have been made plowing has been better for storing moisture than disking. If heavy rains fall the increase in moisture content of plowed land over disked land is greater. This is to be expected, since the plowing stirs the surface of the soil more thoroughly and puts it in better condition to catch any rain that comes. The plowing also will kill all weeds. The disk does not in all cases do this. It may be preferable—if a soil does not blow when it is fall plowed—to plow the stubble fields instead of disking them. This, however, is frequently impracticable, due to the dryness of the soil. Listing the soil has been almost as good as plowing. We have not, however, made many tests to determine the effect of listing.—Nebraska Station.

300 People Enjoy Event

The Odd Fellows gave an entertainment Tuesday evening in their hall which was certainly out of the ordinary. The Adrian lodge had been invited and turned out well, bringing over their degree team which puts on an initiatory degree which is wonderful to behold. The Britton lodge and their wives and the Rebekahs and families besides a number of invited guests brought the crowd up to about 300 and every last one had a jolly time.

A quartette composed of W. S. and Fred Dickinson, Harold Lowry and Floyd Juckett gave several selections, Rev. W A. Rex pleased his audience with some excellent readings and the giving of this initiatory degree was the crowning feature.

In an introductory speech it was said that the wives of the Adrian brothers had objected to their being out so late at lodge meetings but after they had seen this degree given they encouraged the attendance of their spouses and now we expect the local lodge members will have no more trouble in this regards. The regalia worn was of startling beauty? and the members taking part gave their lectures with due impressiveness

Brother Freidlander of the Britton lodge sang several comic songs accompanying himself and after lunch was served dancing was enjoyed.

Much of the credit for the giving of pleasure to so many people goes to Floyd Juckett and Earle Updike, the committee having it in charge, and many are the compliments they are receiving for the success of their efforts.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. LURING WILD GEESE.

Live Decoys Are Often Used and Made to Play the Traitor.

American wild geese each spring migrate from waters of the southern states to the shores of the Arctic in northern Canada. The two great common varieties of the bird are the honkers and the wavy, or white, goose.

Both of these are extensively hunted. Covering, as they do, about 5,000 miles on their annual migration, these birds rest at various places en route and are thus shot by sportsmen almost across the length of the continent. The birds have a peculiar trait of always leaving one of their number on lookout while the rest feed.

To aid in the shooting of wild geese live wild ones, captured young and raised in captivity, are often placed in feeding grounds in likely territory on the line of flight of the migrating flocks. These decoys are terrible traitors and by their calling often bring the flying ones within shooting distance of the sportsmen, who lie in hidden pits near at hand.

Painted decoys, shaped like geese and made of steel, are also used by the hunters. In the latter case the men, from their hiding place in the pits, call the birds by using a goose call, a metal instrument like a flute, which mimics the sound of the goose with remarkable realism.—Philadelphia North American.

WRITING ON METALS.

By the Use of Wax and Acids Etchings May Easily Be Made.

Usually a man attempts to put his name on his metal possessions by scratching with a file or knife point and makes the poorest sort of a job. It is really very easy to write on any metal—the blade of a jackknife, a watchcase, skates—if one happens to know how, and the attractiveness of the inscription is limited only by the artistic ability of the individual.

Cover the place where you wish to write with a thin coating of melted beeswax. When the wax is cold write plainly with any pointed instrument, being particular to cut the letters through the wax to the metal.

Then mix one ounce of muriatic acid and one-half of an ounce of nitric acid, or smaller quantities in the same proportions (and remember that those acids are deadly poisons), and apply the mixture to the lettering with a feather, carefully filling each letter.

Allow the acids to remain from one to ten minutes, according as the etching is to be light or deep. Next dip the article in water, wash out the acids and melt off the wax, and the thing is done. A little oil should be applied as a finishing touch. Gold, silver, iron or steel can be marked in this way.—Youth's Companion.

Scientific Farming

DESTROYING QUACK GRASS.

Methods Employed by a Minnesota Farmer In Attacking the Weed.

A Minnesota farmer outlines his method of attacking quack grass as follows in the Iowa Homestead:

As quack grass is taking possession of some of our best land throughout the central west, I thought perhaps a few words relating to my experience in dealing with it might set some one thinking and consequently benefit him. In my early experiences with quack grass, which come first in small spots, I tried killing out with salt. I could kill it entirely if I used salt enough, but the expense was out of reason, and, besides, when I used salt enough to kill the quack nothing else would grow on the land for years. I then tried digging and burning, but soon gave that up as a bad job. One can scarcely get all the roots by digging, and it is too expensive. I might enumerate several methods I tried, but was not entirely satisfied with any. Finally I got to thinking strongly on the subject. All the methods I had tried had been too expensive for the results obtained. I then began along a new line entirely and have found it much cheaper and very much more effective.

QUACK GRASS.

The method employed is what might be called the smothering method. The idea is this: If one can rot the quack roots in the ground he has turned an enemy to a friend. I would do this by first enriching the soil by a coat of manure or a clover crop or preferably both. Then anything I plant or sow will grow quickly, while if the land was in a lean condition any smothering crop would grow so slowly that my opportunity would be lost. A good way would be to sow the mixed grasses and clover and pasture for a couple of seasons, covering with manure while to pasture. The very tramping of the stock has a tendency to bring quack roots nearer the surface.

Late in the fall of the year after it had this treatment I would plow quite shallow and harrow down at a convenient time the following spring, thoroughly if I could spare the time. I also double disk and harrow again at odd times. About June 1, not much later, I plow again quite deep, harrow down and sow immediately to German millet, about one and one-half bushels to the acre. I sow each day as fast as plowed so to get the millet started ahead of the quack. When my field is plowed my millet is sowed. Inside three days, if there is plenty of moisture, the millet is up and inside of ten days it covers the ground. By having the ground rich and sowing at this warm time of the season the quack will never see daylight until fall, when the millet is cut for hay, and then it is dead, root and branch, and the ground is in splendid shape for a bumper crop of corn next season. In fact, I have raised our best corn on land treated as above, with scarcely a root of quack showing on land that was badly sodded the year before. By this method very little extra work is given the land save the extra plowing, a big crop of very good millet hay is grown, and a big crop of roots is rotted in the soil equal in value to a coating of manure, and the ground is left in excellent condition for two crops of corn following.

Some have tried buckwheat in place of millet, but with not as good success, as corn does not follow buckwheat as well, and after one has got the soil into a high state of fertility by this method he naturally wants to grow corn following, as small grain is very apt to lodge. Small patches of quack can be easily smothered by using tarred paper as a cover for six weeks. In using tarred paper be sure to lap the sheets well and weight down with earth. This is too expensive a treatment except on very small patches. It is very difficult to handle quack grass on land that is not well drained.

Killing Wild Oats.

Wild oats are one of the worst weed pests that the Colorado farmer has to deal with especially in the higher altitudes. Where wild oats have occupied the land for a number of years they usually have left a large amount of seed on and in the soil. Quite frequently when a given crop of wild oats is destroyed by cutting or plowing the land will immediately come up thickly with wild oats. The common impression is that the crop was not destroyed, whereas usually the growing crop was killed and the crop which appears is the result of the sprouting of seed already in the soil.

The best way to rid the land of wild oats is to use meadow crops or cultivated crops. If the wild oats are prevented from seeding and conditions made favorable for the sprouting of the seed in the ground they can be eradicated in a short time. The seed is known to have vitality enough to lie in the soil from three to seven years before germinating.—Alvin Keze, Colorado Station.

War Upon Pain!

Pain is a visitor to every home and usually it comes quite unexpectedly. But you are prepared for every emergency if you keep a small bottle of Sloan's Liniment handy. It is the greatest pain killer ever discovered. Simply laid on the skin—no rubbing required—it drives the pain away. It is really wonderful.

Mervin H. Soister, Berkeley, Cal., writes: "Last Saturday, after tramping around the Panama Exposition with wet feet, I came home with my neck so stiff that I couldn't turn. I applied Sloan's Liniment freely and went to bed. To my surprise next morning the stiffness had almost disappeared, four hours after the second application I was as good as new."

ENORMOUS WASTE BY WEEDS

Iowa Agricultural College Estimates a Loss of $25,000,000 In Iowa Alone.

Experts of the Iowa Agricultural college estimate that weeds cost Iowa farmers not less than $25,000,000 a year. This is a huge sum, and if there is difficulty in crediting the possibility of a loss so enormous as springing from this source alone there need be small wonder. But the experts leave no room for doubt. They have made careful investigation in both field and laboratory, and they put on record the facts that these disclosed.

Weeds, says their bulletin, are harmful in a good many ways. They consume plant food that should go to the agricultural crop. They rob cultivated plants of sunlight. They take the moisture so essential for a crop, especially in a dry year. Weeds like the morning glory pull down a crop like wheat, corn or oats. Many of them harbor bad insects.

But there is little need to waste time giving a weed a bad reputation, says the Indianapolis News. That it has already, and the farmer knows from experience what weeds do to his crops. Translating the damage to dollars, however, and applying the figures to the state as a whole is likely to set the agriculturist thinking along new lines. It presents the subject from another viewpoint.

What is true of Iowa, of course, is true in proportion in other states. Iowa farmers are not slovenly farmers. Their fields are as well cultivated as the fields of farmers elsewhere. The weed is no greater menace there than it is in Indiana, and in Indiana, also, it is causing damage amounting to millions of dollars annually.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the establishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes. Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to embroider a sacerdotal vestment, asked no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures, which she afterward worked in gold thread.—Exchange.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's For One Thing Only and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills are for one thing only.

For weak or disordered kidneys.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove worth.

E. O. Brisbin, farmer, N. Democrat St. Tecumseh says: I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of the trouble and did me much good."

NEARLY THREE YEARS LATER, Mr. Brisbin said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this remedy and it acts promptly and effectively."

ROGER L. WARING INJURED

Roger L. Waring of Detroit, son of H. S. Waring, was struck by a street car and thrown from his bicycle which he was riding home from his office Saturday night. The accident happened at Woodward and Josephine avenues and witnesses state it was entirely the fault of the D. U. R. Co. Fortunately Roger was thrown away from the moving car and while he was bruised badly, the only serious trouble was a severe scalp wound. He was removed to Samaritan Hospital and it will be several days before he can be taken home

CHORAL UNION

The next concert on the Choral Union Series will bring to Hill Auditorium, Ann Arbor, one of the most renowned artists of the present day Mischa Elman, who will make his first Ann Arbor appearance Monday evening, December 13.

Although still a young man this will mark his sixth extensive tour of America, on his previous tours having played at more than 600 concerts and recitals, all of them to capacity audiences and at many of them hundreds were turned away. His sixth tour promises to surpass all of his efforts in the past in every way.

No matter from which side the life of Mischa Elman is reviewed, the thoughtful student of human events is certain to declare that the young Russian genius is an unsolveable mystery. Gifts like his cannot be explained. As an artist he charms fascinates, uplifts, and his influence upon the public is the same, no matter in which country he plays, be his auditors critics, connoisseurs aristocrats, or just plain mortals, it is much the same; all marvel at his accomplishments and wonder at his achievements. When Elman first appeared in this country, the first thing said of him was that he had created a new epoch in violin playing, and it is not extravagant to state that the concerts of this wonderfully endowed Russian in America, stimulated violin students, and the sale of violin compositions to a remarkable degree. His concerts have helped artists of lesser gifts, and indeed, one is justified in declaring that he has established a new popularity for the "King of Instruments."

The historic Gewandhaus in Leipsig, has ever frowned upon "prodigies." The archives of the institution show that only two exceptions have been made allowing "wunderkinder" to appear at Gewandhaus concerts-the first was the late Joseph Joachim, and the second, Mischa Elman This in itself, constitutes a novel incident in the annals of musical performances. As in the case of Joachim, Elman's prodigy years did not spoil his career. For a time, the little Russian was withdrawn from public appearance in order to pursue his studies with Professor Auer in St Petersburg, but when he returned to the concert platform, the world beheld a musical miracle worker.

What is the magic in Elman's playing? To some it is the big soulful tone with a G string, deep and rich like the 'cello; and another says the magic of Elman's playing is his magnetism; others declare it is Elman's interpretative skill that is extraodinary, and right here, let it be said that Elman does not favor one school of composition more that another. Speaking for himself on this point, Elman stated, "A true artist must revere every school of music and must play the masterpieces of every famous composer; that is all there is to it."

He will offer the following program at this time:

Concerto, E Minor, Op. 64	Mendelssohn
Allegro molto appassionate; Andante; Allegro, molto vicace.
Faust Fantasy	Wieniawski
The Call of the Plains	Rubin Goldmark
Orientale	Caesar Cui
Ave Maria	Schubert-Wilhelm
La Chasse	Fritz Kreisler
I. Palpiti	Paganini

Mr Walter H. Golde, Accompanist.

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING IN TECUMSEH

With Christmas less than three weeks away, our people are begining to think seriously about their Christmas shopping.

The last few days always find the stores crowded with late shoppers It is always the poorest time to buy as the stock has been reduced somewhat by earlier buyers and then again you can not get the attention you would like due to the crowded condition of the stores.

Do your Christmas shopping in Tecumseh. Remember that people are coming to Tecumseh to trade for miles about us. There must be a reason for this. The reason is that our merchants are carrying the goods that people want and they give the service also.

Spend your dollars at home where they will do you the most good. Not one nickle of the money you spend in Detroit, Toledo and other places ever comes back to help to make your load lighter here in Tecumseh.

Our merchants are paying a large proportion of your taxes, are paying rents for the stores they occupy and are paying salaries to help those who live here in Tecumseh.

This money stays at home and is set in circulation. This helps you and makes your load lighter. The home merchant is a man among you, is your friend while the city merchant does not know you and if you traded with him for years you would probably never know him.

They are a few of the many reasons why you should buy at home. Do your Christmas shopping in Tecumseh.

CRANBERRIES AND QUARTS

Helme vs Avery

In a recent issue of the Telegram an article appeared which comes from the pen of our State Dairy and Food Commissioner headed "Helme Catechism the latest, Cranberries and Quarts subject." Helme states that it is not copyrighted and vaudeville performers and any others who desire may make free use of it.

Our friend and fellow citizen, Frank D. Avery, takes exception to what was said by Com. Helme and comes back at him with an article which was printed in the Adrian Telegram under date of December 2nd. Mr. Avery states that his article is not copyrighted either and he would not feel hurt if every paper in Michigan should print it and every live grocer should read it and also hints that brother Helme's catechism is being used for political reasons.

Com. Helme made his catechism a little strong as we do not think the majority of grocers in this state are up to this kind of business We haven't discovered it here in Tecumseh anyway.

We print the articles as they appeared in the Telegram.

"Oh, Pa, what are those red things in the bushel basket?"

"Those, my boy, are cranberries Your mother always serves them with the turkey on Thanksgiving," said the father.

"And, Pa, there's a tin measure in the basket just like ma buys milk in What's that for?"

"That " says the father, "is a quart measure by which they sell the berries."

"But, Pa, when ma sold some strawberries she measured them in a quart basket why doesn't the grocer?"

"Well, you see, my son, there are two kinds of quarts, a dry quart, to sell dry things in, and a liquid quart to sell liquids in The liquid quart holds 10 cubic inches less than the dry quart, so the grocer buy his cranberries by dry quart and sells them by the liquid quart."

"Why does the grocer do that, Pa?"

"So he can get 38 quarts out of each 32-quart bushel."

"But, Pa, I should think people would insist on having a dry quart of cranberries instead of a wet one?"

"They would my son, if they only knew the law."

"But, Pa, ain't it dishonest to sell persons a short quart of cranberries.,'

"Oh, no, my son, it is merely 'business efficiency '"

"What's 'business efficiency?'"

"The art of getting all there is out of business and then some."

"But, Pa, ain't that wrong?"

"Now, never mind asking any more questions, son, you won't understand business principles until you grow up."

"Oh, Pa! I just read the Helme catechism about quarts and cranberries Does Mr. Helme mean that the grocers are dishonest?"

"I suppose that is what he wants people to think."

"Was it not the grocer who let us have things to eat when you were sick and had no money?"

"Yes, the grocer is one of the best friends we ever had."

"Does the grocer charge more profit on his goods than other dealers?"

"No. He does more work for less money than other dealers."

"Is the grocer accommodating?"

"Yes,. His competition is so keen that he is obliged to be accomodating."

"Does it cost him anything to accommodate people?"

"Yes. It is quite an item in his expense account."

"Why does Mr. Helme take so much pains to make it appear that grocers are dishonest?"

"The only reason I can see is that it is for political purposes."

"What do you mean by political purpose?"

"I mean that if he can make people think the grocer is dishonest, and that he is their friend and protector from such scoundrels, it will help him to get votes."

"But he doesn't need votes. He got his appointment from the governor."

"Yes, this is true but some day he may want to be elected governor or member of congress and he wants these votes all all ready when the time comes."

"But I should think he would want the grocer votes too, and he cannot expect them if he tries to injure the grocers' business."

"Oh, he does not care for the grocers, because there are not many of them"

"All right, Pa I think I see through the scheme, and I guess the grocers have a lot of friends who will see it the same as I do." Frank D. Avery, Tecumseh, Nov. 30.

You simply leave 50c on deposit with C. A. Wright & Son and if after you have used the box of Mi-o-na you decide that it has done you no good, all you have to do is to tell them so and they will return your money

Hundreds of people have been relieved of stomach agonies by using this remarkable remedy. It is not simply a food digester; it is a medicine that puts all of the digestive organs into normal condition and gives ruddy, glowing, vigorous health. "ENCLOSED FIND CHECK" BEST THREE WORDS

Many Tecumseh People To Receive Christmas Money From Local Bank

"What are the three sweetest words in the world?" asked the preacher eloquently in the course of his sermon, without really expecting an answer, And a blunt business man promply spoke: "Enclosed find check "

It startled the minister and amused the congregation.

But maybe some of us agree with the business man. Anyway, the Lilley State Bank believes we appreciate the value of those three words and it has made it possible for hundreds of Tecumseh people to receive good substantial checks when Christmas of 1916 rolls around.

It's a novel—and practical—plan. It will bring Christmas cheer in increased measure to many,

HOW IT'S DONE

It's the old story that they are helped who help themselves.

The bank has installed The Christmas Money Club. Those who join this club really furnish the money for their own checks.

But the club furnishes a plan that makes it so easy to put by the money that it seems to every member as though the check he receives is purely a present.

You join the club knowing there will be no dues, no fines or penalties. The bank keeps the records and looks after details.

There are several divisions in the club, and the question of how large a Christmas check you will receive depends upon which of the divisions you join.

GOOD THING FOR TECUMSEH

The club is a good thing for Tecumseh, too, It will boost business—especially holiday business.

A great deal of the money will be spent by the club members for Christmas gifts. This benefits the merchants.

A cent or two the first week, increased by a few cents each—and when the year closes the sum is ready for you.

BANKING PRIVILEGE

Members of the club have the privilege of every facility the bank affords, They can open regular savings accounts and enjoy any other service the bank renders Success to The Christmas Money Club. It's a prosperity booster for young and old of all classes in Tecumseh.

"Mutt & Jeff in College"

When Bud Fisher's original creations, Mutt & Jeff, reach Tecumseh, Thursday December 16th, patrons of the Bradley will have a chance to see these two world famous comedians in an entirely new play, "Mutt & Jeff in College." It is claimed by Gus Hill, the owner of the Mutt & Jeff shows that this seasons play is the best he has ever put out for this company. An entirely new 'plot' is used, all new musical numbers new scenery and costumes all help to make "Mutt & Jeff in College" a treat to be remembered

To those who have seen these inimitable comedians in their former productions nothing farther need be said as they already know the high class of amusements the Guss Hill "Mutt & Jeff" companies always present. To those who have not seen them before we would advise them to be sure and see them in their new piece. They are the greatest comedians on the stage today.

The "Mutt & Jeff in College company numbers nearly 50 people, a special 60 foot car is required to handle the mammouth scenic production, the costumes and electrical effects are far above the the average. It is very probable that the Adrian orchestra will be engaged to furnish the music.

The date is Thursday December 16th. Arrange your plans accordingly as you will certainly want to see the one big laughing show of the year.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. According to this account, which has been confirmed, arrests have been made at Bogden. It is asserted discontented workmen are suspected in both instances.

Kaiser's Visit Unexpected.

Rome, Dec. 6.—The Lugano correspondent of the Tribuna reports that he has interviewed a neutral diplomat just arrived from Vienna who states that the Kaiser's recent visit to Vienna was most unexpected, and was made for very grave reasons.

Despite the strict censorship, the legations and embassies have learned, says this diplomat, that the Kaiser endeavored to secure Austria's co-operation in a Turco-German expedition to Egypt. Also, he says, the Kaiser tried to dissuade Emperor Franz Josef from continuing his peace efforts with the help of King Alfonso.

The diplomatist added that internal conditions in the monarchy were grave, owing to the opposition of the Slavs and Magyars to the progressive Germanization of the country. The Slavs, he said, are now conducting an active propaganda among the Slav soldiers with the result that many regiments have mutined, and in others various contingents have been court-martialed.

The real opening of congress will be held on Tuesday when President Wilson with conformity of the custom which he established, will read his address to the houses assembled in joint session.

WESTERN CITIES WILL WIN

St. Louis Will Get Democratic and Chicago Republican Conventions.

Washington, Dec. 6.—The two great national political conventions of 1916 will go to middle western cities. With the members of the Democratic national committee in town for the meeting of the committee and with the vanguard of the Republican national committee, which will meet a week later, it has developed that the leaders of both parties have dismissed from consideration all cities applying for the big quadrennial shows except Chicago and St. Louis.

Indications are that St. Louis will be awarded the Democratic convention and that the Republican convention will go to Chicago.

It is believed that the losses that may be sustained by a number of estates will aggregate more than $10,000.

Hillsdale, Mich., Dec. 6.—D. A. Taylor of Allen, Hillsdale county, has been losing hogs from a malady that baffled local veterinarians.

An expert said the hogs had died of ptomaine poisoning, caused by table salt which it had been the custof of the feeder to place in swill barrels. The salt, acting upon ground wheat feed, formed an active poison which produced blindness and asphyxiation and ending in the death of the animals.

ILLINOIS TO ABANDON PRISON HONOR PLAN

Warden Claims Allen System Prejudicial to Discipline.

JOLIET, ILL. — The honor system among convicts in Joliet penitentiary is doomed. "Ned" Allen's method of handling the convicts, which brought him criticism, fame, and finally, tragedy, will pass into history with the passing of 1915.

Warden Zimmer believes the system pernicious and will enforce in its place what he calls the "merit rule."

"The honor scheme divided the men into two classes," he said, "the good and the bad. Convicts of the higher grade resented the privileges granted other convicts not as good as themselves and claimed it gave them no incentive to stay within the honor system law. They came to regard their privileges as rights and there were so many abuses of discipline that the solitary cells constantly are crowded."

ACCEPTS CITY WATER OFFER

Menominee Company Agrees to Take $200,000 for Plant.

MENOMINEE, MICH. — The end of the long battle between the Menominee Water company and the city of Menominee is near an end. The water company has sent notice to the city that it is willing to accept the city's offer of $200,000.

The water company's acceptance of the $200,000 offer came after the freeholders of the city had voted a bond issue of $225,000, the money to be raised by these bonds to be used either for the purchase of the present plant of the water company for $200,000 and the erection of a filtration plant, or should the company refuse the $200,000 offer, for building a municipal competitor for the water company.

GERMAN PLANT IS WRECKED, MANY DIE

It Is Reported Dissatisfied Worker Is Plotter.

LONDON, ENG. — Destruction of a large ammunition factory at Halle, Prussian Saxony, by an explosion with the loss of several hundred lives, is reported in a message from Kolding, Denmark, to Copenhagen, forwarded by Reuter's correspondent.

It is said a similar disaster was narrowly escaped at Bogden, Silesia. The ammunition factory there, it is reported, was saved by the discovery that it had been undermined.

According to this account, which has been confirmed, arrests have been made at Bogden. It is asserted discontented workmen are suspected in both instances.

BROTHER WILL SAVE JUDGE

Will Make Good Shortage of $10,000 in Jurist's Accounts.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — That shortages, if any, in the accounts of Probate Judge Frank W. Van Wickle of Oceana county will be repaid by his brother, Fred Van Wickle, a millionaire miller of Nebraska, who recently came here to make arrangements for such a course, it is reported, was the assurance given out by the official's friends.

It is believed that the losses that may be sustained by a number of estates will aggregate more than $10,000.

PENNY BRIBE FREES MAN CHILD ACCUSED

Court Dismisses Serious Case Because Tot Took Cent.

GRAND RAPIDS, WIS. — The case against James Chebily, charged with a serious offense against six-year-old Tennie Ambrose, was thrown out of court by Superior Judge Dunham, because it was shown that Prosecutor Barnard had given the child a penny and the matron register of the juvenile home had given her candy to induce her to tell her story.

GEOGRAPHERS ARE GAINING IN MICHIGAN

Substantial Increase in National Membership Shown.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — In Detroit there are 3,420 members of the National Geographic society. This is a gain of 1,120 in the past year and 2,220 since 1913, when Detroit's membership in the society was 1,200.

The number of members of the Nation Geographic society in Michigan is 11,440, as against 6,800 a year ago. The state membership in 1913 was 4,220. In other Michigan cities the society membership is as follows: Ann Arbor, 296; Battle Creek, 167; Bay City, 183; Flint, 184; Grand Rapids, 854; Jackson, 164; Kalamazoo, 275; Lansing, 250; Saginaw, 306.

A suggestion that has from time to time been made is that the National Geographic society repeat in other cities some of the lectures, with illustrations, as delivered in Washington.

With 3,420 members in Detroit and with similar large memberships in other big cities, a successful lecture circuit could be arranged, it is figured, so that the National Geographic members in other cities could enjoy the same privileges and at the same minimum of expense as those members residing in Washington.

MURDER SUSPECT ARRESTED

Detroit Man Held in New York Accused of Brutal Crime.

DETROIT, MICH. — Nathan Corman, suspected murderer of Mrs. Bertha Newgeldt, who has been wanted by Detroit police since November 1, has been arrested in New York City, according to a telegram received by Superintendent Marquardt.

Corman is alleged to have committed the most brutal murder in Detroit in many years. About 8 o'clock on the morning of November 1, the body of Mrs. Newfeldt was found in her home. Her throat had been cut from ear to ear. Corman, whom is said to have been in the house early that morning, was missing with some jewelry and money from the Newfeldt home.

SALT IN FEED KILLS HOGS

Hillsdale Farmer Discovers He Was Causing Death of Herd.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — D. A. Taylor of Allen, Hillsdale county, has been losing hogs from a malady that baffled local veterinarians.

An expert said the hogs had died of ptomaine poisoning, caused by table salt which it had been the custof of the feeder to place in swill barrels. The salt, acting upon ground wheat feed, formed an active poison which produced blindness and asphyxiation and ending in the death of the animals.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — E. P. Foley, a local jeweler, has made the fabled reaper obey that poetic summons "Backwards, turn backward, O time, in thy flight."

We print below a letter from Commissioner Helme asking Mr. Avery a few questions in regard to his catechism which we printed in our last issue.

We also print Mr. Avery's answer to Mr. Helme's questions. In view of the fact that this little controversy has been given wide publicity, we feel that our readers will read it with interest.

Adrian, Michigan.
December 3rd, 1915.

F. D. Avery,
Tecumseh, Mich.

Dear Sir:

Noticing your attack on me in the newspapers I have become inquisitive and would like to ask you a few questions.

1st. Did you ever sell cranberries in a liquid quart measure?

2nd. If so, do you think it was justified because you extend your costomers credit?

3rd. If you never sold cranberries by liquid measure do you approve of your competitors doing so?

4th. The law say dry commodities shall not be sold by liquid measure. If you were charged with the inforcement of the weights and measures law as I am what would you do to grocers who are selling liquid quarts of cranberries for dry quarts.

Signed Respectfully
J. W. HELME,
Dairy & Food Commissioner.

Tecumseh, Michigan.
December 7th, 1915.

Mr. James W. Helme,
Adrian, Mich.

Dear Sir:

It gives me great pleasure to answer your questions.

In regard to your first question, "Did you ever sell cranberries in a liquid quart measure?" I will explain to you that twenty-five years ago, when I commenced to sell cranberries, all dealers sold them by that measure. Right here, I beg to inform you that the consumer was not defrauded by the transaction, as the retail price was based on the number of measures contained in a barrel of cranberries. With the kind of measure used at that time a barrel of cranberries contained about a hundred so-called quarts. If ten dollars were the amount that must be realized for a barrel, the price should be ten cents per measure. If the measure had been larger the price would have had to be higher. If ninety measures were all the barrel contained, the price must be eleven cents or more per measure. Now that the Commissioner has ruled that cranberries must be sold by dry measure, the dealer must sell at a price that will bring the necessary amount.

Having given you the conditions that explain the situation, I will answer your question by saying, "Yes, I have sold cranberries in a liquid quart measure." I will also say that I do not think I did anything wrong by so doing, as no one was defrauded, which fact I have clearly explained in a manner which you cannot fail to understand.

Question number two. "If so, do you think it was justified because you extend your customers credit?" I have already shown you how it was justified. The latter clause in your question is as far from having any bearing on the question as east is from the west.

Question number three. "If you never sold cranberries by liquid measure do you approve of your competitors doing so?" I certainly do not.

In your fourth puestion you ask what I would do if I were charged with the inforcement of the weights and measures law as you are. I would enforce the law and prosecute those who refuse to comply with the law. I see no other way in which you can do your duty. If you would do that you would find most of the grocers in Michigan with you.

As far as I am concerned, I have always been in favor of Pure Food laws, and have always been glad to have an inspector call on me and explain anything that I did not understand and I have never refused to comply with the rules laid down by a Commissioner. I believe a majority of the grocers feel the same way. I am proud to be in the grocery business. I think it an honorable and useful calling, and the men engaged in it will average as well as those engaged in other lines.

I was inspired to write my catechism, "Political Preparedness," after reading your catechism, "Cranberries and Quarts", by the fact that you laid yourself open to criticism by giving people the impression that grocers were dishonest.

Had it come from someone in private life, I would not have thought much about it, but coming from a man in your position it is no joke, and was certainly an uncalled for attack and also an insult to every respectable man engaged in the grocery business in the great State of Michigan.

Signed Respectfully,
F. D. AVERY.

OLD AND NEW WAY TO TREAT CATARRH.

Breathing a Germ Killing Air Endorsed By Actual Results.

The discovery of Hyomei has wrought a wonderful change in the treatment of catarrh.

Prior to three years ago the medicines ordinarily employed in the cure of this disease were drugs, sprays, lotions, etc. In some instances they benefited, but the improvement was not lasting.

With Hyomei you take into the air passages of your throat and head a balsamic air that goes into the most minute cells, and should effectually kill all germs and microbes of catarrh. Its purpose is to enter the blood with the oxygen, killing the germs in the blood and restore health to the whole system. Many astonishing testimonials have been received from those who have been helped by Hyomei.

A complete outfit is inexpensive and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment.

Perhaps the strongest evidence that can be given to doubters, is the fact that C. A. Wright & Son had so much faith in Hyomei that they sell every package under a positive guarantee to refund the money if is does not relieve.

The rooms were tastefully decorated in the Christmas reds and greens each booth having a liberal display of the colors. The fair was a most decided success financially. Mrs. John Nyland and her committees deserve much credit for their untiring work. The supper under the charge of the men was well patronized some 250 being served. Mrs. Robert McClelland catered.

ROAD TO HEALTH IS THROUGH THE KIDNEYS

No person alive is stronger than his kidney. The minute the kidneys become disarranged or clogged with waste the warning is flashed through the entire system. The greater part of all sickness today can be avoided by keeping the kidneys working properly.

C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist can tell you of many well known people in this city whom Solvax, the standard kidney remedy, has restored to health, often after they have tried many other methods of treatment with little or no benefit.

This remarkable kidney remedy is guaranteed to help the worst case of lazy, sluggish or clogged up kidneys, or the general headachy, kinkybacked played-out condition that afflicts people suffering with kidney trouble. Solvax does not simply relieve. It aims to cure.

No other kidney remedy has made such a large percentage of cures as Solvax. It is so large that C. A. Wright & Son are perfectly safe in standing ready to refund the price to any customer whom it does not help.

WIT AND WISDOM

The Wit and Wisdom Club held a very pleasant session Monday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. North on West Chicago street. Mrs. Chas Kemp was leader for the program. The subject for the evening was "Our Town." Mrs. Albert Waring read a vary interesting paper on "The History of Tecumseh" which she supplimented with an original poem along the same line. Supt. Reed then spoke on some of the improvements that would benefit our town which lead to an animated discussion. Last but not least was a paper by Dr. North on the first bride and wedding in Tecumseh, Mr and Mrs Turner appearing in proper costume representing the bride and groom. Just here it may be interesting to note that the first bride was Miss Cynthia Spafford, grandmother to F. B. Wood and well known to the older people of Tecumseh who have many a picture taken by her when they were young. Victrola music was interspersed throughout the program. Light refreshments were served.

OBSERVATORY FOR DULUTH

John H. Darling Offers to Erect One Free of Charge. City Asked to Furnish Site; Council To Decide Soon.

An astronomical observatory to cost $6,000 was offered to Duluth yesterday afternoon free of charge.

Shortly after the council convened for its regular weekly session, John H. Darling assistant United States engineer at the local port for thirty years and at present one of the best known students of astronomy in this part of the country, appeared before the commissioners with an offer to erect an observatory without any cost to the city, if the council would grant him permission to use a corner of the public playground at Ninth avenue west and Third street.

A communication, outlining his plan, was presented by Mr. Darling a few minutes before he introduced a complete set of plans for the observatory. In the letter he said that the building to cost $3,000, would be of brick and in addition to the observatory and a twenty foot-dome, there would be a small library or ante-room adjoining. He would install, he said, a nine-inch refracting telescope equatorially mounted and clock driven, to cost approximately $3,000.

—Duluth Herald

The Darling Observatory

The best monument a man can possibly leave to perpetuate his memory is one which perpetuates what has most appealed to him in his living years. Whatever this may be it is quite sure to represent the best that is in him, his ideals and his conception of useful effort.

He is doubly wise, if it is his lifetime he builds his monument himself, supervising its structure and seeing that it fulfills his desire in its utility. So it is not only Duluth, but J. H. Darling himself, that is to be congratulated on his determination to build, in this city, for the city, a semi public observatory.

Mr. Darling has for years been a student of astronomy. All the time he had free from his formal tasks as a government engineer, he devoted to this science. He has gained a wider repute than Duluth knew, as he has never exploited himself. He has become a skillful observer and a recognised authority.

We clip the above articles from Duluth papers of Dec. 1, knowing that they would be of interest to many in Tecumseh and Ridgeway. Mr. Darling was a former Ridgeway resident, and Mrs. Darling nee Addie Ford was one of Tecumseh's own girls, both are so well and favorably known that anything relative to them will be appreciated.

BARN PURCHASED FOR WM. O. HAYDENBERK

The barn purchased was 18x22 feet. The friends of Mr Haydenberk have taken the barn down and will remove it to his farm and rebuild it. This will be a great help to him as all his barns were wiped out and he has been in such straighened circumstances that he has been unable to rebuild.

ALL MEN WELCOME

A Personal Guarantee From Guss Hill Concerning the New "Mutt & Jeff in College"

In presenting "Mutt & Jeff In College" for the approaching season, I do so with the utmost confidence that the production will prove to be the best I have yet offered of this series.

In selecting a vehicle I have exercised care in securing a play that will be distinctly different from my three former productions, "Mutt & Jeff," "Mutt & Jeff in Panama" and "Mutt & Jeff in Mexico," all of which made new box office records throughout the entire country. "Mutt & Jeff In College" presents Bud Fisher's inimitable characters in a radically different atmosphere, surrounded by new types and in new envirement.

The first act takes place upon the campus of "Stratford College." "Mutt & Jeff" are introduced as a couple of expert football players, whom the students have persuaded to pursue an elementary course in college, being the only way in which their services could secured for the football team.

Endless comedy situations are possible under the circumstances, and are taken full advantage of. Of course "Mutt & Jeff" are "Hazed" as are all freshmen, with side-splitting results. Prominent among the new characters, is found "Hesekiah Doolittle," the town constable, who is kept busy seeing that the law is not seriously fractured by the students. "Mutt & Jeff" are initiated into the secrets of the fraternity of "Eta-Bita-Phi" with screamingly funny results.

The football contest with "Trinity College" results in a complete victory won by our heroes, "Mutt & Jeff," by clever strategy.

The second part represents the graduation exercises in the grand ball room of the Astor Hotel, built to represent a stage upon a stage.

The graduates offer a burlesque on "Julius Cæsar" which is hilariously funny. Following which is offered a big vaudeville entertainment, and ending with a gigantic climax. There are girls a-plenty with an accompaniment of catchy whistleable music lending an enchantment You will therefore realize that "Mutt & Jeff In College" IS DIFFERENT.

"Mutt & Jeff in College" will be at the Bradley Opera House, next Thursday, December 16th. Owing to this engagement coming so near the holidays a special arrangement has been made regarding prices. The best seats being only $1.00 other good seats at 75c and 50c. A special price of 25c for children.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. ENTENTE MAKES IRON-CLAD PACT

London Gives Out Agreement of Quintuple Allies.

JAPAN AND ITALY ARE PARTIES

Neither of Five Nations Can Make Peace Without Consent of Other Four—Any Terms Proposed by One Must Meet Unanimous Consent of Others.

London, Dec. 6.—The official press bureau made public the following official statement:

"The Italian government having decided to accede to the agreement between the British, French and Russian governments signed in London on Sept. 5, 1914, which was acceded to by the Japanese government on Oct. 19, 1915, the undersigned, being duly authorized thereto by the respective governments, declares as facts:

"That the British, French, Italian, Japanese and Russian governments mutually engage not to conclude peace separately during the present war. The five governments agree that when the terms of peace come to be discussed no one of the allies will demand conditions of peace without previous agreement with each of the other allies.

"Done in London this thirtieth day of November, 1915, Grey, Paul Cambon, Imperiali, K. Inouye, Benckendorff."

RUSSIA IS BIG DRY LESSON

People Saving Money and National Revenues Are Nearly Normal.

Petrograd, Dec. 6.—According to the statement of the minister of finance the financial position of the population is shown by the growth of savings bank deposits. October's figures of these deposits show the reaching of the high-water mark with deposits of 74,000,000 rubles, as against 22,000,000 rubles in October, 1914. Since the beginning of the war it was announced the savings of the people have increased 499,000,000 rubles.

In spite of the loss of revenues because of the prohibition upon the sale of spiritous beverages and a diminution in imports amounting to 6,982,000,000 rubles during the last fiscal year, the decrease in ordinary revenues, the statement says, amounted only to 482,000,000 rubles, increases in revenue from other sources swelling the total.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS IN SPLIT

Hamburger Echo Says Forty Favor Abandoning Claims to Territory.

Copenhagen, Dec. 6.—The Socialist newspaper Hamburger Echo says that a strong minority of the Socialist representation in the Reichstag demand immediate peace negotiations on the basis of Germany formally abandoning all claims to the conquered territories.

The majority, according to these reports, disapproves of the minority's anti-annexationist attitude.

BATTLESHIPS NAVY'S NEED, SAYS DANIELS

Secretary Declares Battle Cruisers Have Been Overated.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Full details of Secretary Daniels' continuous naval construction program involving the expenditure of half a billion dollars in the course of the next five years are contained in his annual report as head of the navy department.

Battleships are still the primary need, he declares. Mr. Daniels says:

"As in the case of submarines, so in the case of battle cruisers; the particular course of the present war does not justify the prevalent exaggerated idea of their importance."

On account of congestion of work in both the navy yards and civil establishments Mr. Daniels proposes to begin work on two battleships and two cruisers only during the first year of the five year program.

If Secretary Daniels' program is carried out, the navy should be composed of the following vessels built or building in 1921: Battleships, first line, 27; battle cruisers, 6; battleships, second line, 25; armored cruisers, 10; scout cruisers, 13; cruisers, first class, 5; cruisers, second class, 3; cruisers, third class, 10; destroyers, 108; fleet submarines, 18; coast submarines, 157; monitors, 6; gunboats, 20; supply ships, 4; fuel ships, 15; transports, 4; tenders to torpedo vessels, 5; special types, 8; ammunition ships, 2.

Eye witnesses say Stout suddenly whipped out his revolver. Screaming the woman turned and ran inside his boarding house. He followed, and as she raced through the hallway he fired. ST. PETER'S MEN'S CLASS BANQUET

GOVERNOR W. N. FERRIS AND JUDGE A. E. LACY PRINCIPLE SPEAKERS

Over 200 Men Partook of Banquet at Witherell Hall Friday Evening

Over two hundred men gathered at Witherell hall Friday night as guests of the Men's class of St. Peters church. Over fifty of these were men from out of town.

The hall was thrown open at 5:30 and the banqueters assembled in Odd Fellows hall where an opportunity was given them to meet the Governor and Judge Lacy.

At six o'clock the men marched down to the banquet hall. The speakers' table was arranged across the head of the room while the guests were seated at four long tables which reached from end to end. A basket of cut flowers was used for the center of the speakers' table.

Rev. Rex pronounced the invocation after which an ovation was given to the Governor.

The banquet was served by the ladies of the Episcopal church under the direction of Mrs. F. G. Lewis. Everyone was quickly and bountifully served. Mrs. Charles Mattis catered. Music from a victrola was furnished during the serving by Burton Garlinghouse.

The president of the class, C. F. Patterson, acted as toastmaster. Mr. Patterson tried to make his hearers believe that the job was too much for him and that he "wished he was dead" telling a story to illustrate his feelings and while everyone enjoyed the story no one believed him as he was very much alive and showed real talent as a toastmaster.

The first number on the program was a solo, "Summer Roses" by Mrs. Edward Heilman.

Toastmaster Patterson then welcomed our Governor in a few well chosen words and introduced him as the first speaker of the evening.

The Governor took for his subject "What makes the wheels go round?" "What makes the wheels of a locomotive go round, is it the engineer?" He said, "no, it was steam and electricity makes the wheels of a trolley car go round." He proceeded to tell some of the things "which made the wheels go round" in a human being.

Education he likened to the engineer who operates the locomotive but the real force which made "the wheels go round" were the instincts, cravings, impulses and heredity of the individual. He illustrated this point with several experiences from the lives of public men.

His old family physician who killed himself by taking cocaine after studying the effects of the drug habit all his life and who had overcome both the drink habit and the morphine habit. Again the case of Newton C. Dougherty a noted educator who for a great many years was suprentendent of the schools at Peoria, Ill. and who embezzled $500,000 from funds which belonged to the school board. He was sentenced to the penetentiary and while serving his sentence planed further thefts which resulted in his term of imprisonment being lengthened.

The case of Dr. Hillis the New York devine was another illustration used His love for power, influence and wealth was his undoing.

Heredity exercises a great effect upon the growing child. It is handed down to him from over a 1000 years. He sighted from his own case. Gray at 35 years, his father before him became gray early. Some of the members of his family had brown hair taking it from their mother and have not yet become gray. His father had a bad temper and he found himself possessed with a temper. He was fond of a fight and licked (?) every day in his life. Everyone would be helped if they would stop and take a blue print of themselves.

Home envirements have a good deal to do with making the "Wheels go round." The child should be carefully reared in the home, obedience should be taught. Every boy or girl that this community sends to Lansing or Adrian we, the community are responsible for. Every normal child is good. He had heard of an old codger who after the death of his dear helpmate had made the statement, "I have lived with Jane for forty years and never a cross word did she give me." "That man" he says "is a liar, as that kind of a woman never lived and if she had she wouldn't have been any good." "God never made such a woman."

Someone had told him that they thought Henry Ford was a "Nut" for attempting his peace trip. He told him he was another as Henry Ford had shown a great deal of courage in trying to do the world a great good.

"The home can't do the work of the school or the school the work of the home." The speaker stated that though many ways had been discovered to shorten the process of all manufacturing no way had ever been discovered to shorten the moulding of human character. Our schools should come in for some radical changes to his way of thinking teachers should be hired for twelve months in the year instead of nine. Schools should be open to the parents as well as the child. In some cases the parents need the school most. Anyone with a thirst for knowledge should have the opportunity of getting it at the school. Domestic science might be right and proper in school work but the girl should be taught to make bread by her mother. The child should be trained to work at home.

Sex hygiene is being taught in the schools while he thought it should be taught to the parents, no one is so fit to impart this delicate subject to the child as the mother.

ALLIES DRIVEN OUT OF SERBIA

Anglo-French Forces Retreat Across Greek Border.

LOSSES HEAVY, SAYS BERLIN

London and Paris Claim Retirement Was in Good Order—Losses 1,500 Men and Eight Cannon, British Report Claims—Berlin Says Serbs Lose 6,500.

London, Dec. 13.—"The Anglo-French troops, after suffering a series of decisive defeats by the army of General Todoroff, are retreating in miserable condition over the Greek frontier. Their losses in men and material of all kinds, according to the report of our allies, have been extraordinarily heavy."

This paragraph is from the official statement issued by the war office in Berlin.

French Verify Report.

Verification of the German report of the complete rout of the allied armies came in an official statement issued in Paris, which sayss:

"Continuing their withdrawal movement, our troops of the army of the East on the night of December 10 retired without fighting on the line from Smokgica to Lake Doiran."

The first of a series of daily communiques to be issued by the British war office covering operations of the British troops gives further details of the retirement from Serbia. The statement says:

"In the fighting to the northward of Saloniki, after sustaining violent attacks delivered by the enemy in overwhelming numbers, the tenth division succeeded with the help of re-enforcements in retiring to a strong position on a line from Lake Doiran westwards to the valley of the Vardar.

Division Fought Well.

"In conjunction with our allies the division is reported to have fought well against very heavy odds, and it is largely due to the gallantry of our troops, especially those of the Munster fusiliers, the Dublin fusiliers and the Connaught rangers, that the withdrawal was successfully accomplished.

"Owing to the mountainous nature of the country it was necessary to place eight field guns for the purpose of defense in positions from which it was possible to withdraw them when the retirement took place.

"Our casualties amounted to some 1,500 men."

Lake Doiran is bisected by the Greek border, which shows that the retreat of the allies has carried them into Greece.

Bulgarians Repulsed.

"On the day of December 11 we repulsed various Bulgarian attacks," the French statement adds, indicating that the pursuing army is right on the heels of the allies, who are fighting desperately to maintain the integrity of their retreating forces.

The Berlin official statement referring to the fighting on the Montenegrin and Albanian borders declares the Austrians have captured 6,500 prisoners in the last two days.

VIRGIL MINE REOPENS JAN. 1

Only Two Mines in Entire District Are Now Idle.

Iron River, Mich., Dec. 13.—The Wickwire Mining company is preparing to unwater the Virgil mine, north of the city, and expects to have a full crew of men at work about the first of the year. The Virgil is a new mine and had been opened up only a short time when the general shut down in mining occurred two years ago. The Virgil will give employment to fifty to seventy-five men. The Youngs mine is being unwatered and a full crew will likely be at work in this property by Jan. 1.

This leaves only the Berkshire and Fogarty mines idle in the entire district.

"Mutt & Jeff in College"

AT BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE THURSDAY DECEMBER 16

"MUTT & JEFF IN COLLEGE" is the title of the fourth edition of Bud Fisher's cartoon comedy, produced in musical comedy form by Gus Hill, who has signined his intention of offering an entire new play each successive season. It is unlikely that any theatrical production in the history of the American stage has enjoyed success both artistic and financially equal to that which has been continuous since the premier presentation of this play more than three years ago.

Tired humanity seeks diversion, with little thought or worry as to its artistic origin. If a play or its actors are able to extract incessant laughter from an audience naturally disposed to be incredulous, that play or actor becomes an unqualified success. Mutt and Jeff started a tidal wave of merriment that has been continuous multiplying day by day since its inception. Like Bud Fisher's daily cartoons, as long as Mr. Hill is able to offer new comedy features each season, so long will Mutt and Jeff play its yearly engagement to capacity audiences. One does not have to stretch their imagination to any great extent to conceive just how funny the play will be, Mr. Hill has had an entire new scenic production built at great expence, together with the hundreds of gorgeous costumes necessary to fit the environment. Theatre-goers who have laughed at Mutt and Jeff before, perhaps several times, will find this offering so entirely new as to have the effect of being an innovation. Mutt and Jeff will arrive for an engagement of one night this week Thursday Dec. 16 at the Bradley Opera house. Manager Marks is entirely justified in urging his patrons to secure seats early, in fact as soon as the sale is announced. Past experience has proved to him the advisability of this. This is the big show the same company that plays six performances at the Valentine theatre, Toledo, commencing next Sunday not the one night stand company. The seat sale opened at Hay's Bakery this morning. The Adrian orchestra has been engaged to furnish the music for the "Mutt and Jeff in College" company.

STOMACH MISERY QUICKLY VANISHES

Your money back if you want it is the way in which C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist are selling Mi-o-na, the great dyspepsia remedy.

This is an unusual plan, but Mi-o-na has so much merit and is so almost invarialy successful in relieving all forms of indigestion that they run but little risk in selling under a guarantee of this kind.

Do not be miserable or make your friends miserable with your dyspepsia. Mi-o-na will help you. If it doesn't, tell C. A. Wright & Son that you want your money back and they will cheerfully refund it.

A change for the better will be seen from the first few doses of Mi-on-a and its continued use will soon start you on the road to perfect digestion and enjoyment of food.

Mi-o-na has been so uniformly successful that every box is sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not relieve. What fairer proposition could be made?

C. A. Wright & Son give their personal guarantee of "money back if you want it" with every box of Mi-o-na that they sell. A guarantee like this speaks volumes for the merit of the remedy.

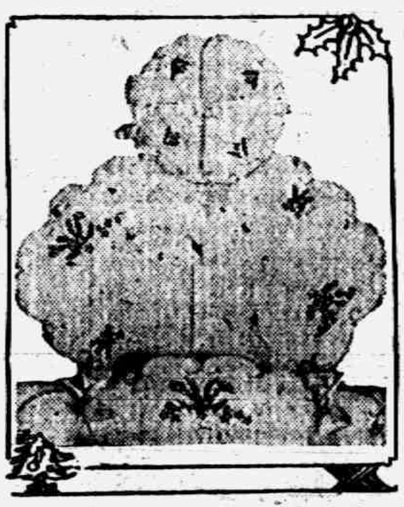
GIFTS OF NEEDLEWORK.

With Skill and Time One May Make Charming Presents.

With a very little material and some ingenuity many handsome gifts may be fashioned for the Christmas holiday.

A friend who keeps house or one who expects to do so would be delighted to find in her Christmas stocking a set of embroidered towels. These towels are done either in white satin stitch or, where the predominating color of your friend's room is known to you, it is a very pretty little conceit to have the embroidery match that color.

Dollies, large and small, embroidered in holly berries and green leaves, are the most appropriate Yuletide gifts that can be thought of. The dollies shown are of fine Irish linen and are round, and the edges are scalloped and embroidered in white satin stitch, the design in the center being done in red and green.



EMBROIDERED TABLE LINEN.

It is really wonderful how the true Christmas spirit—or the absence thereof—is denoted in the doing up of a gift. When the sending of a remembrance is prompted by duty only or the thought that it is the usual, the expected thing, this motive leaves its impress on mere wrapping paper and insensate twine. On the other hand, a spray of holly atop the gift will carry more cheer and personal greeting than an expensive card with "Merry Christmas" in beautiful type.

The possibilities of tissue paper, gay ribbons and holly often have been dwelt on, but there are those who would color their gifts with a more striking individuality.

One woman with deft fingers lays in each year a stock of holly and forms wreaths, in the center of which she ties her gifts with red ribbon. Still another, whose friends cannot fail to recognize a certain delicate, elusive perfume which she affects, wafts a faint whiff of the same odor with each Christmas package.

SHORT PURSE PRESENT.

Those Who Have Not Unlimited Pocketbooks Must Make Gifts.

If one were to have unlimited sums to spend on Christmas presents what an easy thing it would be to give each one a lovely gift, just what is wanted! But there are mighty few women who have this good fortune, so that most of us, if we wish to give really nice things to our friends, must make them. After all, isn't it much nicer to get something that has that personal element in it that only comes when the giver has put time and work and thought into the making?

There are heaps of nice things that need not take too much of one's time. Only the first and almost the most important thing is to decide what sort of present is suitable for each different person, for the usual haphazard way of sending any sort of thing to people is as unsatisfactory to the giver as to the receiver. There is undeniably a certain kind of pleasure in giving something which has been given careful thought and which one knows is just the right and the acceptable thing. There are a few things which can be made even by one who is not so very skillful with the needle and which certainly ought not to cost very much.

You can't say it backward without a drawl!

ST. PETER'S MEN'S CLASS BANQUET

Then with much force the Governor said, "If you people don't get together and build a new school, I hope to God a fire or a cyclone will wipe out that building you call a school here." "Those who object to [illegible] ed public improvement are dead ones and should be buried way back in the fartherest corner of your cemetery. Don't build it too plain; ornament it; build a park about it and plannt flowers along the walk so people may admire them.

"A great many people buy costly things and put them away in their homes when they should place some of them in their windows so people passing may see them."

He put in a plea for clean amusements. The European war was touched on and it was of his opinion that it would be fought until either side, or both, became exhausted. He spoke of the study he had been making of prison life and prison reform, and resented the criticism people were heaping upon him because of his paroling prisoners; suggested that they make some inquiries before criticising, as there was nothing secret about the records.

The Governor closed his remarks by paying Tecumseh a complement, stating we had a beautiful town and he hoped we would make it still more beautiful.

The ladies quartette composed of Mesdames Eugene Rosacrans, Richard Mead, Ella Hodges and Miss Martha Caldwell, accompanied by Mrs. Dale Hodges sang "The Miller's Wooing."

Judge Arthur E. Lacy was introduced and took for his subject, "Family Troubles." The Judge prefaced his remarks with a glowing tribute to Governor Ferris and stated how as a boy, he had helped him to gain an education.

Judge Lacy was for eight months judge of the court of domestic relations in the city of Detroit and held the office until the court was held unconstitutional and discontinued. His address was listened to with strict attention and was a review largely of his work as judge. In this short term over 5,000 divorce cases had been brought into his court. In more than one fifth of these cases the parties were reunited making homes for 2300 children. A sort of an employment bureau was established through which means many others were brought together. Only five per cent. of these put on oral probation had failed.

Marriages were too lightly made and divorces were to easily obtained many taking a chance on marriage knowing that a divorce could be easily purchased. He advocated a court for stopping trouble. A child of a divorced couple in his mind was worse off than if his parents were dead.

The biggest cause for divorce is the little things which happen in married life and are allowed to grow. Intoxicating liquor has a tremendous bearing on family troubles. "Puppy" marriages are responsible for a large number and the Judge stated that ten per cent. of the divorce cases tried in Detroit are due to Windsor marriages.

A child should be taught to reverence its parents. The word mother, is a word which cannot be defined and it is truly said that "The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand which rocks the world."

Parental delinquency causes eighty per cent of the child delinquency.

The speaker pleaded for cleaner amusements.

Following Judge Lacy was a vocal solo "Old World Serenade" by John Pennington.

Rev. F. Hewitt closed the program with a few remarks on Religion and the Church. He told of the work the Men's class were trying to do in Tecumseh and of simular movements all over the country. They were doing a real service whenever they found gambling, drinking, etc. in violation of the law. They took a manly course and reminded the offenders of their duty ignoring the sheriff and officers who would probably do nothing anyway. This course is bringing results. Rev. Hewitt pleaded with the men to give their support to the Church.

We have not heard how the class came out financially but whether they made or lost they have expended their time and money wisely. They gave to the men of this community the best and have implanted into the minds and hearts thoughts that will take root and grow. We congratulate the class on the big success of their banquet.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS
Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. Guaranteed here by
B. J. Pulver.

U. S. Demands That Vienna Yield At Once.

STRONGEST PROTEST OF WAR

Austro-Hungarian Government Warned of Break in Relations—"Wanton Slaughter," "Outrage," "Abhorent" Are Some of Terms Used in Describing Attack on Ancona.

Washington, Dec. 13.—It rests with Austria to say whether there will be a break with the United States within the next few days.

The state department has made public the text of its note to Austria on the sinking of the Italian steamship Ancona in the Mediterranean on November 7, with the loss of several American lives.

The note gives plain notice that unless the demands of the United States are met promptly friendly relations between the two governments will be broken off.

It is the most imperative communication sent by the United States to any government since the beginning of the war, and one of the most severe in diplomatic history.

Text of Note.

The full text of the note is:

"The Secretary of State to Ambassador Penfield:

"Reliable information obtained from American and other survivors who were passengers on the steamship Ancona show that on Nov. 7th a submarine flying the Austro-Hungarian flag fired a solid shot toward the steamship, that thereupon the Ancona attempted to escape but being overhauled by the submarine she stopped, that after a brief period and before the crew and passengers were all able to take to the boats the submarine fired a number of shells at the vessel and finally torpedoed and sank her while there were yet many persons on board, and that by gun fire and foundering of the vessel a large number of persons lost their lives or were seriously injured among whom were citizens of the United States.

Austrian Statement Admits Offense.

"The public statement of the Austro-Hungarian admiralty has been brought to the attention of the government of the United States and received careful consideration. This statement substantially confirms the principal declaration of the survivors, as it admits that the Ancona after being shelled was torpedoed and sunk while persons were still on board.

"The Austro-Hungarian government has been advised, through the correspondence which has passed between the United States and Germany of the attitude of the government of the United States as to the use of submarines in attacking vessels of commerce, and the acquiescence of Germany in that attitude, yet with full knowledge on the part of the Austro-Hungarian government of the views of the United States as expressed in no uncertain terms to the ally of Austria-Hungary, the commander of the submarines which attacked the Ancona failed to put in a place of safety the crew and passengers of the vessel, which they proposed to destroy because it is presumed of the impossibility of taking it into port as a prize of war.

Calls It Wanton Slaughter.

"The government of the United States considers that the commander violated the principles of international law and of humanity by shelling and torpedoing the Ancona before the persons on board had been put in a place of safety or even given sufficient time to leave the vessel. The conduct of the commander can only be characterized as wanton slaughter of defenseless non-combatants since at the time when the vessel was shelled and torpedoed she was not, it appears, resisting or attempting to escape and no other reason is sufficient to excuse such an attack, not even the possibility of rescue.

"The government of the United States is forced therefore to conclude either that the commander of the submarine acted in violation of his instructions or that the imperial and royal government failed to issue instructions to the commanders of its submarines in accordance with the law of nations and the principles of humanity. The government of the United States is unwilling to believe the latter alternative and to credit the Austro-Hungarian government with an intention to permit its submarines to destroy the lives of helpless men, women and children. It prefers to believe that the commander of the submarine committed this outrage without authority and contrary to the general or special instructions which he had received.

Demands Drastic Redress.

"As the good relations of the two countries must rest upon a common regard for law and humanity the government of the United States cannot be expected to do otherwise than to demand that the imperial and royal government denounce the sinking of the Ancona as an illegal and indefensible act, that the officer who perpetrated the deed be punished and that reparation by the payment of an indemnity be made for the citizens of the United States who were killed or injured by the attack on the vessel.

Act Inhumane and Barbarous.

"The government of the United States expects that the Austro-Hungarian government, appreciating the gravity of the case, will accede to its demand promptly, and it rests this expectation upon the belief that the Austro-Hungarian government will not sanction or defend an act which is condemned by the world, as inhumane and barbarous, which is abhorrent to all civilized nations, and which has caused the deaths of innocent American citizens.

SCIENTIST FINDER OF ANCESTOR OF HORSE

Pliohippus Important Link in Evolution of Species.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 13.—Dr. E. L. Troxell, who resigned as assistant curator of the University of Michigan museum last June to undertake scientific research work in paleontology, has recently returned from that expedition with some rare specimens, among them a complete skeleton of a three-toed horse and a partial skeleton of a one-toed horse, which lived a mere matter of one or two million years ago.

The one-toed horse, known to scientists as Pliohippus, lived to form the connecting link between the three-toed animal, Mesohippus, and the modern horse. The wild little Mesohippus, light of body and fleet of foot as the modern antelope, roamed the Bad Lands of Dakota 2,000,000 years ago—so Dr. Troxell says. Geologists are great spendthrifts when it comes to time. This Mesohippus stood but two feet high at full growth and it became extinct before the one-toed horse, which stood as high as a Shetland pony, came into existence.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 13.—Reports that have reached George Ketcham, Toledo, former owner, trainer and driver of the lion-hearted trotter, Cresceus, 2:02¼, state that the former great trotting stallion is being used for war service in Russia.

Cresceus was the talk of the harness world for several seasons when his terrific speed and wonderful gameness made him a horse admired by the entire horse fraternity and an equine whose name became a household word in every family where the light harness sport was the favorite pastime. He was sold to a Russian horseman for $25,000.

DOUBLY PROVEN

Tecumseh Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence

This Tecumseh citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of undoubted benefit.

The facts are now confirmed.

Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. C Stevenson, Wyandotte and Potawatamie St., Tecumseh says: The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp shooting pain across the small of my back, which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did, procuring my supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches left and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me. In fact, I felt like a different person."

USES DOAN'S AGAIN.

OVER FIVE YEARS LATER Mrs. Stevenson said: "I am always glad to speak a good word in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel the need of a kidney medicine, I take Doan's Kidney Pills and they always give me the best of relief."

Berlin Claims Two Battalions Annihilated in Balkans.

SERBIA IS CLEARED OF ALLIES

Greek Army Withdraws from Saloniki—May Oppose Bulgarian Advance into Greek Territory—Paris Report Says Losses of Pursuers Were Heavy—Allies in Greece.

BERLIN — "Approximately two British divisions (40,000 men) have been annihilated in Macedonia," the war office announces. The allied armies, entirely out of Serbia, are retreating on Saloniki and the Greek army is withdrawing from their path.

BERLIN — The cnquest of Serbia has been completed. The Anglo-French forces have been driven completely from Serbian soil.

General Todoroff's Bulgarian army has occupied Doiran and Glevgeli, the last Serbian cities held by the expeditionary forces, it was officially announced. Two English divisions were annihilated in the final fighting.

"There are no more free French or English in Macedonian territory," the war office announced.

The last of the Serbian regulars retreated from southwestern Serbia into Albania after the fall of Monastir. They were pursued through Struga and Ochrida by Bulgarian forces.

Bulgarian advance guards have reached the Greek frontier at several points in their pursuit of the retreating Anglo-French.

Greeks Give Allies Clear Field.

LONDON, ENG. — The actual withdrawal of the Greek army from the path of the allied forces which are retreating on Saloniki is said to have been effected. A Reuter telegram filed in Athens says:

"As a result of the agreement between the Greek general staff and the allied generals, the division of the Greek army which has been stationed at Lungaza has been withdrawn to Serres, about fifty miles northeast of Saloniki. The zone between Saloniki and Doiran has been left free for movements of the allied troops.

"The allied military authorities took over a portion of the custom house at Saloniki."

Say Bulgars Lost Heavily.

PARIS — A dispatch to the Havas agency from Athens dated Sunday says:

"The battle between the Bulgarian and the British troops north of Doiran (Serbia) was exceedingly violent," says the Athens correspondent of the Havas agency in a dispatch dated Sunday. The message continues:

"Two columns of Bulgarians with light artillery succeeded in shaking the British line, which retired to the second line. A British attack, supported by powerful artillery, repulsed the enemy, however, inflicting heavy losses. The British are drawing back their line toward the Greek frontier in accordance with General Sarrail's plan.

"The station master at Doiran reports that shells fell today (Sunday) in the vicinity of the station."

British Defeat Turks at Bagdad.

LONDON, ENG. — Turkish attacks on the British Mesopotamian army at Kut-el-Amara have been repulsed, it is officially announced. British reinforcements are being rushed forward.

GRAND RAPIDS MAYOR IS PLAYING OLD GAME

Forced to Do Duty He Clamps Lid on All.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Grand Rapids was a regular stop in Peaceful Valley Sunday as a result of the orders from Director Carroll to the city police force to put on the lid. It was slammed down tight and a heavy weight placed thereon.

The come-all-ye started by Mayor Ellis and Prosecutor Barnard as the result of the effort of the mayor to let the billiard halls run Sunday, quieted down considerably Sunday. Drug stores, candy places, cafes with music, shoe shining parlors, vaudettes and theaters were all given notice as fast as the police could get around that they positively must remain closed. All took the hint except the vaudettes and theaters.

Everybody interested except the theater managers took the notice in good part. The former did not think much of being made the "goats" in a fight between the mayor and prosecutor. The theatrical men, however, were fighting mad and declared they courted arrest to have the matter tried out. They feel secure, in that a few years ago, the people of Grand Rapids, by a referendum, gave them permission to operate Sundays.

SAYS MRS. POST SETTLES

Michigan Inheritance Tax Investigator States She Will Accept $3,000,000.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — A report attributed to the Michigan inheritance tax investigator states that Mrs. C. W. Post, widow of the late food manufacturer of this city, has agreed to accept a cash settlement of $3,000,000 in lieu of her share of the Postum plant, and relinquish all claims to participation in its future affairs and profits.

Mrs. Post, however, declares that the amount was double the above sum and says that for $6,000,000 she would withdraw not only from the Postum Cereal company but also from the Postax company, a cotton manufacturing plant of Post City, Texas.

Boys Submit to Second Transfusion to Aid Parent.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — The second transfusion operation to save the life of Gust Solomson, of Howard City, fifty-two years old, was performed here. In each case sons offered their blood for the work. Both operations were successful but the father's condition is critical. Almost a quart of blood was taken from Hjalmar Solomson.

VILLA IS SLAIN BY OWN AID, IS REPORT

Garrison at Juarez Is Informed of Execution.

EL PASO, TEXAS — General Manuel Ochoa, commanding the garrison at Juarez, states he has received a report that General Francisco Villa had been put to death by troops under General Jose Rodriguez at Casa Grandes, Chihuahua.

"Our dispatches from Casas Grandes have brought this report, but we are not positive it is true," said General Ochoa.

There is no confirmation of the report from any other source here.

There have been many reports recently of the assassination of General Villa, all of which have proved false, but this is the first report of the death of Villa to be announced by one of his own commanders. It will be recalled than an open break occurred recently between General Villa and General Rodrigues when the latter refused to effect a junction with Villa, saying he no longer recognized Villa as his commander. Rodriguez at that time was in command of some 4,000 troops.

COMMUNIPAW RIDDLE GROWS

More Conflicting Reports Reach Washington as to the Ship.

WASHINGTON — More conflicting dispatches about the attack on the American tank steamer Communipaw, have reached the state department. One, dated at Malta, said the Communipaw had just reached Alexandria and that "the casualties will be reported later."

Another dispatch indicated that the Communipaw on Dec. 3 had been stopped by an unknown submarine. Various dispatches last week reported the ship sunk, captured and at Alexandria. Officials do not know what to make of the mass of conflicting reports.

ON THE NORTH POLE EXCHANGE

Hello, Central, give me Santa
Number? Just North Pole;
Just connect me with his palace,
And you might reverse the toll;
For I'd like to talk with Santa,
And ask him why last year
He passed right by our chimney
With his team of swift reindeer.
When I wrote him a nice letter,
Telling him my heart's desire
But I guest this method's quicker
Can't you get him on the wire?

Yes, I wrote and asked old Santa
For some coal and things to eat,
And a warmer dress for Mamma,
And some shoes for baby's feet,
And I asked him for my Papa
For the job he needed so,
And a doll for me-I never Really owned a doll, you know

But I'll tell you-If THIS Christmas
Santa fails to come around,
Why, our hearts will be just broken,
And we'll all of us be found
Hungry and sad and lonesome
There's so little we desire,
Hello, Central! Give me Santa,
CAN'T you get him on the wire?

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION

The suit against John Blesing preferred by his wife for non support was discontinued in Justice Court Tuesday afternoon

Letters written by Mrs Blesing to her husband in Detroit were read for the defense and clearly showed that she approved of his trip to Detroit and his efforts to secure work for the support of herself and children

In view of the fact that these letters showed her evident co-operation, Judge Hesmer ruled that there was no cause for action and promptly dismissed the case. Prosecuting Attorney Bean was present in Court and confirmed the decision.

The Judge and Atty Bean both talked with Mr. Blesing advising him to stay at home with his family and use every effort to provide means for their support.

At the close of the meeting a short program of music both vocal and instrumental was given after which a reception was given to the members of 1915.

Twenty-six members were taken in during the year, and nearly every one was present This proved a very pleasing occasion. Later the lodge adjourned to the dining room where refreshments were served by Mrs. E. E. Hendershott's committee.

"MUTT & JEFF IN COLLEGE"

Long before the hour of opening the box office the steps and the walk were crowded with people for the play of Mutt and Jeff which was presented at the Opera house last evening.

The house was literally packed. The play was a great success, Mutt and Jeff being great and the support fine

The singing and dancing were exceptionally good. In fact the audience was kept in peals of laughter from the start to the finish.

Mr, Marks certainly did well when he secured this show for Tecumseh.

ROAD TO HEALTH IS THROUGH THE KIDNEYS

No person alive is stronger than his kidney. The minute the kidneys become disarranged or clogged with waste the warning is flashed through the entire system. The greater part of all sicknsss today can be avoided by keeping the kidneys working properly.

C. A Wright & Son the popular druggist can tell you of many well known people in this city whom Solvax, the standard kidney remedy, has restored to health, often after they have tried many other methods of treatment with little or no benefit.

This remarkable kidney remedy is guaranteed to help the worst case of lazy, sluggish or clogged-up kidneys, or the general headachy, kinkybacked played-out condition that afflicts people suffering with kidney trouble Solvax does not simply relieve. It aims to cure.

No other kidney remedy has made such a large percentage of cures as Solvax. It is so large that C. A Wright & Son are perfectly safe in standing ready to refund the price to any customer whom it does not help.

68 YEARS AGO

Famous In The Early 30's and 40's Still At It.

Many Michigan people have already heard of the discovery by that English Horse-Farrier of the peculiar liniment which made him famous back in the early 30's and 40's all along the Hudson River Valley. That it has served the American public well is known by the fact that more and more of it has been used since 1846 Here's one of thousands of similar cases. Mr. C Wilkie, of Syracuse, N. Y., says: "Handford's Balsam of Myrrh was the only remedy I used when my arm was hurt. I recommended it for all cuts and bruises." adv

TREAT CATARRH BY NATURE'S METHOD

Every Breath of Hyomei Carries Healing Medicated Air to the Infected Membrane.

Nearly every one who has catarrh knows how foolish it is to try and cure it with sprays, lotions, and the like. Temporary relief may be given, but a cure seldom comes.

Until recently your physician would probably have said the only way to help catarrh would be to have a change of climate; but now with a simple preparation called Hyomei you can carry a health-giving climate in your vest pocket and by breathing it a few minutes four times a day successfully treat yourself.

The complete Hyomei outfit is inexpensive and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the vest pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a life time, and if one bottle does not give permanent relief, an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained at any time for a trifling sum. It is more economical than all remedies advertised for the cure of catarrh, and is the only treatment known to us that follows nature in her method of treating diseases of the respiratory organs.

C A Wright & Son sold a great many Hyomei outfits and the more they sell, the more convinced they are that they are perfectly safe in guaranteeing to refund the money if Hyomei does not relieve. adv

EDSON C. BROWN

TO BE NEXT POSTMASTER OF TECUMSEH

Nomination Has Been Made by the President.

Word was received in Tecumseh from a reliable source Thursday that President Wilson had made the nomination of Edson C. Brown for postmaster at Tecumseh. While this nomination will have to be confirmed by the senate, still it assures the appointment without a doubt of Mr. Brown as postmaster.

There were several candidates in the field for the office and the race has been spirited. Prominate among these was Chris Pocklington. Mr. Pocklington has made a good run for the office and while he was tireless in his efforts still he did not have the endorsement of the prominent democrats of the village

Edson C. Brown was born in Maple Rapids, Clinton county, Michigan, 57 years ago. He has lived in Tecumseh 19 years coming here from Addison. After coming to Tecumseh he was employed for a year by the Lenawee Lumber Co. A year later he established a junk business associating himself with Edward Frensdorf of Hudson as partner. Later Mr. Frensdorf sold his interest to Albert Newton and he in turn to George Hines one of the present owners. The present owners of the business are E. C Brown, George Hines and Fred Rector.

From a small business, Mr. Brown has seen it grow into one of the largest in their line in Southern Michigan. The firm now handles, farm implements, wood and coal, produce and feed, cement and does an enormous business in hides. The success is largely due to Mr. Brown's tireless energy and push.

Mr. Brown has been a life long democrat and has been a hard worker for his party and his appointment comes to him as a just reward for faithful services rendered.

While Mr. Brown will devote his whole time to the duties of Postmaster still he will retain his interests in his business which will still be known as Brown & Co

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH; CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. Guaranteed here by

B. J. Pulver.

A SCHEME TO RUIN

A Story For Christmas

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

I met Helen Lee at a young people's gathering on Christmas eve. Maud Penrose had been giving me encouragement to be companionable with her, and I had seen a good deal of her, but I had no thought of marrying her because, in the first place, I never looked upon her as a possible wife and, in the second place, I was not in a position to marry any one. At that Christmas merrymaking it was revealed to me with certainty that she considered me her own.

When I had danced twice with Helen to once with Maud Penrose, Maud showed by a flash in her eye as she passed me in Helen's company that something was wrong. As soon as I was relieved of Helen I sought Maud and asked her what was the trouble. She reproached me bitterly for what she called deserting her. I was young, high strung and inexperienced with women. I coolly informed her that I could not have deserted her, for she had never had any more right to me than any other girl. This, to my surprise, seemed to give her great pain, but since I did not consider myself bound to her simply because we had been a good deal in each other's company I did not see what I could do to make her feel any better. Indeed, I was impressed with the importance of breaking off our association at once. This I did.

My meeting with Helen was followed by something very different from what had been between me and Maud. I fell in love with her. I soon heard that Maud was accusing me of having treated her badly, and I was received coldly by some of her friends. I never asked any of them for the reason of their coolness or entered any defense whatever in the matter of Maud's accusations. A man is powerless against a woman in such a matter, for his lips are sealed, and she is likely to secure the sympathy of those to whom she tells her story.

Helen knew of all this. She believed my story, but told me that I should not have become involved with any woman I did not intend to marry. She had no acquaintance with Maud and had no idea of what "a woman scorned" may be capable. When Maud sent her word that she in turn would suffer from my perfidy it troubled her But she had the loyalty to me to refrain from telling me of the message.

Since Helen and I had met on a Christmas evening we came to value that anniversary. The first Christmas after our marriage we invited our intimate friends to dinner and a dance. When our first child was two years old we brought him to the table on Christmas day, and as other children came we added them to our family circle around the board.

Alas, if the first Christmas anniversaries of our married life were the happiest there was one that was the most miserable. That one I cannot to this day think of without a shudder.

When the fifth Christmas after our marriage approached I was away from home, but promised to return in time to celebrate the day, as usual. A winter storm delayed my coming, and I reached my home only at the hour set for the dinner. What was my surprise to see the house dark! Instead of the lights that I had expected in every room not one appeared. In a wondering terror I opened the door, entered the hall and, turning on an electric switch, listened for a sound The house was surely deserted.

Going up to my wife's bedroom, I saw evidence of a hasty departure. On the mantel was an envelope addressed to me, but I perceived at a glance that it was not in my wife's handwriting. I took it up and found that it had been opened. Taking out its contents, I read a letter addressed to me couched in loving terms, indicating that I was living a double life, dividing my affections between my wife and the writer.

Here was an explanation of the condition in which I had found my home. The letter had come during my absence. Helen had opened it and, convinced of my perfidy, had taken the children and gone away, that she might not meet me on my return.

But the letter. It must have been written to one of the same name as myself and reached the wrong person. I certainly knew no such woman as the writer, who signed herself Alice. Glancing again at the address, I saw that there was no street and no number on it. It had been delivered for me without this, I being well known to the carrier.

I was much chagrined at this breaking up of my Christmas through a mere mistake, and I was angry with my wife for not having given me an opportunity to rectify it. Where she had gone I knew not, but could doubtless find out through members of her family. But my Christmas had been spoiled. There was no time to mend the matter. I would go to my club and get my dinner, then would take steps toward obtaining an explanation from my wife.

At the club I took a table by myself and dined alone. The more I thought about my wife's going away in this fashion the more disgruntled I was. When I had eaten a mere apology for a dinner I went to my desolate home, sat down in the library and thought. My wife's action by this time appeared to me little better than a crime. I was tempted to let her alone for awhile, that she might discover herself the wrong she had committed. The long evening finally passed without my coming to any decision, and I went to bed.

I did not expect much sleep, and I was not disappointed. When day dawned I was awake and continued my thinking. What a Christmas! Then it occurred to me that I might not find it easy to prove my innocence. Would it not be better to take no steps toward convincing my wife that a mistake had been made until I had ferreted out how the letter had been delivered to me? After weighing this matter till it was time to rise, remembering that I would have a bit of revenge on Helen by delay, I concluded to begin an investigation, leaving her to mourn over my presumed unfaithfulness till I had found a solution.

After breakfast I took the letter to the postoffice and showed it to the postmaster, who looked in the city directory for another person of my name. He found only mine. Calling in the superintendent of carriers, he made inquiry as to whether any of them delivered mail to any other person than myself of my name. None of them did so I left the postoffice without confirmation of my theory.

I was much disappointed and began to realize that my chances of proving my innocence were not so good as I [illegible] All that day the matter ran through my brain like flowing water. I came to no conclusion and at bedtime returned to my lonely home. I made no inquiry as to where my wife and children had gone, for I had no explanation to offer as to the accusing letter. I studied the handwriting, but was not conscious of ever having seen it before. At last it occurred to me to place it in the hands of a detective and bid him make an investigation.

He spent an hour with me, asking questions with a view to assisting him in his work. They were so many and so varied that when he had finished I could not see that he had elicited anything to give him the remotest clew. While he was at work I was living alone at my home, taking my meals at my club. I learned that my wife had gone with the children to her mother's. I did not communicate with her, having resolved that I would not do so until I was vindicated and could show her how unjustly she had treated me.

One day my detective came to me and told me that while questioning me when he took the case, from what I had told him as to my trouble with Maud Penrose before my marriage he had no doubt she had written the letter or, rather, had employed some one to do so for revenge. But he was unable to prove the charge. This had occurred to me, but I had dismissed it at once because I did not consider it reasonable to suppose that any educated and refined woman could possibly commit such a base act. This had no effect on the detective, who said that not all criminals were to be found in the lower classes. I did not convince him that he was wrong, nor did he convince me that his charge was unsupportable.

A year passed, during which I was called upon to make a long trip on business and was for months traveling. The estrangement between me and my wife continued, I being too proud to attempt a reconciliation without proof of my innocence, she being convinced that my silence was proof of my guilt. A mutual friend told me that she remembered Maud Penrose's warning that she would in time discover my true character to her cost. This indicated to me that I had no chance to effect a reconciliation without proof, and I began to despair of ever being reunited to my family.

One day my detective came to me and said that for $1,000 he could secure information as to the writer of the letter. I gave him a check for the amount and told him that if he could give me the proof I required before the next Christmas, which was approaching, I would add a handsome bonus for himself. The day before the anniversary he came to me with a specimen of penmanship identical with that of the incriminating letter. I seized it greedily "Who is the writer?" I asked.

"I don't know," he replied, "but I do know that she was simply an amanuensis. I can get an affidavit from her giving the name of her principal if you will sign an agreement not to inquire as to the identity of the amanuensis or to prosecute."

I signed the agreement and the next day received the statement written in the hand of the writer of the incriminating letter. That was two days before Christmas. I sent a messenger to Helen that if she would return to our home at once I would meet her there with undisputable proof that she had been deceived and victimized. She replied that she would go home at once and if I could convince her of my innocence I would make her the happiest woman in the world.

We met on the morning of the day before Christmas. Without a word I handed her an envelope containing the evidence I had received When she came to the name of the perpetrator of the accusation, Maud Penrose, she stood transfixed.

"I suspected this," she said, "but your silence convinced me that my suspicion was wrong. It seemed a confession of guilt."

The next day we spent the happiest Christmas of our lives.

Disliked Egotism.

"What's the matter with you?" asked his wife.

"I'm feeling lonely," was the reply.

"Don't you like this town?"

"I don't like this earth."

"What's the objection to it?"

"People are too egotistical. If there is anything I hate it's egotism. And when I see kings [illegible] ing about confidently and doing things wrong, and diplomats trying all sorts of insincere tricks with complete effrontery, and lawyers seeking applause for arguing on the wrong side of a case, and everybody displaying utter selfishness without a blush, I am forced to the conviction that I am the only consistently moral gentleman on this globe. And it makes me feel lonely."—Exchange.

DOUBLY PROVEN

Tecumseh Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

This Tecumseh citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of undoubted benefit.

The facts are now confirmed.

Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. C Stevenson, Wyandotte and Potawatamie St., Tecumseh says: The first [illegible] complaint in my case was a sharp shooting pain across the small of my back, which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did, procuring my supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches left and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me. In fact, I felt like a different person."

USES DOAN'S AGAIN

OVER FIVE YEARS LATER Mrs. Stevenson said: "I am always glad to speak a good word in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel the need of a kidney medicine, I take Doan's Kidney Pills and they always give me the best of relief."

BULGAR CUSUALTIES ARE HUGE

Greeks Claim Ferdinand's Army Suffered Loss of 120,000 Men in Fight With French—Sofia Government Says Allies Used Dum-Dum Bullets—Greek Food Short.

London, Dec. 20.—Greece has issued a formal reply to the Austro-German representations protesting against the erection by the allies of fortifications around Saloniki. A Rome correspondent learns from Athens that the Greek government replied to the protesting Teuton diplomats that Greece was powerless to prevent the fortifications as they "are indispensable to the safety of the Anglo-French expeditionary force."

The safety of the Anglo-French troops, the Greek reply is quoted as pointing out, has been formally guaranteed by Greece.

The reply also emphasized that Greece is still Serbia's ally.

London, Dec. 20.—Telegrams from Saloniki estimate the losses of Bulgaria since she entered the war at 120,000, one-half of whom fell in operations against the French and British in the Vardar valley.

A dispatch transmitted by the semi-official Trans-Ocean News bureau of Berlin says:

"The Bulgarian government for the third time protests to the allied and neutral powers against the use by Anglo-French troops of dum-dum bullets and other kinds of bullets with double cover which explode when they hit. The Bulgarian government states that these bullets cause terrible wounds, and in most cases the wounded members must be amputated in order to save the life of the victim. The Macedonian hospitals are filled with such wounded.

Promises Reprisals.

"The Bulgarian government declares that since it is unable to engage in the same practice the government will in the future be obliged to take most severe reprisals against Anglo-French prisoners in order to enforce respect for international law."

Another Trans-Ocean bureau dispatch says:

"Saloniki reports are to the effect that the Greek population in the territory occupied by the Anglo-French forces is greatly embittered against the invaders since they have created a terrible situation by their brutal procedure.

Many Freeze to Death.

"The Anglo-French troops are insufficiently supplied with provisions and have bought all the available victuals, thus creating an enormous increase in prices, which is heavily felt by the poor population. Likewise they have confiscated all the cotton, so that many poor persons, owing to the extreme cold, have prozen to death."

VILLA QUITS REVOLT, HEADED TOWARD U. S.

Bandit Secures Legal Mnrriage As First Condition.

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 20.—Under pressure of his generals, the weight of his defeat in Sonora, and the counsel of his wife, General Francisco Villa on his way to the border and the United States, his role of commander in chief renounced, and his determination to continue fighting the de facto government of Carranza until death, broken, at least for the present.

Previous to renouncing his command, General Villa was united to Mrs. Villa in civil marriage. They had been married by a church ceremony several years ago but it was believed the civil marriage would remove any moral obstacle to the entrance of Mrs. Villa and General Villa into the United States.

Mrs. Villa says the bandit retires front his revolt only temporarily.

Note to Lansing Answers Charge That Blockade Is to Take U. S. Trade.

The British ambassador submits detailed figures to show that American foreign trade, apart from the traffic in war munitions, has increased phenomenally.

The communication which was made public by the British embassy was designed to answer charges made by Robert P. Skinner, United States consul general at London, in a commerce report on British trade.

AUSTRIA CLAIMS GORIZIA VICTORY

Vienna Reports Italians Defeated With 75,000 Loss.

BATTLE HAS RAGED FOR WEEKS

Collapse of Fourth Great Battle of Isonzo Is Announced by Austria—Declares Defenders Have Held Positions in Face of All Attacks—Italy Claims Gains.

Vienna, Dec. 20.—Italy has been defeated with a loss of 75,000 men killed and wounded in the fourth great battle of the Isonzo for the capture of Gorizia, according to an official Austro-Hungarian statement forwarded by Berlin.

Desperate fighting for the Gorizia bridgehead position, which is the vital key to the stronghold, is described in the official statement. Terrific destruction of property in Gorizia is admitted by the defenders, but this destruction is said to have resulted chiefly in arousing the greatest indignation of the population.

Battle Lasts Weeks.

The official report from Austro-Hungarian headquarters says:

"The fourth great battle on the Isonzo, which began on November 11, may be considered terminated since the Italians have ceased their strong attacks.

"The particular aim of this fourth campaign was to capture Goerz (Gorizia), the bridgehead of which was attacked by seven Italian infantry divisions. These strong forces stormed the bridgehead in vain. Likewise their attacks en masse on the neighboring districts failed. The Austro-Hungarian troops maintained their positions firmly at the Goerz bridgehead, on the plateau of Loberdo, and all their positions in general.

Destruction Is Admitted.

"The destruction wrought in Goerz is deeply resented by the population, while the military situation has not been influenced in any respect by this expression of the enemy's impotent fury.

"During the fourth Isonzo battle, according to reliable reports, the Italian losses amounted to 75,000 dead and wounded.

"An Italian attack against the north slope of Monte San Michele and another on the Tyrol front by an Alpini battalion against Col di Lana both failed."

Rome, Dec. 20.—The following official report has been issued by the war office here:

"Although snow in the mountains and rain and fog in the lowlands have somewhat hampered operations, the activity of our troops remains unabated.

"On the northern slopes of Monte San Michelo our infantry surrounded and captured by a surprise movement an entrenchment bordering on our lines. We imprisoned 115 men, including two officers."

EASTLAND BLAME IS ON LAW

Secretary Redfield Says Congress Failed to Provide Sufficient Inspectors.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Secretary of Commerce Redfield in his annual report to that body, places the blame for the Eastland disaster squarely on the shoulders of congress.

Mr. Redfield frankly admits that the steamboat inspection service at the present time is unable to administer the law as efficiently as it should. He asserts that this inability is due not to any deficiency on the part of the men in the service, but to the failure of congress to provide an adequate number of men to do the work.

New Records Made In Exports.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Total exports for the month of October announced by Secretary Redfield were $328,030,281, a new record. Total exports for the ten months ending Oct. 31 were $2,860,515,448, also a new record.

Gainesville, Fla., Dec. 20.—The University of Florida and Indiana university football teams will meet on Nov. 18, 1916, either at Indianapolis or Bloomington.

WILL ASK MICHIGAN TO END LAND FRAUDS

Effort to Stop Worthless 'Farm' Sales Begun.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 20.—The question of sales of worthless lands in the upper peninsula will be brought to the attention of the 1917 legislature, but whether any law can be passed which will stop such deals as have been reported and as are well authenticated in the capitol remains to be seen.

Legislative action will be recommended, however, in the annual reports of some of the state officers who are in touch with the situation. Either the public domain commissioner or State Geologist R. C. Allen will put the proposition up to the lawmakers. But on all sides there is a general feeling that the hands of the legislature are tied and that any law which it might pass to prevent the sales of worthless land at high prices would fail to stand the acid test in the courts.

Ancient Iceland.

Iceland was founded A. D. 874 by men from Norway. In the words of John Fiske, "It was such a wholesale colonization of picked men as had not been seen since ancient Greek times and was not to be seen again until Winthrop sailed into Massachusetts bay. It was not long before the population of Iceland was 50,000. Their sheep and cattle flourished, hay crops were heavy, a lively trade—with fish, oil, butter and skins in exchange for meal and malt—was kept up with Norway, Denmark and the British Isles. Political freedom was unimpaired, justice was fairly well administered, naval superiority kept all foes at a distance, and under such conditions the growth of the new community in wealth and culture was surprisingly rapid."

FOR CONGRESS 1916

MARK R BACON

Prospects? Figure For Yourself

Here is the official vote for congressman, cast by the Republican party in the Second District, at the Primary Election held August 25, 1914.

Counties	Bacon	Larwill	Reece	Total
Jackson	1095	375	1875	3345
Lenawee	220	1173	42	1435
Monroe	1386	204	190	1780
Washtenaw	1186	320	394	1890
Wayne	2151	173	178	2509
Total	5938	2245	2679	10862

If you will take the total vote of Wayne county 2502, from the total Bacon vote 5938, you will still find Bacon ahead by 3436 votes.

Or you may take the combined total vote of MONROE, Wastenaw, and Lenawee counties, from Bacon's total vote 5938, and you will find him ahead by 923 votes.

Yes, you may take the combined total vote of MONROE, LENAWEE and WAYNE counties, from Bacon's total vote 5938, and you will still find him ahead by 211 votes.

You may combine Jackson and Wayne, or make a combination of any two counties in the District, take it away from the Bacon vote of 5938, and you will still find him ahead.

The 1914 vote was the largest ever cast in the 2nd district at a primary election.

You cannot reasonably say that he received many Democrat votes, as they had a contest on for the congressional nomination among themselves and no votes to throw away.

Now, with his campaign last year, his acquaintance over the district, with justice in his claim for the nomination: with his appealing directly to the people and not to the politicians: —being one of Lincoln's 'plain people' himself; being a business man:—born to labor, and on a farm; and with his known energy in a campaign; can you reasonably believe his chances for the nomination are not really better than either of the several candidates now seeking the nomination?

And you will not find him asleep at the switch in 1916. adv

Copernicus.

Nicholas Copernicus was the founder of modern astronomy. He was born in Poland in 1473. His father was a Pole, and his mother was a German. He went to the university at Cracow, where he studied medicine, theology, mathematics and astronomy. Later he devoted his whole attention to astronomy and developed the "Copernican" system, which is the one now universally accepted. It regards the sun as the center of the solar system and the planets, of which the earth is one, as revolving around it, while around the majority of these primary, one or more secondary orbs, known as moons, revolve. The first stars are regarded as suns, each with its own planetary system.

The room was filled with parents and friends who came by invitations from the pupils, Sights in Italian Cities.

Genoa and Rome are the most beautifully lighted cities in Europe because their streets are narrow enough to allow of the slinging of white electric globes across from house to house. There are no disfiguring lampposts, but at intervals down the middle of the street swing the globes of light of the tint of moonlight. Venice, on the contrary, is terribly overlighted and glitters distressingly and inappropriately. Ruskin complained that the gas in the great piazza had grown so dazzling in his day that walking or sitting there he could no longer see moon or stars. What would he have thought of the horrid exaggeration of the clusters of electric lights? Without being a Ruskin one longed to switch off nine out of every ten.—London Globe.

How Very Annoying!

Just as the young man raised his hat in response to a bow and a smile from the beautiful girl who was passing by his foot struck a banana peel and flew out from under him. He landed on the back of his neck, his hat flying in one direction and his cane in another.

"Are you hurt?" asked a friendly policeman as the victim of the accident sat up and began to swear volubly.

"Hurt!" he exclaimed. "No, I'm not hurt. I'm dead sore; that's what I am. That bonehead camera man across the street forgot to turn the crank, and now I've got to do that fall all over again."

Then the policeman realized that he had been privileged to see a moving picture comedy in the making.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Putting Off.

When the ship Central America sprung aleak in midocean a steamer, seeing her signal, drew near and asked, "What is amiss?" "We are in bad repair. Lie by till morning," was the answer. "Better let me take your passengers on board now." "No," said the captain; "lie by till morning." In an hour the lights of the ill fated steamer were not visible. She had gone down, and all had perished.

Mr. Moody once closed a meeting in Chicago, saying, "Think this matter over till next Sunday." On their way home from church that evening a light suddenly flashed across the sky. It was the beginning of the great Chicago fire. That congregation never assembled again.—Christian Herald.

Hurrying Up.

Melancholy Aunt Clara from the country had the habit of listening to the big clock on the town hall in the village where she was visiting and exclaiming every time it struck:

"Eternity draws one hour nearer."

Clarence was very much impressed with that solemn reflection. One day the big clock got out of order. While repairing it the workmen made it strike every few minutes. Clarence heard it with bulging eyes.

"Oh, Aunt Clara," he said excitedly, "eternity has got a move on today!"—New York Times.

His Excuse.

Justice of Peace—Your wife says you struck her. Have you any excuse to offer, uncle?

The Prisoner—Ah suttinly has, jedge. While I wus prayin' fo' rain fo' mah gyardin she starts in prayin' fo' fair wedder 'case she was gwine to wash.—Boston Journal.

An Exclusive Decoration.

Among the most inaccessible of decorations is the Grand Cross of the Russian Order of St. George, founded by Catherine the Great in 1769. In all its history of more than 150 years there have been but four Russians to receive the grand cross. The first was the Empress Catherine herself, who assumed it ex officio. The late Grand Duke Michael Nicholaievitch, having received the inferior grades in the Crimean and Caucasus wars, was awarded the grand cross for his achievements as commander in chief of the Russian army in Asia Minor during the war with Turkey in 1877. His brother, Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, was on the same occasion elected a knight grand cross of the order for his victorious leadership of the Russian forces in Europe to San Stefano, within sight of the walls of Constantinople, while Czar Alexander II. was persuaded by the knights of the order to don its grand cross on the occasion of the celebration of the centennial of its foundation.

That Michigan's anti-tuberculosis campaign, carried on by the state board of health, is attracting outside attention is shown by an enthusiastic editorial in the December number of the "World Court" magazine, published in New York City. After explaining the method pursued, the editorial concludes as follows: "Every state in the Union should follow the example of Michigan Without a doubt concerted action of all the states would be a material advantage to all. The state of Michigan is to be congratulated upon their wise and timely movement."

CHRISTMAS SUPPER AND CHRISTMAS PAGEANT

At the Presbyterian Church

The ladies of the Church will entertain the Primary, Junior and Intermediate departments of the Sunday school at a Christmas supper Thursday evening at 5 o'clock. All the scholars in these departments are invited! And if colds and grip do not interfere too seriously the young people of the church will present the Bethlehem Pageant at 7 o'clock.

This will follow a few exercises by the children. This splendid Christmas pageant is a new presentation of the old story of the Nativity. The special scenic background and the lighting effects make a very effective presentation

An offering of cash or provisions will be gratefully received by this church Thursday evening or any time Friday. There is even greater need than last year when there was such a fine offering.

EDWARD FRENSDORF TO THE FRONT

A movement is on foot in the three state prisons of Michigan regarding those prisoners who have tubercular trouble, for their special medical treatment and the segregating of these prisoners. As each of these institutions are now filled to their capacity this seems quite impossible at present.

Edward Frensdorf of Hudson, a member of the board of control comes forward with an offer to advance any money necessary for the building and equipment to accomodate those who are thus afflicted and stand his chance of being reimbursed by the Legislature. The question of the acceptance of his offer will be decided at the meeting of the Commission

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH; CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. Giraffes and Telephone Wires.

At a recent meeting of the Institution of Electrical Engineers in London W. L. Preece told of the damage done to telephone systems in the tropics by animals. The giraffes in East Africa, he said, have not sense enough to duck their heads when they find a telephone or telegraph wire across their tracks, but push on and carry the wires and sometimes the poles with them. White ants eat the telegraph poles if these are of any wood but teak. He showed a telephone instrument that had been used as a hive by bees, which entered by the slot for the switch hook and formed inside a comb that was renewed as often as it was cleared away by the engineers. Spiders also destroy the insulation by spinning over the wires webs that when saturated by dew reduce the insulation resistance to a few ohms.

Tom Lawrence's Christmas Gift

It Was Given at a Later Christmas to Tom's Son.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

It was Christmas morning. Tommy Lawrence, aged seven, had remained awake so long the evening before, watching for Santa Claus to come down the chimney, that he awakened late. Half opening his eyes, he looked dreamily at the ceiling and closed them again. A sound came up from below that caused him to open them again and listen intently, a sound that he had never heard before in that house.

"Bowwow!"

A dog! There could be no mistake—a sure, certain dog. Tommy's eyes lighted with a glad expectancy. Could it be that for a Christmas present he was to have a little pet barker? Of all things, he craved a real live pet, and of all live pets a dog. He gave a kick. The covers went over the footboard, and he bounded out of bed. He was looking for the first piece of clothing to put on when—

"Bow-wow-wow! Bow-wow-wow wow-wow!"

This was too much for him. He opened the door and ran downstairs in his nightie. In the dining room he found his brother, Fred, a boy of fourteen, teasing a pup. Tommy stood looking from the boy to the dog in expectant wonder. Just then his father came into the room.

"Hello, Tom!" he exclaimed. "You down already? You weren't expected. However, the secret is out, and I may as well tell you that this little puppy is to be your principal Christmas gift. What do you think of him?"

What Tom thought of the dog he could not possibly express in words, so he said nothing; but, going to the dog, he laid a hand on him. Then he patted him. Then he put both arms around him and drew his cheek against his own. Finally Tom asked:

"What's his name?"

"Oh, since he is your dog you shall give him his name. What do you think of Spot?"

"I don't know," replied Tommy, still apparently lost in wonder whether it could really be true that he had a pet dog.

"Or Trip?"

"If he's a hunting dog," suggested Fred, "I think Pointer a good name."

"Suppose we make it Wad?" said the father. "When I was a boy and we didn't have cartridges we used to ram wadding down into the barrel of the gun to keep the powder and shot in place. Which shall it be, Tom, Spot or Trip or Pointer or Wad?"

Tom couldn't possibly decide so momentous a question on such short notice, but somehow the family fell to calling the dog Wad, and his little master made it Waddle. The Lawrence home stood in the center of large grounds, and Waddle had plenty of room to roam—that is, he would have when the weather warmed up, for, being nothing but a puppy, he needed to be kept warm. He was a thoroughbred, and Tommy was obliged for awhile to yield in the matter of his treatment and his diet to others. Tom would have fed him on cake and candy had he been permitted, with an occasional feast of some highly seasoned meat. He was much distressed when told that his pet must for the present have nothing but milk.

Tom and Wad grew up together. Tom regarded Christmas as the dog's birthday, and it was celebrated accordingly. Every Christmas a cake was made and at dinner a candle for each one of Wad's birthdays put into the icing. Tom ate the cake, and Wad was given some choice bones that had been saved for the purpose. As soon as the dog was old enough to be trained to hunt he was taken out by a competent person and taught the art of assisting the huntsman. This gave Tom a desire to have a gun that he might utilize his dog, and when he was twelve years old his father consented that he should have one and accompany an experienced sportsman on a hunt. The second season it was found impossible to prevent Tom's going out with his dog and his gun unattended.

After that, when Christmas approached, Tom insisted on going to where there was some kind of game that he might increase the variety of the viands for the Christmas dinner. His hunting ceased about the 1st of November and was resumed a few days before Christmas. When, on a crisp December morning, Tom went out with his gun, his game bag and his cartridge belt strapped about him, and called Wad, the dog, seeing the paraphernalia, went wild with joy.

When Tom was eighteen years old and in the prime of his youth Wad was about twelve and growing very old for a dog. Still he was a beautiful animal and had always been coveted for his pure blood. He had been stolen several times, but had either found a way to get back to his master or had been returned for a reward. One day, in his old age, he disappeared, and, when several weeks had passed and he had not returned, his master reluctantly gave him up, thinking that he had met with some injury which, on account of old age, perhaps had finished him.

One morning Tom was looking over the pictures of fashionable women in a newspaper, and his attention was arrested by a picture of a pretty girl standing beside a dog. Underneath was printed, "Miss Irene Fleetwood and Her Prize Winner."

"If that isn't Wad," remarked Tom to himself, "it must be his brother. It seems that if I should call him he would jump for me."

There was a short paragraph about Miss Fleetwood and her dog, giving her address. Tom cut it out, with the picture, placing the former in his portemonnaie and the latter on his mantel. There was something in the face and figure of the girl that charmed him, and he never went into his room without standing for awhile over her picture. The dog, too, was a favorite object of inspection. The more Tom looked at the dog and studied the color marking the more he was impressed with the belief that he was Wad. Quite likely he had been stolen and sold to his present mistress.

One day Tom's curiosity led him to walk by the address given in the newspaper and inspect Miss Fleetwood's home. He found it a handsome stone front residence, with costly lace curtains in the windows. The truth is, he was as much interested in catching a glimpse of Miss Fleetwood as of the dog. He saw nothing of either on that occasion; but, finding that the house was not far out of his way on going to the business part of the town,—he now lived in the city—he frequently made his passages by that route. On one occasion while passing he saw the dog standing with his forepaws on a window sill, looking out wistfully as if he desired to be free. Tom could not divert himself of the belief that he was Wad. Presently this belief was confirmed. The dog caught [illegible] straightway began to quiver with excitement, rubbing his nose on the windowpane as if he would force his way through. Tom stood looking till he feared his presence would be noticed; then he went on.

What should he do? It was probable that the lady had become possessed of the dog by purchase, Wad having been stolen. Should Tom claim him? He felt rather like making the dog the means of an introduction to his mistress.

Tom finally determined on a course to pursue. Having looked into the occupancy of the houses opposite Miss Fleetwood's, he found that lodgings were to be had in one of them and engaged a room overlooking the street. He usually occupied it about the time a lady would be likely to go out in the morning or the afternoon. He saw Miss Fleetwood go out frequently, sometimes in an auto, which she drove herself, but nothing of Wad. He usually went to his point of observation in his own auto, leaving it standing by the curb while on watch.

One crisp cold morning he saw Miss Fleetwood come out of his house, leading the dog by a leash to her auto, and, placing him in the seat beside her, she drove away. In a jiffy Tom was down and out. Springing into his car, he turned on the power and followed the lady. She was evidently out for a spin, for she proceeded on a road leading to the open country. Presently Tom gave a signal that he was about to pass her, and she gave him room.

He had scarcely drawn up beside her when Wad gave a succession of joyful barks, and, before his mistress could interfere with his movements, he jumped from her side and ran beside the passing car, barking vociferously. Tom for awhile pretended not to notice him, then looked down at him with no appearance of especial interest, while the lady's interest was pronounced. She motioned for Tom to slow up. He did so, and both came to a stop.

"I would like to get my dog back into my car," she said.

"Suppose you call him?" replied Tom.

The girl opened the car door and called to the dog to come to her. Instead, he tried to climb into Tom's car.

"Will you kindly tell me," said Tom, "how you came by that dog?"

"I bought him."

"Well, you bought stolen property. He has been my dog for many years. He was a Christmas present to me when he was a puppy."

The young lady demurred. "Come, Beauty," she said; "that's a good dog; come."

Beauty, as she called him, paid no attention to her. He was sitting on his haunches looking wistfully up at Tom and wagging his tail.

"He is a perfect witness," said Tom, "to the truth of my story. I am not going to take him away from you, but if you are willing that he should return to me I will reimburse you for your pecuniary loss."

It was finally decided between the two that they should return to the lady's home. Tom put Wad into her car, but he wouldn't stay there, and she finally consented that he should ride with Tom. When they reached their destination Tom and the girl and the dog went into the house, where Tom offered to give up his claim. But Miss Fleetwood, convinced that he belonged to Tom, relinquished the right to him, refusing compensation, and Tom took him home with him. Tom not only regained his property, but formed an acquaintance on which he had set his heart. He also in time won the girl.

Wad lived to a very old age. In fact he lived to be given at Christmas to Tom's oldest son, aged four, but died that night, the boy having given him an overfeeding of plum pudding.

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING

But Not So Bad If You Know How to Reach the Cause

Nothing is more discouraging than a constant back ache. Lame when you awaken, pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work or to rest. Backache often indicates bad kidneys. Tecumseh people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this case.

W. O. Witherell, west Potawatamie St. Tecumseh says: "I had acute pains across the small of my back and in my hips. Often, after stooping, a sharp twinge darted through my loins obliging me to lie down. I was laid up in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then, whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and the results have been very pleasing."

VILLA REVOLT IS BROUGHT TO END

Peace Terms Signed; Leader to Enter U. S.

WASHINGTON GRANTS ASYLUM

Mexican Bandit Chief Will Be Recognized as Political Refugee—Government Has No Charge Against Him—He Can Not Ferment Trouble in U. S., However.

EL PASO, TEXAS — An agreement was reached and papers were being signed whereby the Villa faction in northern Mexico concludes peace terms with the de facto government of Mexico. The conference was held between Mexican Consul Garcia and former lieutenants of General Francisco Villa at the consulate in El Paso. Villa is reported in Juarez. The signing of the peace agreement eliminates him from Mexican affairs.

To Transfer 800 Villa Troops.

The agreement for the transfer of 800 Villa troops and all Villa territory to the de facto government was signed by a delegation of Villista officials and generals, composed of Sylvestre Terrazas, secretary of state of Chihuahua; General Manuel Banda, General Roberto Limon, General Ysabel Robles, General Flaviano Paliza, Colonel Eduardo Andalon, for Villa, and Andreas Garcia for the de facto government of Mexico.

The Villa brothers were not included in the agreement. It was believed by those attending the conference that the Villas may cross to the American side, their status to be determined later.

A chief for the territory surrendered to the Carranza government is to be elected by the Carranza government.

U. S. to Protect Villa.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Acting on instructions from the state department the war department has notified Major General F. H. Funston, commanding the American border forces, that General Francisco Villa who has abandoned his rebellion in Mexico, is to be accorded full protection if he crosses the American border as a refugee.

The northern chieftain will not be arrested and should the Carranza government demand his extradition it would be refused. Villa is to be regarded as a political refugee and for that reason not subject to extradition or deportation. On the other hand should Villa attempt to organize another expedition against Carranza from the American side he will be treated in the same manner as former President Huerta who was discovered in a plot to start a new revolution from El Paso and was arrested and is now waiting trial.

"YES" OR "NO" MUST BE REPLY OF VIENNA

Severing of Diplomatic Relations with Austria Probable.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The state department announces that twelve Americans were known to be aboard the Ancona when an Austrian submarine sank that vessel. Only three are known to have survived.

Austria must comply with the demands of the United States to avoid a quick breaking of diplomatic relations. It can be said that the state department's message to official Austria is a peremptory document. It will admit of only one of two answers, which can be put into either of the small words "yes" or "no."

Austria must either yield to the demands of the United States or suffer the severing of diplomatic relations.

WILL ASK MICHIGAN TO END LAND FRAUDS

Effort to Stop Worthless 'Farm' Sales Begun.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 20.—The question of sales of worthless lands in the upper peninsula will be brought to the attention of the 1917 legislature, but whether any law can be passed which will stop such deals as have been reported and as are well authenticated in the capitol remains to be seen.

Legislative action will be recommended, however, in the annual reports of some of the state officers who are in touch with the situation. Either the public domain commissioner or State Geologist R. C. Allen will put the proposition up to the lawmakers. But on all sides there is a general feeling that the hands of the legislature are tied and that any law which it might pass to prevent the sales of worthless land at high prices would fail to stand the acid test in the courts.

AMERICAN TAKEN OFF U. S. SHIP BY FRENCH

Wilhelm Garde Tells of Search Made by Descartes.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Wilhelm Garde of Brooklyn, purser of the American steamer Borinquen, was removed from the vessel off the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, by officers of the French cruiser Descartes, according to the Borinquen skipper. The ship has arrived here.

According to Captain Dow of the Borinquen, the incident occurred Dec. 15, while his ship was five miles outside San Juan harbor. After officers from the Descartes had come aboard they sent a boat alongside and directed Purser Garbe to get in. To stop the Borinquen the Descartes threw her searchlight on her, then fired blank across her bows.

Garbe, it was said, was a German but had taken out his first citizenship papers some time ago.

BRITISH TROOPS QUIT GALLIPOLI

Forces Are Withdrawn from Suvla and Anzac Districts.

OTHER POSITIONS STILL HELD

It Is Estimated Number of Men Withdrawn Will Reach 100,000—London Hints Operations Either in Egypt or Saloniki Will Be Strengthened by Troops Removal.

LONDON — All British troops at the Suvla Bay and Anzac region of the Dardanelles, together with guns, have been transferred to "another sphere of operations," the war office announced.

Presumably the British troops are being withdrawn for service either at Saloniki or in Egypt.

The withdrawal affects more than 100,000 British troops who have been vainly attempting for several months to advance against the Turks in the Suvla Bay and Anzac regions on the west shore of Gallipoli peninsula.

No mention was made by the war office of any withdrawals from the Sedd-ul-Bahr region, at the southern tip of Gallipoli, where French and British troops hold lines near Krithnia.

May Withdraw All Troops.

The withdrawal, however, may be the forerunner of abandonment of the whole dardanelles campaign in favor of Balkan operations or to defend Egypt against the expected Turco-German invasion.

More than 100,000 British troops, made up largely of Australians and New Zealanders, were landed on the shores of Suvla Bay and in the Anzac region several months after the first land operations against the Dardanelles were begun from the region of Sedd ul-Bahr. Their object was to cut the Turkish communications and drive across the peninsula to an attack on the Dardanelles forts from the rear.

The attempt failed after nearly meeting with success in a grand assault. The British were driven back to their trenches close to the water's edge. They have made no important advance since the days immediately following the landing.

Report Slight Casualties.

The transfer was accomplished "with insignificant casualties," the war office added, indicating that the Turks launched an attack when the troops began re-embarking.

One of the objections against abandonment of the Dardanelles operations was the fear that the troops would be slaughtered by Turkish artillery while en route in small boats to the transports.

It is assumed that British and French warships covered the retreat.

"PEACE ON EARTH, GOOD WILL TO MEN"

Cannot be sung by the countless thousands living in Europe on Christmas Day, but in America, the "Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave," a song of thankfulness may go up to our Maker for the many blessings which have been ours this past year. War and pestilence have not swept our fair land and we have been permitted to live in peace, prosperity and happiness.

Let us petition our Maker that the coming year may see the end of this frightful war which has spread to almost every nook and corner of Europe and that peace and prosperity may again be the portion of our neighbors across the waters.

To all our friends we extend our hearty best wishes for a Merry Christmas and may the Christmas spirit be with you all.

LOCAL BUSINESS CONDITIONS

The year just closing has been peculiar in many ways. At the beginning of the year the country was just beginning to get over a business depression. Locally it was felt some and later with the almost incessant rain fall our farmers were battling with the elements to take care of the crops, this had a still greater effect on us locally. But with the clearing up of the weather in the late fall business began to get back in a normal state.

The late fall and winter trade has been good here in Tecumseh and the holiday shopping for the past two weeks has been better than most of our merchants had expected.

We have called on most of them within the last few days and their report has been most encouraging. Most all are reporting a better trade than a year ago and a few say it is far ahead of last year and for several years back.

Our banks are just closing a prosperous year. Deposits are showing a healthy growth. The Tecumseh State Savings Bank has declared its usual 7 per cent. dividend and is placing a substancial amount in undivided profit account. The policy of this bank for the past few years has been to build up a strong surplus and undivided profit account. The Lilley State Bank is also closing a very satisfactory years business and is declaring a 10 per cent. dividend also is placing a goodly amount in undivided profit account.

Our factories are all busy and Brewer & Co. are taking on more men. The conditions are all favorable for a good start on the new year.

Another Old Custom Time Has Removed

With the passing of time has come the passing of many old customs; family traditions are long forgotten.

This is particularly true of one of the oldest of customs among housewives, that of daughters following their mothers in the use of foods and housekeeping methods

In the olden days if mother did a certain thing this way or that way, daughter did likewise, regardless of newer and improved methods.

If mother used a particular brand of food, daughter was blinded to better kinds merely because mother had used the same brand for years.

But now both mothers and daughters have changed their methods and investigate and compare, not by price alone, but by actual results obtained.

The old order is changing. The candle has given way to the electric light; the old fashioned fire-place to scientific heating methods. Millions of housewives have changed their brands of coffee, tea, extracts, baking powder and other foods. Calumet Baking Powder is one of the most popular brands on the market today because of the uniformly good baking results obtained by those who use it.

How Billy Emerson Walked Into His Own Trap

A Christmas Story

By RUTH GRAHAM

Billy Emerson was twenty-one, a nice fellow, as the girls would put it, handsome and rich. It is questionable if young men born with silver spoons in their mouths are fortunate. They have no careers before them, or, rather, no careers are forced on them, and few persons will work who do not have to work. Billy was in no regular business; consequently time hung heavy on his hands, and he was always hunting for some amusement. He once said that he would rather be a housebreaker than himself, for he would love an exciting life instead of a dull one.

Billy disliked cold weather, and when the autumn came on he usually went to a southern climate. Nice was his favorite winter resort; but, tiring of all European places, he concluded one autumn to go to a seabeach in Virginia. Not finding the climate there warm enough for him, he drifted down to Florida, where he put up at one of the swell hotels at St. Augustine.

It was a month before Christmas when the young man started on this outing, and not to be deprived of the pleasure of giving the customary presents on account of his absence he devoted a week before leaving to their purchase. Since he was an orphan with no brothers or sisters the time he devoted to the purpose would seem unnecessary, but Billy had one good trait—he interested himself in impecunious persons. The main enjoyment he received from his large fortune was making the needy happy by supplying their necessities. Having arranged for a showering of gifts on Christmas day he sailed away.

Billy was used to sitting in the sun parlor in the morning, where other guests congregated. Not having anything better to do, he observed such persons as interested him, but it was a very dull way of spending the time, and he longed for something to stir him up. There was a young lady in the house who was taking care of her invalid mother. The girl's face was Madonna-like, and it seemed to Billy that any one she loved she would sacrifice for, even to her life. Billy wished she would love him.

One day this young lady was sitting in an easy chair, basking in the sun, when something seemed suddenly to occur to her. Rising quickly, she hurried away, leaving a fat portemonnaie in the chair she had occupied. It occurred to Billy that here was an opportunity to scrape an acquaintance. He would take up the article and when the young lady returned for her purse hand it to her. Stepping briskly to the portemonnaie, he seized it and was putting it in his pocket when the young lady, doubtless having missed it, returned. Billy was caught in the act.

Now, what it was that induced him to deny the theft he could hardly himself explain. He says it was because if he told her that he took the portemonnaie simply to return it to her she would not believe him, and he saw an adventure in a final confession, proving his respectability at the same time This would cause her to feel that she had wronged him and give him a great advantage. Quite likely the pained look on the girl's face that followed one of surprise had something to do with his action. Be this as it may, he denied having seen the missing article, not having any very definite plan of subsequent action.

"Give me my portemonnaie," she said. "I saw you take it. To think that such a respectable looking person should be a common"—

She balked at the word thief. It was too contemptuous a word to apply to so respectable appearing a person.

"If you knew my motive," said Billy, "you would have sympathy for me."

"What motive?"

"The blessed Christmas season is coming, and I have nothing with which to buy gifts for my dear mother and five young brothers and sisters."

A pitying expression came over the girl's face, a mingling of pain, sympathy and forgiveness. It made Billy feel that to elicit such an expression he would rob a bank.

"Keep the money," said the girl, "and if there is not enough to buy gifts for all I will add to it. But return my portemonnaie and the other contents. They were given me last Christmas by my dear mother."

Billy hung his head. It seemed as if he had been touched by this kindly magnanimity, and repentance was beginning to well up within him. Taking the portemonnaie from his pocket, he handed it to her without opening it. She took some bills there were in it and handed them to him.

"No," he said. "You have made me see the error of my ways. I am repentant. Call for the police and have me locked up."

As the perpetrator of this stupendous bluff well knew, the girl would do no such thing. But when she told him that she forgave him and would do nothing to interfere with any good resolutions he might make for his future the scamp protested that she was not doing her duty.

"You have no right to permit me to go free," he said mournfully. "You are risking the valuables of every one in this house. How do you know but that I will go on in my pernicious way? It is your duty to hand me over to the authorities, or rather to inform the proprietors of this hotel that they are harboring a thief. They will have me arrested and lodged in jail. I will pay the penalty of my wickedness and when I have expiated it will take the path into which I have been led by your magnanimity."

"That is not necessary. All you have to do is to leave this house, promising me that you will lead an honest life from this time forward. Besides, the motive for your crime must be considered. You were not stealing for yourself, but to give pleasure to those you love."

That was all very well except leaving the house, which Billy had no intention of doing.

"If I am to be trusted," he said, switching off from the previous argument, "I may as well remain here as anywhere. You have my promise that I will never steal again."

Billy was relieved from explaining how he was to remain in a house the lowest priced room of which was $5 a day—Billy's suit was $25—by the approach of other persons, and with a look of gratitude he left the sun parlor.

Billy, not knowing but that the girl would make a confidant of some one who would not be as lenient with him as the young lady and he would be put to considerable trouble to explain his theft, concluded to take a precaution. He was chummy with the clerk of the hotel and told him the story Since Billy was well known to the management, this bit of advance knowledge was all that was necessary to prevent trouble. Billy learned from the clerk that the young lady was Miss Helena Clarke of New York.

Shortly after Billy's theft and return of the stolen property a Mr. and Mrs. Ballinger came down from the north and stopped under the same roof with him. The first Billy knew of their arrival was seeing them hobnobbing with Mrs. Clarke and her daughter. Billy winced. He had been led by circumstances into doing what would put him into a position which would, to say the least, be considered foolish and had come to realize that any transition to his own respectable self would be humiliating. The arrival of these friends, mutual to himself and the Clarkes, might bring about a denouement before he was ready for one. At the same time if he wished for a voucher the new arrivals would serve the purpose admirably. Billy determined to keep out of their way until he could think up a way out of his dilemma. But the more he thought the more he became impressed with the fact that there was no way out of it unless he should concoct a bigger deception than the one he had practiced. While he was trying to invent a story the Clarkes departed for the north. Billy, having learned all about them from his friends the Ballingers, took his own departure for home.

It was now a couple of weeks before Christmas. Billy went to his bank and procured a certificate of deposit in the name of Helena Clarke; then, going home, he inclosed it in a note saying that he was the man who had been saved from an ignominious career by her kindness. A miserly uncle had died and left him a large fortune. Would Miss Clarke kindly distribute for him the inclosed amount for the [illegible] at Christmas time? If so she would go far [illegible] helping him to forget the sin the remembrance of which was embittering his life.

"Well," said Billy to himself, "if I can't keep her from setting me down for a fool I can at least prepare the way for a confession." And with this he sealed his note and dropped it in a mail box. A reply soon came to him from Miss Clarke showing plainly that she had swallowed this story as well as the other. She promised to dispense his Christmas charity and asked if there was anything else she could do to encourage him in making his reformation permanent. Billy replied that he thought she could, but he would speak of that later.

Meanwhile the Ballingers had returned to New York. Billy went to Mrs. Ballinger, told her of the fix he was in and asked her to help him out of it. The lady at once wrote the Clarkes an invitation to a Christmas dinner, declining to take no for an answer. A reply came accepting the invitation. Billy was also invited.

Mr. Emerson says that the most courageous act of his life was when he walked into Mrs. Ballinger's drawing room that Christmas day and beheld Miss Clarke arrayed in dinner costume, looking, it seemed to him, beautifully cold. Mrs. Ballinger had promised him that she would announce to Miss Clarke that he would be one of the dinner company and make his confession for him. She had also insured him a not unkindly reception. What was Billy's relief when the young lady, with a charming smile, extended her hand to him.

It seemed that a leaden coat of trouble had peeled off him and left him light as a feather.

"Do tell me," she said when they were seated side by side, "what induced you to confess a crime that you had not committed?"

Billy's resource came to his aid.

"I was caught red handed, wasn't I? Well, if I had told you that I had taken your portemonnaie you might not have believed me."

"But I would."

"That I wasn't sure of. But of another thing I was sure. If I carried out the appearance of a theft with subsequent confession and contrition I knew by that kindliness which showed itself in your every feature that you would forgive me and I would run no risk."

"Wasn't that thoughtful of you!" she replied with a suspicion of a blush. The rest was easy, and it proved a merry and happy Christmas for both of them.

Then There Was a Shakeup.

Some years ago the Italian minister of foreign affairs, Signor Prinetti, asked his majesty King Victor Emmanuel to sign a decree for the augmentation of the staff of the foreign office. The king promised to think the matter over and the next morning set out alone on foot to pay a visit to the office. Arriving at 9 o'clock, he found no one there. A long search unearthed a solitary clerk who was smoking cigarettes.

"What are the hours of this office?" asked the king.

"From 8 to 12," was the reply.

"And when may I expect to see your colleagues?"

"They generally turn up about 11."

"Very well. When your chief comes tell him the king has been here."

And then his majesty sent for Signor Prinetti and suggested that instead of asking for more clerks he should make it his business to see that those already on the staff attended to their duties.

The Inquisitive Japs.

The Japanese have a lively desire to know all about you. They are actively interested in your health, your business, your habits, your wealth, your personal affairs, how you like your eggs for breakfast, what your clothes cost, where you are going, when you are going and why you are going; what you intend to do after you get there, what your excuse for existing is, how often you get your hair cut, how many children you have or have not and why, what your watch cost, who is your tailor, how often you wash your teeth, how much you owe, whether you have any birthmarks and what was the occupation of your grandfather. These and all other topics that are personal to you they are anxious to discover. Their curiosity is unbounded; but, my sakes, how polite they are about it!—Samuel G. IN HONOR OF 82nd BIRTHDAY

The children, grandchildren and great grandchildren besides other relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Lee to assist him in celebrating his natal day

Mr. Lee was born Dec. 17th, 1833 in York state coming to Michigan when 3 years of age. Since that time he has been a resident of Lenawee Co. Mr. Lee was a prominent farmer in Cambridge township until a few years ago when retiring took up their residence in Tecumseh. He is hale and hearty and those that know him best wish him many more years.

Those from out-of-town present were from Onsted, Adrian, Battle Creek.

Mrs. Cora French Staley a cousin of Mr. Lee was unable to attend but sent an orginal poem that she had prepared for the occasion.

EIGHTY-TWO YEARS YOUNG

Eighty-two years young,
Why! that's not old
Only a little silver among the gold
Only a few furrows on thy brow
But thy step is brisk
And they heart is young
And is it to-day a song is sung
Of a joyous natal day.

Eighty-two years young,
And a life well spent,
Not altogether on pleasure bent,
But sorrow toil and care,
Hath come thy lot to share,
A faithful wife has shared them all,
Did they come in winter, spring or fall?
Always ready to do her part,
With willing hands and a cheery heart.

To this blessing is added another one,
That of a loving daughter and a splendid son,
These are the things that to you have come,
To keep you eight-two years young.
Now as Christmas tide draws near
We wish you the greatest Xmas cheer,
Also to all my friends so dear,
Many and Many a Happy New Year.
CORA.

RELIEVES THE WORST CASES OF CATARRH

Think Hyomi the Most Wonderful Treatment for Catarrh Ever Discovered.

Do not try to cure catarrh by using sprays or lotions; it cannot be cured in that manner The only way in which this too common disease can be fully relieved is through a direct application to the affected parts that will kill the bacilli of catarrh and prevent their growth.

Breathing the air of Hyomei is the only known method of treatment that can really accomplish this. It is the simplest, most pleasant and probably the most reliable treatment for catarrh that has ever been discovered.

The complete Hyomei outfit is inexpensive and consists of an inhaler dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks. This will effect instant relief in ordinary cases, but for chronic and deep-seated cases of catarrh, longer use may be necessary, and then an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained for a trifling sum. It is not alone the best (it might be called the only) method of treating catarrh, but it is also the most economical.

C. A. Wright & Son have so much evidence in the power of Hyomei to relieve catarrh, that they will for a limited time, sell this medicine under their personal guarantee to refund the money if the purchaser can say that it did not benefit,

Frank Holcomb has gone to Ann Arbor for an operation for appendicitis.

Harry Wilcox died at his home east of Cone Monday morning aged 74 years. He leaves the wife, a daughter, two brothers and two sisters. When a young man he was with Barnum & Bailey's show as a strong man and trapeze performer. Later he purchased the farm which was one of the finest in Monroe county. He was a kind husband, father and neighbor and will be greatly missed by all. For nine years James Taylor has been his employe at the farm.

Weep not for me, my family dear,
I go to seek a higher sphere;
Cheer up, let not your hearts be sore

With you no longer can I stay;

Prosperity Seen in Deposits.

CALUMET, MICH. — The era of prosperity which the copper country is enjoying is reflected in statements of banks. A summary of the statements of the thirteen banks and one trust company at the close of business Nov 10 shows a total of $16,354,941.64 in deposits. This is a gain of more than $2,000,000 since September, 1914, and an increase of upward of $600,000 since Sept. 2 of this year.

Juicy Plum Cut Two Ways.

PORT HURON, MICH. — The probate court has appointed Celia Gilman, of Detroit, and Hazel M. Kempf of Mussey township, guardians for Hazel H. Kempf, the three-year-old Capac girl whose parents were killed in a railroad wreck in Georgia, a few weeks ago. It is understood that the railroad company has agreed to settle for $38,500.

Man Reported Killed Still in Trenches.

HOUGHTON, MICH. — Reorts received here some time ago that Edward Whittingham of this city had been wounded while serving with the Canadian contingent on the western battle front were disproved with the receipt of a letter from Whittingham saying that he rounded out his year of service in the trenches without receiving even a scratch from a bullet.

SAVED ARM

Plucky Woman Terribly Burned—Wouldn't Allow Amputation

Most people in Michigan will be interested in the case of Mrs. A. P. Brown, of Dryden, N. Y., whose husband says: "My wife burned her arm so the muscles projected like a shelf. The arm was so stiff she could not straighten it. Physicians failing to heal the arm, wished to operate. We refused and treated it with Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. She can use the arm extensively—Balsam of Myrrh saved the arm."

MANY TROUBLES DUE TO WEAK KIDNEYS

"It is no use advertising a medicine unless the medicine itself is good enough to back up the claims you make for it," said C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist, to a Heraldman. On the other hand it is a pleasure to sell a medicine when our customers come in afterward and tell us, how much good it has done them. And that is why we like to sell and recommend Solvax, the great kidney remedy. We have so much faith in this article that we are going to guarantee it in the future and will return the money to any purchaser of Solvax whom it does not help."

This shows great faith in Solvax. It really is a most unusual medicine because it overcomes the worst cases of kidney complaint by removing the cause. It goes straight to the seat of the trouble. It soaks right in and cleans out the kidneys and makes them pass off the uric acid and poisonous waste matter that lodges in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatic pains; soothes and heals the bladder and quickly ends all such troubles.

Noted Actress Is Dead.

LONDON, ENG.—The death is announced of Mrs. F. H. Brooke, an actress long associated with Toole and Irving. She was eighty-one years old.

Hunting Trouble.

When a man just naturally wants trouble it is mighty easy to find an excuse for making it. According to Mike Hogan, Casey and O'Brien were having a personal argument of their own. It had progressed to the extent that each had forgotten what it was about originally, and they were wholly oblivious of the gathering crowd until an urbane and genteel person in a frock coat put in.

"Come, come, my man," he said, gently plucking Casey by the sleeve. "You don't want to fight. I can tell it by your looks. Your face is too benign"—

"Two be nine! Two be nine, is ut, ye scut?" bellowed Casey. "Me face is two be nine, is ut?"

And there was where the real trouble began.—Louisville Times.

Longings.

A well known essayist and connoisseur of New York attended recently an artistic tea in Washington square.

Near artists of all sorts—near poets, near sculptors, near painters and near novelists—attended the tea. The ladies wore djibbahs of green burlap. The gentlemen wore sandals. The collation was vegetarian.

Looking calmly at that mass of freaks, he said, with a smile:

"Artistic longings consist invariably, it seems, of long hair, long teeth and long faces—everything but long purses, in fact."—Washington Star.

MAY ROBSON

Another Big Star Coming to Tecumseh

The management of the Bradley takes great pleasure in announcing the coming engagement of the international comedienne, Miss May Robson, in her new play "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt" by the famous comedy writer James Forbes, which comes to the Bradley Opera House Wednesday, Jan 5 This was secured on a guarantee of $300.

Less than six weeks ago Miss Robson was playing in New York City and will bring the same big scenic production and company here as used by her there and in all of the cities that she plays. Some people will undoubtedly wonder how we are able to secure a company like this for such a small town as Tecumseh. There are two reasons: First, the people of this vicinity certainly prefer the better class of attractions as proven by their support and patronage when these attractions are secured. This was clearly shown by the excellent house which greeted Fiske O'Hara when he presented "Kilkenney" here a short time ago. Second, Mr. Ed. R. Salter is business manager for Miss Robson, He was also Norman Hackett's business manager and from past business here for Mr. Hackett he had a pretty good idea that a first class attraction would make good in Tecumseh.

If anyone doubts that Miss Robson gets $300 or more for playing Tecumseh, ask to see the contracts made through the Aarons booking office in New York The Herald can get it from Mr. Mark at any time. More details will be given in next issue but the date is set for Wednesday, January 5th.

TAXES ARE BEING PAID SLOWLY

The amount of winter tax to be raised in Tecumseh township is a little over $34,000. This amount is a little in excess of a year ago. The rate on 1,000 this year is $13.50 as compared with $12.00 a year ago.

The town tax this year is no greater than last year but the amount to be raised for State purposes is greater Thus the increase. Township Treasurer B. C. Ellis states that about one seventh of the total amount to be raised has been paid to date.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barrett are visiting her mother and sister in Detroit.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH; CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. TWICE GIVEN

Story of a Repeated Christmas Present

By F. A. MITCHEL

I.—HER STORY.

I well remember those days when Philip and I were young—Philip was twenty-one and I eighteen—and lived on adjoining places in or rather near the beautiful village of Glendale. That was before people had become commercialized, before those who were intellectual were divided into groups, as they are now, the scientists forming one group, the musicians another, the literary people another. Then refined persons took some interest in all these branches.

True, individuals had their favorites. Philip and I were devoted to poetry. Philip had a naturally refined taste for poetry and did much to form my taste. He loved the pure and simple poets, like Wordsworth and Burns. Tennyson was in his prime at that time. At Christmas time Phil had given me a blue and gold bound edition of his works with a steel engraved frontispiece portrait of the author as a young man, and he was very handsome. His "Locksley Hall" was then a favorite, and every one with any poetic taste at all was reading it.

Philip and I used to read together, and since I owned a copy of Tennyson and there were in it some gems on which Philip and I agreed the book was at the time a part of our intellectual lives. My little blue and gold edition—blue cover and gilt edge—was very pretty, but I fancy now it was the association that gave it its beauty for me. And is it not often the association that makes certain bits of literature especially dear to us?

There was one poem that Philip and I considered the gem of the whole book, and I have since seen it mentioned by litterateurs as one of the most effective poems ever written This is the first stanza:

> Tears, idle tears—
> I know not what they mean.
> Tears from the depth
> Of some divine despair
> Rise in the heart
> And gather in the eyes
> In looking on the > Happy autumn fields,
> And thinking on the days
> That are no more.

One morning I was in the conservatory gathering some flowers to decorate the living room mantel. Philip came in without ringing, as was his custom. Up to that moment it had not occurred to me that this period of happy youth would ever end. Indeed, I had not realized how delightful it was. Phil brought me news that it had passed forever. He had been offered a position in a western city and was to take his departure immediately.

How I strove to avoid showing the shock the announcement gave me! It seemed that I could feel the blood leaving my cheeks. Tears, so beautifully described in the poem I have quoted, "rose in my heart and gathered in my eyes." But lest Philip should see them I turned away from him.

There were but a few minutes for the parting. We had not been lovers—at least if we were we had not known it. Phil put out his hand to a plant beside him, plucked a rose that had just passed from bud to bloom and handed it to me. He said no word, but I knew that he meant it to be expressive of his regard for me. My hand was pressed by his, and he was gone, back to the house whence he had come, and reappearing with his belongings he entered a carriage standing at the gate and rode away.

I can see him now, though half a century has elapsed, waving his hand to me as he passed out of sight.

The dearest thing in the world next to Phil was now the rose he had given me. I kept it for a short time in water, then put it into my Tennyson, pinning the stem to a flyleaf on which my name appeared as the owner of the book and Phil's as the giver on Christmas day, with the date. Under it I wrote the number of a page in the book. On that page was the poem that Phil and I had agreed was our first favorite, beginning "Tears, idle tears." These words I underscored.

All this may seem very lackadaisical to those who are engaged in the humdrum of life, but to me, even though I am an old woman with snow white hair, it is the tenderest memory of my long life. I sometimes wonder if the present generation, now that the pervading sentiment of that period, or at least the almost universal love for a beautiful poem, has died away, feel as deeply as we did then. The human heart is the same, but has not the commercial spirit of the age blunted human sensibilities?

Though Philip and I were far from each other, never saw each other, he was in my heart and as much to me absent as present. It never occurred to me that I could love any one else, and I never did. Others came and went. Some honored me with the supreme compliment a man may pay a woman, but found no response in me. Indeed, I wondered what had led them to suppose I would respond.

Father's death made a great change for us, his income depending upon what he did instead of what he had. When we left our home to others who could afford to enjoy it I was ill and unable to take away with me such articles as I especially wished to keep. That which I prized most—my Tennyson—mother and the others knew least about, and for what I prized it I told no one. After my recovery I looked for it among the few books that had been brought away, but did not find it. I never had an opportunity to recover it.

II.—HIS STORY.

After parting with Marion I confess that I was so filled with the new life before me that the break between her and me was somewhat overshadowed. I wrote her friendly letters, but since I had not spoken of love to her and saw no prospect of our again living near to each other I did not think it advisable to write it now. Remembering the rose I had given her, I wished I had received some parting gift from her. But I had nothing she had ever given me except a smoking cap she had embroidered for me. This I hung on a hook on the wall in my room. Often I sat in my easy chair after a day's work with my eyes fixed on the cap and fancied her bending over it, her fair hands plying her needle in its decoration.

I am aware that many a man has become sentimental over a gift a girl has given him, and in this degenerate age such feelings furnish material for the writers of the comic papers. Nevertheless to me those thoughts of my dear Marion—though a period followed when the picture grew dim from absence—are still sacred. Her glossy chestnut hair is now white as snow. Her fair skin is now shriveled, but this does not one whit detract from the sacredness of this memory of her when she was a girl.

That period of which I have spoken, when her picture grew dim from absence, began—if it really had a beginning—a few years after I parted with her and lasted for a decade. During this time I heard that her father had died and the family had been obliged to give up the residence in which I had passed pleasant hours with her and move into a smaller one, which I understood was in another city. After this I lost track of her entirely, and my feeling for her may be said to have lain dormant.

One winter—it was thirteen years after I had parted with Marion—I found myself in a city not far from my old home. It was Christmas time, and the anniversary revived memories of the past. I determined to visit the spot where I had passed my childhood. A few hours' travel brought me there. The house where I had lived as well as Marion's home had passed into other hands. Mine was vacant; hers was occupied. Going to the latter, a lady came to the door, of whom I asked to be allowed to look over the lower rooms, explaining that I had once been intimate with a family that then lived there. She kindly admitted me.

The furniture was the same as of yore. I stepped up to the library and looked over the books. Presently my eye caught a blue and gold copy of Tennyson. A vague idea came to me of something very sweet connected with it. Taking it from the shelf, I opened it at the frontispiece and saw the familiar picture of a young poet. There on the flyleaf I saw the words, "To Marion, from Philip, Dec. 25, 18—." Beneath this was the number of a page. Turning to the page indicated, I saw the first three words of a poem—"Tears, idle tears."

That poem always seemed to me to have in it what it alone can express, so I will not try to express it. The realization of what Marion had for me, the fact that for thirteen years I had lived without it, that it had been passing into oblivion, came to me suddenly with great force.

But the poem was not all. On the flyleaf, on which the reference was written, were four pinholes and a discoloration in the shape of the stem of a flower and above the stem the marks of where the flower had been. It was plain to me that Marion had pinned a flower—the rose I had given her at parting—to the flyleaf.

"Madam," I said to the lady who had admitted me, "could you be induced to part with this book?"

"Certainly," she replied, "you are welcome to it. We bought everything in the house from the former owner, including the books, for which we paid a song."

"Can you give me the address of the former owner of this?"

"I can put you in a way to get it."

On the day before Christmas I wrote on my card "To Marion, from Philip," adding the later date. Then I put the book of poems in a box, laid the card on it and sent it to Marion. The same evening I directed my steps to her new home. I found it an unpretentious one. I was glad of it. I had become prosperous, and if Marion was still for me I wished that I could give her much more than my unworthy self. Being admitted by a maid, I gave her my card.

When Marion came down the smile that lit up her face—a smile that was mingled with a blush, for she knew that I had seen the words she had written at our parting—more than made up in the change in her from youth to incipient middle age. I shall not profane this narrative by detailing what passed between us on that happy meeting. Such scenes have been given by novelists in the shape of formal proposals fitted only for the theater. What Marion and I felt could not be given in words. Indeed, it was all feeling. Words were unnecessary.

I will only add that we spent together the happiest Christmas of our lives.

Her Little Joke.

"Henry," she exclaimed as he came home to dinner, "I heard something early this morning that opened my eyes."

"What was it?" he demanded excitedly.

Ebony.

Ebony of the best quality comes from India, Ceylon and other tropical countries, where it is obtained in logs sometimes fifteen and twenty feet long. The darkness of the wood increases with the age of the tree. It is a very hard wood, and hence it is desirable for furniture making. Its unique color, too, makes it always worthy of notice, and it was combined with ivory by the Greeks to bring out its color.

Trenches In War.

The Romans, who were the first to make war a real art (if one forgets a certain Alexander), were in consequence the first to use trenches. Their main line of intrenchment ran across southern Germany from the east bank of the Rhine to near the present Stuttgart.

Cynical.

"But be sure you're right," exclaimed the confident philosopher, "and then go ahead."

"Be sure you're right," protested the married man, "and then get down on your knees and ask to be forgiven."—Puck.

"Nothing of the sort. I saw that sour Miss Tart the other day filling up on angel cake."—Baltimore American.

But are you going to avail yourself of either one of these remedies. No? Then the next best thing is to try a bottle of Peruna. Take it according to directions. You will have a natural appetite. All gas and fermentation in the stomach will disappear.

Read what Mrs. Emma Bell, Box 204, Fort Pierce, Florida, says: "I was taken suddenly with swelling of the stomach and bowels, and great distress. Very painful. Three doctors gave me no relief. Could not eat anything. Everything soured. I was starving to death. I began taking Peruna and was soon strong enough to do work. After taking five bottles I can truthfully say I am well. I gained twenty pounds."

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING

But Not So Bad If You Know How to Reach the Cause

Nothing more discouraging than a constant back ache. Lame when you awaken, pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work or to rest. Backache often indicates bad kidneys. Tecumseh people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this case.

W. C. Witherell, west Potawatamie St. Tecumseh says: "I had acute pains across the small of my back and in my hips. Often, after stooping, a sharp twinge darted through my loins obliging me to lie down. I was laid up in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then, whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and the results have been very pleasing."

AGAIN PRAISES DOANS AFTER A LAPSE OF MORE THAN FIVE YEARS, Mr. Witherell said: "I have had no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I expressed some years ago."

TEUTONS FAIL IN ATTACK IN WEST

Paris Claims Germans Lost 8,000 Near Ypres.

MADE TWELVE GAS ATTACKS

British Line Stands Impervious and Beats Back Assailants With Bayonet—Paris Tells of Blowing Up German Works—Montenegrins Win Three Battles With Austrians.

London, Dec. 27.—While Christmas Day was calm in the western front and no action was reported during the night, the break of dawn Sunday witnessed a resumption of the artillery battle that has waged for days.

Two days of continuous fighting between Ypres and Armentieres on Tuesday and Wednesday resulted in a loss to the Germans of 8,000 effectives, says the war correspondent of La Liberte of Paris.

The object of the Germans was to test the strength of the British lines at this point.

Dozen Attacks Fail.

Behind clouds of poison gasses the Teutons made a dozen attacks, but where the British artillery and machine guns failed completely to break the oncoming human waves the assailants were driven back with the bayonet. Not an inch of ground was gained.

German Munitions Exploded.

The following official communication was issued by the war office:

"In the Woevre the fire of our artillery exploded a munitions depot of the enemy to the northeast of Regnieville. In the Vosges one of our batteries took under its fire a munitions train in the railway station at Hachimette, to the southeast of Bonhomme. Our observers noted a heavy explosion."

Greece Satisfies Germany.

Germany has formally guaranteed to preserve Greek territorial integrity, according to a dispatch from Rome.

In return, says a dispatch from a correspondent at Rome, Greece, being completely reassured by the German guarantees, will not protest Turkish and Bulgarian co-operation in the Austro-German attack on Saloniki and will not aid the allies.

Montenegrins Win Three Battles.

Paris, Dec. 27.—Montenegrin victories are reported in an official statement received here. The Austrians were repulsed along the entire front of the Sanjak army Friday and also near Vautchide. Raskora Gora was retaken and with it prisoners and materials were captured.

ARRESTS MAY CLEAR UP MURDER MYSTERY

Negro Confesses Slaying Rich Indianapolis Woman.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 27.—Solution of one of Indianapolis' most mysterious murders, the killing of Miss Carrie Selvage in 1900, is believed in sight as the result of the arrest here of two negroes, one of whom confessed involving the other in the Indianapolis crime.

The men under arrest are Rufus W. Cantrell, former "king of the ghouls" and once head of the "charity army of America" in Detroit, and Edward Gowdy.

ABOLISHES OFFICE TO OUST ITS INCUMBENT

Sunday Lid Troubles Taken Out on A. A. Carroll.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 27.—What is believed to be an echo of the recent row stirred up by fire and police commissioners' orders to allow billiard halls to remain open came when the board abolished the dual office of director of public safety held by A. A. Carroll and made him head of the police department only while George P. Boughner was made head of the fire department.

The move is looked on by many as the first step in getting Carroll out of office. The shake-up came it is believed, as the result of Carroll's failing to give an order to the police several weeks ago, as he was starting on a hunting trip, to allow the billiard halls to remain open on a certain Sunday. The billiard hall men understood they were to be given permission and kept open. Four were arrested, but no warrants were issued, being withheld temporarily on the order of men higher up.

TRADE UNIONISM HURTING BRITISH

Organizations Must Admit Women or War Halts.

LLOYD GEORGE MAKES APPEAL

Munitions Head Addresses Union Workers in Scotland—Men Dying in Trenches May Be Told Organization Stands in Way of Supplying Them With Material.

Glasgow, Dec. 27.—David Lloyd-George, minister of munitions, speaking before 3,000 Clyde union men, urged that skilled workers must be replaced by women to enable heavy guns and projectiles to be produced to make it possible to enable the army to win. He said:

"I cannot go back to Parliament and report to the house of commons and through the house of commons to the army that English skilled workmen will neither relax nor suspend their union rules in order to save the lives of their fellow workmen on the battlefield.

Faces Alternative of Defeat.

"If the skilled workers refuse to agree to this the country faces two alternatives. We can go into the trenches and say to the soldiers 'We are sorry that we cannot get the necessary guns to enable you to win through in 1916, as trade union regulations stand in the way. Perhaps American workmen will help us to get you a sufficient supply for 1917.'

The other alternative is that we tell the kaiser frankly that we cannot go on. I cannot believe skilled workmen will give us this answer. Time is vital; time is victory; time is life. Further delay means further losses. I appeal to you workmen to help us quickly and thoroughly."

BOGUS ADVERTISING LOSING

Publishing and Business Organizations Aid Government in Work.

Washington, Dec. 27.—Honest advertising campaigns undertaken by business organizations, publishers and advertising men in co-operation with the postoffice department are sounding the knell of "get rich quick" and other fraudulent enterprises, according to the annual report of the solicitor of the department.

The decay o this once thriving industry, the report continues, has been brought about not only by the postoffice department but by the newspaper and magazine publishers, advertising organizations and other agencies which have co-operated with the federal authorities and made the fraudulent schemes dangerous and unprofitable. The lottery, however, thrives still in new guises.

U. S. SHIPPING IS BOOMING

Tonnage Increase for Last Year Is 460,741 Which Is Record.

Washington, Dec. 27.—According to the annual report of the commissioner of navigation the merchant marine of the United States including all kinds of documented shipping comprised on June 30, last, 26,701 vessels of 8,389,429 gross tons compared with 26,843 vessels of 7,920,688 gross tons one year earlier. The year's absolute increase in tonnage, 460,741 gross tons, has never been equalled in the history of the United States. While the total tonnage has increased the number of documented vessels has decreased 142, sailing vessels alone decreasing 593 in number.

The decline in number of vessels with an increase in the total tonnage is a normal result of the development of water transportation.

A Woman's Curiosity.

The worst of women is that they are always wanting to see what will happen if they do certain things. They make a man angry just to see what he looks like when he is angry, and they make a man miserable just to see what he looks like when he is miserable, and they never realize how much gratuitous suffering all this entails upon the man.—From "Concerning Isabel Carnaby," by Mrs. Fowler.

All Money Good in Canada.

There is no place in the world where money is under less supervision than in Canada. The coins in circulation there are not confined to the Dominion. British halfpennies and pennies circulate as freely as the cents, and United States coins of all descriptions are accepted as equal in value to the Canadian coins, though the United States refuses to handle the coins of the Dominion on its own side of the border. In the course of a busy day in Canada you are not surprised to meet coinage of many nations. Sometimes you get finds. A correspondent who is an amateur coin collector tells me he got among his change a beautiful specimen of a farthing of the reign of George III., and an hour or two afterward he became the possessor of an old Irish halfpenny over 100 years old, with the harp on one side. Probably these two coins had been carefully preserved, but poverty induced the proprietors to part with them.—London Chronicle.

Deep Purple Shade Is Liked.

Deep purple is predicted as a color that will be smart for winter wear. An evening gown of this royal shade was formed of silk net. The skirt, of course, quite short, looked as if it had many layers of this delectable material. The stunning corsage was composed entirely of sequins of the same deep shade. Very simple was this elegant and sumptuous gown, which boasted two American Beauty roses as the finishing touches, these placed most cleverly on hip and hem.

The Rise of Newfoundland.

Newfoundland has had a curious history. Cabot, sailing from Bristol, discovered it in 1497, and in 1583 Sir Humphrey Gilbert annexed its wild and rocky shores for Queen Elizabeth. Yet until 130 years ago it was illegal to build a permanent house there. The island was held by "merchant adventurers" for the sake of the fisheries. They hired their fishermen in England, took them across the Atlantic each spring and brought them back at the commencement of winter.

Newfoundland's importance in the cod fishery arises to a great extent from the fact that it is only within her waters that the small fish desirable as bait can be obtained in the necessary quantities.—London Telegraph.

A Curious Royal Custom.

When any Spanish sovereign dies the body is at once submitted to the process of fossilization, nor can it be placed in the royal pantheon until the body has been absolutely turned into stone. Curiously enough, the period required for fossilization varies considerably. Some royal bodies have become solidified in a very short period, while others have taken years before the fossilization took place.

THE PAGEANT "BETHLEHEM"

The pageant, "Bethlehem" given by thirty of the young people of the Presbyterian church Thursday evening was a big success. On account of so much sickness among the participants, the management dared not advertize it greatly for fear it would have to be given up at the last minute, hence the audience was not as large as the performance deserved So it was repeated with success Sunday evening.

Thursday at 5 o'clock the little people of the Sunday school were given a Christmas dinner by the ladies of the church, with Mrs. R. A. Fowler chairman. The decorations of the tables and rooms were exceedingly beautiful.

At seven o'clock the program was started with an orchestral number then followed several exercises and songs by the primary and junior departments upon the stage enlarged and beautified for the occasion.

When the little people were settled down after their share of the entertainment the curtains were drawn aside showing a beautiful back ground of the village of Bethlehem with the star shining above the church of the Nativity.

The actors dressed in the garb of the orient then began the beautiful story of the shepherds and wise men in song assisted by a full choir behind the screen.

The spot light in different colors thrown by the stereopticon materially added to the effect.

A fitting climax was Mrs. Maynard Mulvaney as "Mary" making a perfect tableau and her solo was most pleasing.

FAME

What is less enduring than the fame of the "popular" man. The world moves so quickly these days, that it is only the truly great that can survive. A few days ago—even a few months ago Lord Kitchener was the idol of the English people. Today he is almost a daily target for their wrath. The world rang with the fame of Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia Today his name is not on the lips of any nation. Recently John Paul Jones and Alexander Hamilton were denied a place in the Hall of Fame, although a niche was found for Charlotte Cushman, the actress. Who are our own heroes of today and where will they be ten years hence?

F S Anderson left yesterday for Cleveland on a business trip.

Glenn Thayer returned to Grand Rapids this morning after a short visit at H. B Roberts.'

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH; CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor Saint Paul, Minn. Indisputable Evidence

By IDA SPEED

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

When Miss Cecilia Cary come to this western country from back east to teach music she was regarded as a rank outsider.

Old man Seeberger, whose word ain't worth 10 cents, but whose signature is worth all of $10,000, said the first Sunday she sung before preachin that when she got up on them high notes she put him in mind of a brone when it's been throwed and gits to gaspin' and wheezin' as the rope is tightened.

But old man Seeberger's opinion was not shared by all the male population of Clanahans, for them boys shore swarmed, and, rattle the planner and holler her vocal singin' as she would she couldn't git 'em to settle.

She went to boardin' with the Widow Hughes when she first come. Bill Hughes was gittin' up some horses one day and was doin' a fast piece of ridin' when his mount turned over with him. Gopher hole, you know. Bill under the whole works.

Never spoke afterward, and in two hours his pretty young wife was known as the Widow Hughes, and in spite of much persistent courtin' she's known as that yet.

It looked once like her and Red Martin was goin' to make a hitch up of it but that seemed to fizzle out, and he was one of the leaders with Miss Cary when she first come, for Red is the leadin' kind.

He done in this case same as he had with several women before—hit the trail to Arizona with a herd, right when he seemed to have a walkover, and Hick Fuller and Sam Harman took his place so complete he never was missed.

Now, maybe you've noticed how a woman does about a solitary diamond ring. If her folks give it to her or she buys it herself she'll always try to let on like it come from her beau.

If a feller gives it to her she'll intimate that it's a present from her pa.

So nobody knew where nor just when Mrs. Hughes come by her ring. In fact very little was said or thought about it, as Bill had a accident policy, until she raised a great hue and cry about it bein' stole.

Chances are few for robbery here where everybody knows everybody else and there ain't no suspicious characters, such as crooks, hoboes, promoters and the like, so it shore looked plumb odd when Miss Cecilia Cary moved over to the Citizens' hotel to board and simultaneous begun to wear a diamond the size as the one the widow Hughes had lost, only in a woman's ring instead of a heavy settin' like Minnie Hughes had wore.

This would not have looked so bad by itself, but Adolph Warner, who was the postmaster and express agent, knew that Miss Cecilia had sent off a small registered package one day just before she changed her boardin' place.

He said he remembered it particular, because while she was waitin' for her receipt at the postoffice window Red Martin got up from off the cracker box he was settin' on back by the stove and told her if she was ready to go he would walk home with her, as he was leavin' as soon as the rest of the outfit come by.

Adolph said she told Red all right and that she was goin' to be on the move that day too.

Red says, "Where to?"

And she tells him the Citizens' hotel, and he says, "Good," and then Adolph handed the receipt to her, and they walked out together.

Some days later she gits a express package about the size of the one she sent off by mail, and then she comes out in that diamond ring.

Well, Minnie Hughes never accused nobody, but she hinted powerful, and folks come to cool off on Miss Cecilia.

She never seemed to notice it, but just played her hand with Sam and Hick, who stood by her manful and knocked the whey out of a feller or two apiece who merely related the facts in the case concernin' Minnie Hughes' ring.

There was some talk of takin' pupils away from Miss Cecilia, but as her patrons had paid six months in advance in order to git her to come they didn't quite give way to their feelin's to that extent.

The kids she gives lessons to all was crazy about her anyhow, and they was all learnin' fast.

In the store one day the little Harman girl, Sam's sister, was holdin' her teacher's hand, and she says, "Miss Cary, where did that pretty ring come from?"

Miss Cary looked around like she was seein' who'd heard, and her face got awful red.

"I haven't got any change with me," she says to the Harman muchacha, "but let's see if my credit is good for a dime's worth of peanut candy and a dozen apples."

And she shuts the kid's mouth by stuffin' it full of trash to eat.

Things rocked along until Christmas, with more talk of that ring than any thing else, and then folks begun to try to decide what they'd like to have so as to give it to some of their family or friends for a Christmas gift, and gossip turned to the big dance that was to come off on the night of the 25th, with fireworks before and after.

Christmas eve five of them pesky cowboys from the Lazy M blew into Clanahans with a flourish of six shooters and rope and drag off everybody's flue that they can reach, leavin' us in a fix when the norther come up Christmas mornin', so that the hall where the dance was to be pulled off, bein' the only two story buildin' in the burg and havin' a big heater in it, was resorted to by young and old as a warm refuge from the storm.

Hick Fuller had Miss Cecilia Cary's company for that night, and it seemed like all the boys tried to make up for the way the rest of the population had treated her.

Minnie Hughes had got so she'd hardly speak to her and give her dirt to her back pretty near every time she opened her mouth.

The dance was more'n half over and the old ladies and children had gone home to bed when Cecilia sets down in one of the front windows to rest between dances.

There was a whole bunch around her, and from the place where the stair steps come up into the hall you could only see the top of her golden head with a band of light blue ribbon around it.

Minnie Hughes had crowded close to where Cecilia sat lookin' awful pretty in her black dress against the white shade, which was pulled down behind her.

Some of the boys offered Minnie some preserved cherries, which they was all eatin' out of the bottle with their fingers. But she declined.

"I'm wearin' my gloves tonight," she says, looking hard at Cecilia's diamond, for she was boilin' over with rage and jealousy at Cecilia bein' the belle of the ball in place of her, as had been the case for a long time.

"I haven't got any diamond to show off now," she says [illegible] [illegible] so bad about your ring," says Cecilia, sympathetic. "What do you suppose could have become of it?"

"It's on your finger," says Minnie, her lip curlin'.

Cecilia went white.

She snatched the ring off and held it toward Minnie. At the same moment she braced her shoulders as though she'd been struck at, and then, before anybody realized it, there was a quick, dull sound, and out of the window she fell, for it was open and the thin strip of wood in the shade had snapped. Below was the only piece of sandstone sidewalk in Clanahans.

It was so sudden everybody seemed paralyzed except Hick Fuller, who had presence of mind enough to grab one black satin toe, and in less time than it takes to tell it he had jerked to his feet and pulled her back from death, a pale, sick girl with a pretty badly sprained back.

Anyhow, that second was not too brief for a very important thing to happen The conscience of every man and woman in that room got a wrench that brought them back to a sense of justice, so they were ready to receive Red Martin when he bounded into their midst.

He had heard and seen it all on his way across from the head of the stairs; he had pictured her maimed form on the stone walk below, and the skeer had all but made him faint, though he was plumb dauntless as a broncho buster and would fight a bear.

"Oh!" Cecilia says when she saw him bendin' over her. "Oh, but I'm glad you are back! Here's your ring," she says as she holds it out in her hand. "Tell them."

"It ain't my ring, girl," he says. "It was, but it's yours now," and he puts it back on her third finger and holds her hand to his lips.

She half set up on the bench where we'd laid her, then fell back pale as a ha'nt.

"Somebody run for water," begs Red, helpless and skeered.

"I'm all right," she says, stern and dignified. "But why does Mrs. Hughes say she once wore this ring?" and she draws her hand away from him.

"She did wear it," says old Red, with a groan. "She kept it for me a year I had no safe place to keep it, and Bill and I were always pals. I ought to have told you. That's why I asked you to change your boardin' place. Minnie didn't like it when I asked her for the ring, and I was so afraid"—here he broke off and looked sheepish—"I was afraid she'd say somethin' to make you distrust me," he ends.

"But what about the package you sent off?" says Adolph, too interested in gettin' the mystery cleared up to keer for buttin' in.

"The package that I sent? When?" Cecilia asks.

"Oh, that!" she says and looks straight at Red in a meanin' way.

"It's none of their business," he says, furious.

"Tell them," she orders him. "Don't you see they have thought all along that I took her diamond? It must be explained."

Red got that dead beat look again.

"She sent back the plain gold engagement ring to the man she gave up for my sake," says Red. "I took my diamond to be set in a ring to fit her finger and had it expressed back to her, and she's goin' to marry me at once," he says through clinched teeth.

"And now," he says, gittin' on his feet and doublin' up his fists while the crowd edged back, "if that ain't enough and any pryin', scandal mongerin', long tongued son of a lyin' father wants to know any more about her and me collective or her or me individual let him meet me down there in front of this hall and help hisself to the grapes."

He glares at the whole lot of us a moment; then he turns and takes Cecilia's wraps from Hick Fuller, who has brought 'em up, and he asks her gentle if she can walk downstairs and across the street to the Citizens' or shall him and Hick carry her?

Nobody noticed till afterward that Bill Hughes' widow was gone.

FRENCH LINER IS TORPEDO VICTIM

Ville De La Ciotat Is Struck Without Warning.

BIG BRITISH LINER HITS MINE

Arianza Goes Down Off Archangel—Next to Lusitania and Arabic in Size—Eighty Lives Lost on French Liner—No Warning Given to Any Victims.

Paris — The French steamer Ville de la Ciotat, with passengers on board, was torpedoed without warning and sunk in the Mediterranean by a submarine on Dec. 24, the ministry of marine announced.

The Ville de la Ciotat was one of the largest of the steamships sunk recently in the Mediterranean. Her gross tonnage was 6,378. She was 487 feet long and 50 feet beam. She was built at La Ciotat, France, in 1892, and was owned by the Messageries maritimes of Marseilles. She was last reported on her arrival at Saigon, Indo-China, on Dec. on a voyage from Yokohoma to Marseilles.

LONDON — A report here says that eighty of the crew of the Ville de la Ciotat lost their lives when it was blown up.

British Steamer Yeddo Torpedoed.

The 4,500-ton British steamship Yeddo, from Calcutta Nov. 24, for Boston and New York has been sunk. Her crew was saved.

The cargo of the steamer Yeddo was valued by A. C. Lombard & Co., the local consignees, at more than $2,000,000 although its exact nature was not known, as the bills of lading have not yet arrived.

Belgians Also Lose Ship.

Sinking of the Belgian steamer Ministre Beernaert is announced. The crew left the steamer in boats, two of which are missing. The steamer was a vessel of 4,315 tons gross, and last was reported as having arrived at London on Nov. 23 from La Plata. She was built at Newcastle in 1907, and was owned by the Royal Belgo-Argentine company of Anvers. The British steamer Cottingham of 513 tons has been sunk. The crew was saved.

One Ship Sunk, Another Beached.

The British steamship Hadley, 1,777 tons gross, has been sunk.

The British steamer Umbla, 1,172 tons, has been beached at the mouth of the Thames, afire forward.

The crews of both vessels were rescued.

Big British Liner Hits Mine.

NEW YORK — The big British liner Arianza was sunk off the Russian port of Archangel, probably by a floating mine, on Dec. 10, according to authoritative information reaching shipping circles here.

Excepting the Lusitania and the Arabic, the Arianza is the largest steamer sunk by mines or submarines since the beginning of the war. She was owned by the Royal Mail Packet company, displaced 15,044 tons and was 570 feet in length. She was built in 1912, and it is believed here, was commandeered by the British government at the outbreak of the war.

Torpedoed Without Warning.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Official confirmation of the sink of the Japanese liner Yasaka Maru by a submarine without warning, which has been awaited by the state department before framing a protest to the Teutonic powers over the jeopardizing of one American passenger, was receivel. It came from American Consul Bristow at Port Said, Egypt.

SOUTH AMERICA IS REACHED

United States Exports Double Those of 1914 in Like Period.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In the three months after war broke out at the end of July, 1914, this country's exports to South America (whose expansion had been hoped for as a result of the European war) were only $20,300,000, as against $53,700,000 in the similar period of 1913.

In the corresponding three months of the present year the total was $43,500,000.

State Prosecutors Declare Law Will Be Strictly Enforced—Most of Dealers Hasten to Close Out Stock—Wyoming Wets to Contest Law—Riot in South Carolina.

CHICAGO, ILL. — Six wesetern and one southern state will become prohibition territory Saturday with the advent of the new year. They are Iowa, Arkansas, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and South Carolina. They will add a population of 8,254,043 to the dry column.

483 Iowa Saloons Go.

DES MOINES, IOWA. — The remaining 483 saloons and sixteen breweries in Iowa will close next Friday night because of the repeal of the mulct law by the legislature a year ago, and Iowa will be legally dry. Attorney General Cossom announces plans for a war on bootleggers to make it dry in fact.

Colorado Saloons Busy.

DENVER, COL.—Fifty thousand dollars spent daily for liquor will be saved or put to other uses after midnight Friday when Colorado goes dry. Colorado's 1,600 saloons can hardly be seen for cutrate signs. The fact that after Friday liquor can only be obtained four ounces at a time on a nonrefillable prescription of a physician has driven thousands to lay in a supply "for medicinal purposes." Ranchmen are buying barrels of whiskey.

Oregon Citizens Stock By.

PORTLAND, ORE.—With less than a week before prohibition takes effect in the three Pacific Northwest states, preparations for clamping down the lid have been completed by saloon men and public officials alike. For several months every liquor store has been emblazoned with banners advising citizens to "stock up" for the drought.

At 11 o'clock Friday night many salon men plan to give away the remainder of their stock.

200 Idaho Bars Must Close.

BOISE, IDAHO. — Idaho's 200 saloons will close Friday night under the "drum-tight" prohibition law passed by the last legislature. Authorities are preparing to put the law into enforcement promptly at the close of 1915, but the wets have not yet given up the fight. An attack on the law is now before the supreme court of the United States on appeal.

Storm South Carolina Bars.

COLUMBIA, S. C. — The police were called in in many counties to aid in handling the crowds which are storming dispensaries before their closing under the state dry law on Jan. 1.

SERBIAN KING GOES INTO ITALIAN EXILE

"I Am No Longer King," Declares Aged Monarch.

BRINDISI, ITALY — King Peter of Serbia has arrived here on board an Italian cruiser. He has refused resolutely to leave his army, and it was only at the urgent entreaty of his son, the prince regent, that he at last agreed to go into exile.

"I am no longer king," he said. "I am only General Tootani (this name which will shelter the king's incognito during his exile is that of a powerful family of Tirana to which Essad Pasha belongs). I give no more orders. It is the crown prince who commands. For the future I am nothing in the government. A soldier, I have only to obey."

U. S. SHIPPING IS BOOMING

Tonnage Increase for Last Year Is 460,741 Which Is Record.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—According to the annual report of the commissioner of navigation the merchant marine of the United States including all kinds of documented shipping comprised on June 30, last, 26,701 vessels of 8,389,429 gross tons compared with 26,843 vessels of 7,920,688 gross tons one year earlier. The year's absolute increase in tonnage, 460,741 gross tons, has never been equalled in the history of the United States. While the total tonnage has increased the number of documented vessels has decreased 142, sailing vessels alone decreasing 693 in number.

The decline in number of vessels with an increase in the total tonnage is a normal result of the development of water transportation.

I. J. PADEREWSKI WILL APPEAR IN ANN ARBOR ON JANUARY 20.

One of the most important musical events in the State of Michigan will take place January 20, when I. J. Paderewski, the world-famous Polish pianist will appear in concert in Hill Auditorium, Ann Arbor.

Mr. Paderewski has been a world character for a quarter of a century, but unlike many great personages who attain a certain popularity and then pass into oblivion, his star has continued to ascend and never since his name first came before the public has he occupied a more conspicuous place in the artistic world than at the present time. But while his name is thus immortal in the world of music, his fame does not by any means rest alone upon his artistic accomplishments, for his contributions to the cause of humanity for many years have been of such significance as to make his place secure among the great men of our time.

He is a man of broad sympathies who has ever been mindful of the misfortunes of his native Poland, and has given much of time and means to patriotic service, and through his assistance Poland's patriotic fire has been kept burning brightly. The present great conflict in Europe has fallen heavily on his conscientious shoulders and he has given generously of his resources in relieving the sufferings of that now devastated country. He has been an active worker in the American Polish Relief Association, and through his untiring efforts many thousands of dollars have been devoted to the cause.

In order to accomodate the throngs which are anticipated from surrounding cities and towns, special cars will be run over the D. J. and C. Line, East and West, to Ypsilanti, Detroit, Chelsea, Jackson, etc., leaving Hill Auditorium immediately after the concert.

Full information may be secured by addressing Mr. Chas. A. Sink, Secretary, University School of Music, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

A Secret Marriage

It Was Between a Prince and a Girl In Wooden Shoes.

By F. A. MITCHEL

"I see in this proposal, your majesty," said the prime minister, Van der Donken, to King Hubert, "a scheme to unite our kingdom of Lituria to that of Pomaria. Your majesty is well aware that the area of Pomaria is three times that of Lituria. If the Princess Catherine marries your son it will result in the annexation of your dominions to those of your hereditary enemies."

"That shall never be," said King Hubert, grinding his teeth.

"Unfortunately, the prince has met the princess, and she has captivated him."

"What sort of woman is she?"

"Inordinately ambitious. She is described by those of her suit as being avaricious, selfish and cruel."

"What can we do to turn the prince from her? I fear that to attack her will only enlist him in her defense."

"Your majesty is right. We must accomplish our ends by diplomacy. The princess has your son in thrall. To win him from her we must inveigle her into a trap, and once she has entered it we must exercise all our ingenuity to prevent her getting out."

"Have you a plan?"

"I have. It is this: Let us give out that your majesty has been attacked by a disease that must prove fatal within a few months; that you desire the prince, who will inherit the throne after you, to marry at once on pain of your naming his cousin, Oscar, to succeed you in his stead. Catherine will not marry him without his inheritance. But she will not hesitate to permit him to sacrifice it for revenge upon your majesty for not consenting to the match. I shall endeavor to make some compromise with her by which we may rescue the prince from her."

Van der Donken was a marvel of astuteness, being regarded as equal in chicanery even to a woman. The king gave him carte blanche to do as he liked, and he set out at once for the capital of Pomaria, where he found Prince Carl in dalliance with the Princess Catherine. The minister announced to the young man that his father had not long to live, that a proposal had been made by King Otto of the neighboring kingdom of Brentino that the two kingdoms should be united by the marriage of Carl and King Otto's daughter, Xenia, and that the marriage should be celebrated at once. If the prince refused the crown should pass at his father's death to his cousin.

This interview between Van der Donken and Carl took place in the presence of Catherine. The prince looked at her for instructions as to his reply. She replied for him by stating that he was betrothed to her and would marry her. If any usurper took her place at his father's death the king of Pomaria would send an armed force to Lituria to seat its rightful sovereign on the throne.

Now, the kingdom of Brentino was even more powerful than that of Pomaria. The hand of the Princess Xenia had indeed been offered to Carl, and doubtless if Carl had seen her he would have obeyed his father. On receiving a refusal to King Hubert's plans the wily Van der Donken proposed to Carl and Catherine a compromise. He suggested that Carl marry some girl of low degree. His father, to withdraw him from such a union, would consent to a divorce and his marriage with Catherine. Again the prince looked at the princess for instructions. She agreed to take the matter under consideration and after long reflection consented to the plan, making it a condition that she should approve of the girl the prince married. Van der Donken agreed to this, though he well knew that Catherine would not consent to the prince marrying any girl who was capable of drawing him away from her.

The prince returned to Lituria with Van der Donken, it having been arranged that the princess should follow to inspect the girl he would marry as soon as one could be found to do so on receiving a price and giving her consent to a subsequent divorce. In due time the princess was called for and introduced into the home of a poor widow whose daughter had consented to the terms.

Anneke was the name of the bride, a little Dutch girl in a number of petticoats and wooden shoes. Her complexion was brown, her face covered with pimples and her hair a fiery red. Her appearance was that of a half witted person. As soon as Catherine saw her she gave her consent to the marriage, which took place in her presence and that of Van der Donken and Anneke's mother. Then Carl went back to Pomaria with Catherine.

Meanwhile King Hubert had kept himself in seclusion, but as soon as his minister announced to him that his son had been married he appeared again in public apparently as well as ever. Catherine, hearing of his recovery, was quite taken aback, fearing that she had been tricked. But, remembering the wedding with the homely Dutch girl, she took heart.

Then came Van der Donken to the prince with an order from his father to appear at court and prepare to go on a visit to the Princess Xenia, with whom a marriage for him had been contracted. The prince and Catherine after consultation agreed that the time had come for making known to his father his marriage and refusing to be divorced unless he were permitted to marry Catherine and inherit the crown as well. But Van der Donken said that King Hubert's mind was set on the Princess Xenia, and he believed that if she could be persuaded to decline Prince Carl the matter would be simplified. He suggested that Carl pay the visit to Xenia, but so made up that he would appear unattractive to her, and he could treat her so indifferently or even rudely that she would refuse to marry him.

The minister finally persuaded Catherine to agree to this, and the prince went back to Lituria with Van der Donken. Then, having made his preparations for the journey, taking with him only two friends who were in his secret, he set out for the capital of Brentino. On the way he darkened his complexion. One of his friends, an artist, painted little pimples all over his face, and the prince put on a red wig. He had been much repelled by these features on the part of Anneke and thought they might repel the Princess Xenia.

When the formal introduction took place the princess raised her fan to her face—what for no one knew, but Prince Carl presumed that it was to conceal her disgust for him. But it seemed rather to conceal a smile, for she offered her hand to him most cordially. He bowed and kissed it, then looked up at a very beautiful girl. There was that in her appearance to remind him of some one he had seen before, but he could not place the person. He tried to say something disagreeable, but the words stuck in his throat. The princess slipped her hand on his arm and drew him away from the others into an apartment where they would be alone together.

From the moment the prince saw the Princess Xenia he was attracted to her, and it was not long before he regretted having disobeyed his father in refusing to marry her. The saying "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" did not pertain to him. The Princess Catherine being out of sight was out of mind. Nevertheless he had been so long dominated by her superior will that the idea of being unfaithful to her filled him with terror. At the same time the influence of the woman present became steadily stronger. The Princess Xenia did everything needful to concentrate his mind upon herself. She gave fetes in her honor, and in each her costume was designed to enhance her beauty.

Prince Carl had promised Catherine that every day he would send her a message telling her how he was getting on in repelling the Princess Xenia. The day after his arrival at Brentino he wrote that he was acting as brutally as possible. But those about him noticed that his pimples had suddenly been healed. The second day he wrote that he had offended the princess. But while dressing in the morning he washed off his dark complexion. The third day he wrote that he was very near being sent away. This he really believed to be true, for when sitting by Xenia she pulled off his wig and appeared to be very much displeased with him for coming to court disguised.

On the fourth day Carl wrote Catherine that something especial had happened; he would write her a full account of it soon. This is what he referred to:

When he joined the Princess Xenia he found in her stead his wife, Anneke. She threw her arms around his neck, but he repelled her. Then she pulled off his red wig and, turning to a fountain, washed her face. Turning to him, he recognized the Princess Xenia.

"What does all this mean?" he asked.

"It means that your father, King Hubert, having received from my father an offer of my hand for you, informed us that so far as he was concerned the offer was accepted, but unfortunately, you had fallen under the spell of another woman. If, however, I would agree to a plan to defeat this other woman devised by his prime minister he hoped all would be well. I assented and was married to you as a homely simpleton."

The princess kicked off her wooden shoes and displayed a pair of tiny feet incased in kid shoes. She unfastened her petticoats and appeared in a morning gown of silk and lace. Next her bodice came off and showed a corsage to match her other apparel. Then the prince folded her in his arms.

The prince at once sent for Van der Donken, who came posthaste and was informed that Prince Carl and Princess Xenia, having been married secretly, desired that preparations for their public wedding should be made with as little delay as possible. The prince never wrote Catherine what had happened, having forgotten all about her. Van der Donken returned to King Hubert, and the king was so pleased with his management of the problem that he at once created him a duke.

An announcement made that the kingdoms of Lituria and Brentino would be united by the marriage of Prince Carl and the Princess Xenia filled the people of both kingdoms with delight. A few weeks later a public marriage took place at the capital of Brentino, at which there was great rejoicing. For many years Queen Xenia preserved the red wig and wooden shoes in which she had been privately married to King Carl, and after her death they were removed to the royal museum.

As for the Princess Catherine, she was so cut up by being tricked that she never married, and after her father's death the crown of Pomaria passed to another branch of the royal family.

SAFEGUARDING ROYALTY.

Precautions In Olden Days When an English Monarch Was Ill.

The British law retains some peculiar provisions with reference to the "illness of the king." These provisions are mere survivals in the present settled order of government, but there was a time when the king's incapacity afforded opportunity to aspirants to the throne to shorten his day at a minimum risk of detection. Accordingly certain wise precautions were matters of law.

In his "Institutes" Coke says: "If the King be taken sick there ought to be a warrant issue from the Privy Council, addressed to certain physicians and surgeons, authorizing them to administer to the Royal patient potiones, syrupos, laxitavas, medicinas, etc.; still, none of these should be given except by consent and advice of the Council, and they ought to set down in writing everything done and administered, and they should compound all drugs themselves and not entrust their preparation to any apothecary."

Coke thus wrote of precedent in 1610, and today the law is practically as he found it, although now the privy council simply hears reports of the progress of the king's malady and leaves actual treatment entirely to the physicians in direct charge of the case.—Pearson's Weekly.

Antiquity of Shorthand.

Shorthand is apt to be looked upon as an essentially modern art. The predecessors of Pitman—Byrom in the eighteenth century, Mason in the seventeenth—are dim and distant figures beyond which it seems useless to venture. Cicero dictated his orations to his freedman, T. Tullius Tiro, and was inconsolable when temporarily deprived of his services. He complained in a letter to a friend that, while "Tiro takes down whole phrases in a few signs, Spintharus (his provisional substitute) only writes in syllables." We need not, however, suppose that the "notae Tironianae" were actually invented by the freedman in question. As M. Guenin points out, the Romans created very few of the arts of peace, contenting themselves, as a rule, by copying from the Greeks. M. Guenin, however, indicates the banks of the Nile as the cradle of the art.

MESSRS. HARDY ENTERTAIN

Harold Hardy of the M. A. C. and Clarence Hardy of the U. of M. are spending the holiday vacation with their father Dr. P. B. Hardy and wife Tuesday evening they were hosts at a party of their young friends and all enjoyed a most delightful evening playing games. A fine supper was also a feature. The following were guests: Misses Ruth McKinney and Nina Lowry of the Ypsilanti Normal, Lucile Kelley of Plymouth, Loraine Westcott of Northville, Camilla Hayden and Hazel Pocklington, Wilfred Mills and Harold Halladay of the M. A. C., Harold Lowry and Leon McLachlin.

MISS MARY DINGMAN

"Miss Dingman is dead, died this morning."

This was the message given over the telephone Christmas morning to startled friends Very few knew she was ill at Mr. J. E. Waring's where she had been taken the Sunday before; and those did not know she was so seriously ill, but supposed she had the prevailing epidemic and would soon be well. Instead, the disease developed into bronchial pneumonia.

Mary C. Dingman was born September 18, 1844, at New York. She was one of a family of eight children, all of whom preceded her in death, also her father and mother, leaving her alone. She has lived in Tecumseh many years where she endeared herself to a large circle of friends and we learned to look upon her as a woman of wonderfully courageous Christian character.

Of a quiet unassuming personality, she yet developed strong characteristics. She was generous and hospitable almost to a fault, a loyal friend, a faithful and devoted member of the Presbyterian church. Her church was almost life to her and she firmly believed "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want" and "Cast thy bread upon the waters, and it shall return after many days."

Since the death of her sister Mrs. Fitzsimmons in Texas, we could see that she gradually failed, but she did not complain, but would say "O, I am well," always looking on the bright side and seeing rays of light in the darkest hours.

Mrs. Waring tenderly cared for her in the brief illness of a week and the funeral was held in the Waring home Monday afternoon, Dec 27.

Her pastor, Rev. Rex, spoke words appropriate for such a life; Mrs. Mills and Mrs Camburn—warm friends and members of her Sunday-school class—sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul." The Sunday school class attended in a body. The S. S. class, Missionary Circle, Ladies Aid Society and Wit and Wisdom Club sent fragrant lilies and carnations, covering the casket, as a tribute to a noble woman whom they loved The bearers were the elders of the church and Fred Rector. They gently lowered her into a grave in beautiful Brookside cemetery where loving friends can visit her last resting-place.

"So He giveth his beloved sleep."

MAY ROBSON IN "THE REJUVENATION OF AUNT MARY"

No theatrical announcement of several seasons has carried with it the certainty of a satisfactory entertainment to a greater degree than that of the coming appearance at the Bradley Opera House Wednesday night Jan. 5th of the distinguished comedienne, May Robson, in a revival of Anne Warner's delightful comedy classic, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." Theatregoers generally are also aware that there is only one Aunt Mary and she is personified by May Robson. In her hands the familiar play is like an April shower—refreshing The comedy lines which fairly pour down during the three acts tickle the risibilities to such an extent that be the auditor an occasional or constant theatregoer, he is forced to laugh all the time. Nearly every one is acquainted with that delightful personage, Aunt Mary Watkins, the maiden lady who is caught in the whirl of the great city and made into a "real sport," and for whom the world should be grateful to Miss Warner, her creator. Aunt Mary has lived all her life on a New England farm. Her nephew, a rather wild young fellow, who has caused his dear aunt all sorts of worry and expense because of his reckless life in New York, is suddenly favored with a visit from his relative in reply to a decoy message from some of his chums that he is ill, Aunt Mary, however, is wiser than she is credited with being. When she discovers the real condition of affairs she casts aside her New England demeanor and her aversion to high life and enters into the spirit of the lives of her nephew and his friends with such vigor that Jack is shocked Especially is this true of her actions at a dinner party given at the home of Jack's fiance in New York When Aunt Mary finally returns to her New England home, she makes so many changes that even her servants object. Instead of getting up with the chickens, she has breakfast in bed She abandons square-toed shoes for the latest model of high-heeled Oxfords, and plain dresses for all sorts of finery. The rejuvenation is a series of surprises and laugh pro-voking situations with here and there a touch of pathos to make the play ring true to life.

Patrons of the Bradley are very fortunate in being able to see this international comedienne in their own city It is very seldom that Miss Robson even considers a city as small as Tecumseh Miss Robson and her complete production has been brought here in its entirety at an enormous expense to the local management and we hope the engagement will prove as successful as did Fiske O'Hara's. Its a big undertaking to bring these big attractions to Tecumseh and they should be supported by every theatre going person in this vicinity A special 60 foot baggage car is required to carry the mammoth scenic production and setting for Miss Robson

PIERCE TEUTON LINE IN NEW BRITISH DRIVE

Germans Lose Trenches and 800 Are Captured.

LONDON, ENG. — The British expeditionary army has commenced a brilliant counter-offensive movement against the Germans in the region of Armentieres, where the Germans were to have started their new drive for Paris, according to an unofficial report received from Paris.

According to this report the British charged from their trenches before Armentieres after an intense artillery preparation, and taking the Germans by surprise, drove them from their first-line positions and took 800 prisoners. The losses on both sides were considerable.

HAS FAITH IN QUICK REMEDY FOR CATARRH

O. A. Wright & Son Guarantee that Hyomei will Relieve the Worst Cases of Catarrh in Tecumseh

When one of the most reputable concerns in Tecumseh guarantees that a medicine will produce benefit or they will refund the money, it speaks volumes for the merits of that remedy. It is in this way that O. A Wright & Son are selling Hyomei. the treatment that has helped so many cases of both acute and chronic catarrh in Tecumseh and vicinity.

Hyomei is not a pill nor is it a spray or a lotion that must be rubbed in. It is an oil, the air of which you just breathe in your nose, throat and lungs by the aid of an inhaler that comes with every outfit. Benefit will usually be seen from the very first treatment.

This air destroys all germ life in the air passages and lungs and enriches and purifies the blood with the additional ozone it supplies. It banishes catarrh of the head and throat and respiratory organs. Wherever these mucous membranes contain catarrhal germs, there Hyomei will do its work of healing.

The complete Hyomei outfit is inexpensive and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks' treatment.

Remember that if Hyomei does not relieve you, O. A. Wright & Son will refund your money.

IN JUSTICE COURT

A suit brought by Sam Lintaricori against George Coscerilli to recover some $300 which he claimed was owing him for labor before Judge Hosmer Thursday afternoon. Atty. J. A. Waters of Manchester appeared for the plaintiff and Attorney F. A. Michner of Adrian for the defendent. Attorney Waters based his plea on the fact that Sam was a minor showing his pastport and dates in proof, and claimed that under the law a contract made with a minor was null and void and could not be influence.

He cited recent cases to prove his argument The Attorney for the defendent based his argument on the fact that Sam was working for himself on commission bases and their books showed that they had paid him what was owing him. The case was quite spirited. The descendents of Sunny, Italy and several others were brought in as witnesses. The case went to the jury about 5 o'clock p. m after two hours they brought in a verdict of $12.50 costs for the plaintiff.

MANY TROUBLES DUE TO WEAK KIDNEYS

"It is no use advertising a medicine unless the medicine itself is good enough to back up the claims you make for it," said O. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist, to a Heraldman. On the other hand it is a pleasure to sell a medicine when our customers come in afterward and tell us, how much good it has done them. And that is why we like to sell and recommend Solvax, the great kidney remedy. We have so much faith in this article that we are going to guarantee it in the future and will return the money to any purchaser of Solvax whom it does not help."

This shows great faith in Solvax. It really is a most unusual medicine because it overcomes the worst cases of kidney complaint by removing the cause. It goes straight to the seat of the trouble. It soaks right it and cleans out the kidneys and makes them pass off the uric acid and poisonous waste matter that lodges in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatic pains; sooths and heals the bladder and quickly ends all such troubles.

FIRE AT HOLLOWAY

BUSINESS SECTION OF HOLLOWAY WIPED OUT.

Loss Will Reach Upwards To $25,000.

About midnight Wednesday night fire broke out in the double building occupied by Joe Mueller impliment store and the Blouch general store.

Mr. Mueller was asleep in his rooms over the store and was awakened by the smell of smoke. By the time he was dressed and out of the building it was enveloped in flames. Fire spread rapidly and soon the LaPointe building next to it and the LaPointe residence were also afire.

The buildings were all of frame construction and when once afire burned rapidly. Holloway has no fire protection and before help could reach them the buildings were burned to the ground.

A great throng of people gathered coming from Britton Ridgeway and other towns A telephone message was sent to Williamson Bros on the breaking out of the fire. Chas. and Leon and Floyd Heesen made a quick run taking with them a supply of chemicals but when they reached Holloway the fire was to far advanced for any aid

The fire spread so rapidly that very little could be saved of the stock in the stores. Back of the store used by Blouch were buildings used for storage of goods and these they were able to save.

The postoffice was also in Blouch building and the contents were nearly a total loss This building was owned by the Grange. Blouch estimated his stock at $12,000 and his loss about $10,000 with $7,000 insurance.

Muellers stock of impliments was valued from $5,000 to $6,000 practically a total loss, saving only two cutters, He carried $3,700 insurance. Williamson Bros, were located in the LaPointe building both building and stock a total loss. Williamson valued their stock at $1,000 to $1,200 and carried $500 insurance The LaPointe residence just west of the stores was also destroyed. This was occupied by Luman Gray who had charge of the Williamson store Mr. Gray saved about half of his household goods and carried no insurance The house west of the LaPointes was in danger but by vigorous efforts was saved, the house being plastered with snow.

The furniture was all removed and later moved back. These stores were all on the north side of main street.

The fire was a bad blow to Holloway as it wipes out nearly every business place in the town leaving it without grocery stores. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The Christmas decorations at St. Peter's church which will remain in the church for several Sundays were of an unusual and interesting character. The manger was erected by Mr C. Patterson, and the general design of the decorations was formulated by Mr. T LeBarron. Several men cut the greens, and many of the ladies of the church kindly assisted in roping them. Nobody should miss seeing the decorations before they are taken down.

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH; CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS
Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. A RARE TRIO.

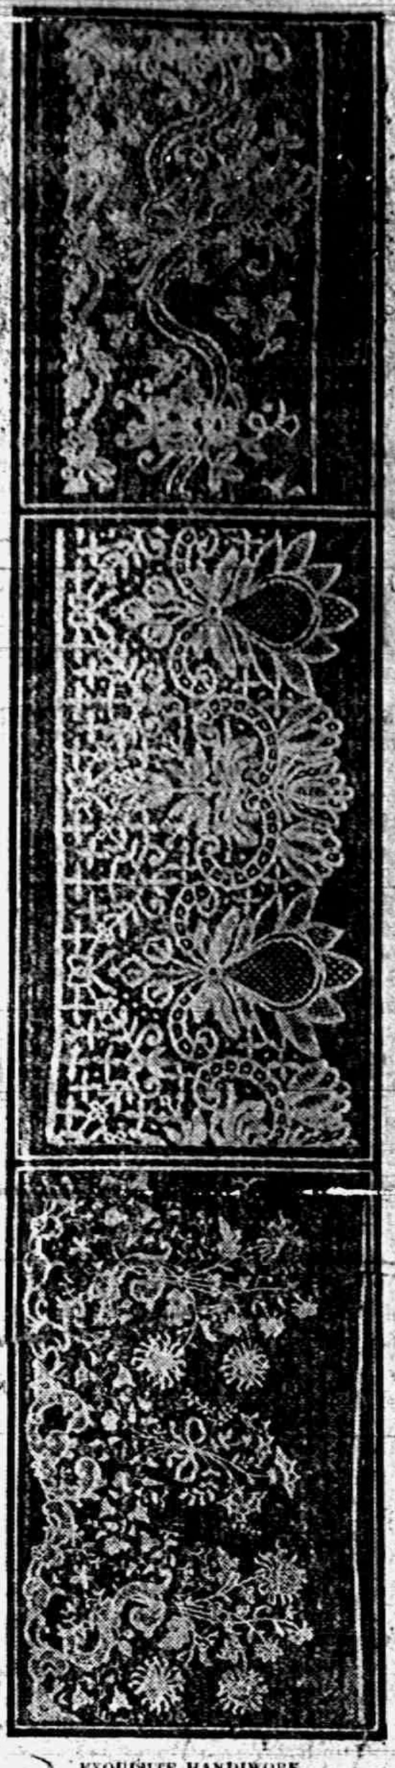
Specimens of Belgian Laces on Sale In This Country For Relief.

These are samples of the choice work that the small army of Belgian lacemakers, 40,000 strong and thrown into idleness, oftentimes in need, by the war, are fortunate enough to have placed under the auspices of the commission for relief in Belgium, 71 Broadway, New York. Traveling exhibits and sales are being arranged by the commission, and it is hoped that prominent women's clubs will be interested to help with smaller exhibits. In this collection, worth $200,000, are thirty different patterns of lace, ranging from edgings, baby caps, kerchiefs and collars at reasonable prices up to bridal veils 300 years old, fit for museums. Our top illustration is of flanders guipure about nine inches wide, at $9.50 per yard. The second is also guipure of a richer pattern, valued at $12, and the third is brussels applique of very fine mesh, worth $65 a yard. Many of these laces exhibited were made by women blinded and palsied with age. Each piece bears an official seal and number, which insure the worker her percentage of proceeds.



EXQUISITE HANDIWORK.

Appearance and Personality.

The question of "taste" in dress must be more or less settled for you by your appearance and personality. If you suit your own type and are close enough to the prevailing style to be inconspicuous in a crowd, then you may consider yourself dressed in good taste, whatever may be the judgment of others. Very often the color is the point of difference in a question of taste in dress, but this, too, should be inconspicuous.

The simple rule for good dressing given above—wear clothes that are inconspicuous, but becoming—is the only safe one for women to follow. When you are in Rome it is safe to do as the Romans do, and if you are dressing for Fifth avenue you must dress as the inhabitants of that avenue do. You can bring out your own personality, however, by little added touches, which are not enough in themselves to make you a cynosure of all eyes, but yet are sufficient to lend individuality to the whole.

Molasses Cookies.

Four cupfuls of flour, one cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of ginger, one-half teaspoonful of soda.

The molasses is first scalded, then removed from the stove, then the butter, sugar, ginger and salt (a pinch) are added. As soon as cool the soda is dissolved in one-fourth cupful of water and added. The flour is then mixed so as to form a soft dough, rolled one-eighth inch thick, cut and baked in a moderate oven.

A City Once Too Loyal.

Bristol has always been a loyal city and once displayed its loyalty to its own eminent disadvantage. When Henry VII. paid the city a visit in 1490 the citizens turned out in such style to welcome him that the miserly monarch, casting an eye upon the finery displayed, promptly levied an impost of £20 on each inhabitant "because their wives went too fine."—London Chronicle.

The Lamp of a Man's Life.

Dr. Holmes said the lamp of a man's life has three wicks—brain, blood and breath—and to turn down any one of them makes the other two go out. The wounds a man will survive and even disregard so long as his head, heart and lungs are unhurt have long been one of the wonders of war history.

Voltaire and the Doctors.

Voltaire despised doctors and, like Macbeth, thought it well to "throw physic to the dogs." The French author once said, "A physician is a man who pours drugs of which he knows little into the body of a man of which he knows less."

Its merit has been tested by old and young. In use over 45 years. Get a bottle to day. Avoid the risk of serious lung ailments. Druggists adv

Bears.

Bears vary in price, the most expensive being the polar bears, which cost about $150. Most of the arctic expeditions bring back polar bears, and, notwithstanding the heat, they are happy and contented in captivity. Native bears are much cheaper. One member of the bear family in Bronx park, New York, is a spectacle bear, so called because of the makeup about the eyes. He comes from South America and was a present from a private individual, being as far as is known, the only specimen in captivity.—Boston Herald.

Attentive.

"Is Watson still paying attention to that widow he was courting two years ago?"

"You bet he is. They are married now, and he has to pay strict attention to everything she says."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It is the greatest pain killer ever discovered. Simply laid on the skin—no rubbing required—it drives the pain away. It is really wonderful.
Mervin H. Soister, Berkeley, Cal., writes: "Last Saturday, after tramping around the Panama Exposition with wet feet, I came home with my neck so stiff that I couldn't turn. $3,000 TO JONES' CREDITORS

Author-Forger Makes First Payment After One Year's Parole.

Detroit, Jan. 3.—Frank Jones, author-forger, completed his first year on parole by disbursing more than $3,000 to his creditors, former stockholders of the American Electric Fuse company of Muskegon, which went to the wall as the result of his confessed forgeries amounting to many thousands of dollars. In addition to the money received from his writings Jones has earned enough to provide for himself, wife and son.

All the funds furnished by Jones have gone to small stockholders of the fuse company, former employes and widows and orphans woh are listed among the creditors. Claims still hold against Jones amount to nearly $1,000,000.

Finds New Tramp Bane.

Hillsdale, Jan. 3.—By requiring all applicants for lodging and food to earn what they ask by chopping wood, which is distributed among the poor families of the city, a noticeable decrease in the number of wayfarers has taken place at Jonesville.

U. S. CONSUL IS SUBSEA VICTIM

Robert S. McNeely Loses Life as Persia Sinks.

TORPEDOED WITHOUT WARNING

One Hundred and Fifty-eight Persons Reported Saved—Estimates Place Number Lost at 392—Submarine Made No Effort to Rescue Victims—U. S. Asks for Report.

Washington, Jan. 3.—United States Consul McNeely is among those lost on the torpedoed liner Persia, says a cablegram to the state department from Consul Garrels at Alexandria.

London, Jan. 3.—Lord Inchcape, chairman of the board of directors of the Peninsular & Oriental Steam Navigation company, has received the following telegram from Colonel Clive Bigham, one of the rescued passengers of the Persia. Colonel Bigham is a son-in-law of Lord Mersey, and with 157 other survivors of the torpedoed liner is now at Alexandria. The telegram says:

The sinking of the Persia was caused by a torpedo which struck the ship on the port bow on December 30 at 1.05 p. m. The Persia at the time was forty miles south of the eastern end of the Island of Crete.

No Warning Given.

No previous warning was given. Neither was an attempt made at assistance. Within five minutes after she was torpedoed the vessel sank.

It was impossible to lower the starboard lifeboats owing to the heavy list to port. Five or six boats from the port side were able to be lowered. I did not see this myself, as I was washed overboard when the steamer capsized.

The conduct of the passengers and crew was splendid. There was no struggling nor panic.

Four boats, after being thirty hours at sea, were picked up by H. M. S. (name deleted by censor), and received every kindness and attention from the captain and officers. Search is being made for the remaining boats in the neighborhood of the disaster.

One hundred and fifty-eight persons have been landed at Alexandria out of a total of 550 aboard.

392 Lives Lost.

Reports to Lloyds' and the British admiralty have said the four boats mentioned by Colonel Bigham were the only ones launched. If this is true Colonel Bigham's telegram indicates that 392 persons lost their lives on the Persia.

Lansing Orders Testimony Taken.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Secretary of State Lansing cabled Arthur Garrels, American consul at Alexandria, Egypt, to take depositions of all survivors of the British liner Persia, sunk in the Mediterranean with the loss of several American lives, to determine if possible whether it was destroyed by a torpedo or a mine.

The first report to give details of the disaster came from Consul Garrels. The state department gave out the following paraphrase of the official message:

"Persia sunk 300 miles northwest of Alexandria at five minutes after 1 on the afternoon of December 30. Steamer sank in five minutes. No submarine was seen, but an officer saw its wake. One hundred and fifty-five out of 400 passengers and crew were landed at Alexandria January 1.

"Charles H. Grant among survivors, but McNeely probably lost, as he was last seen in the water."

Charles N. McNeely, believed to have been lost, was the newly appointed American consul at Aden, Arabia, and was en route to his post. His brother, Dowd McNeely of Waxhaw, N. C., of whom nothing has been heard, was believed to have accompanied him. Grant, who was the only other American known to be on the Persia, lives in Boston.

While this report was considered too meager to form the basis for any expression of opinion, many officials inclined to the belief that the Persia had been torpedoed.

Officials holding this view interpreted the dispatch to mean that the vessel was torpedoed without warning and that no attempt was made to escape, as it evidently had no intimation of the submarine's approach.

Had Right to Carry Guns.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Officials here attach no importance to the presence of the 4.7-inch guns which Consul Garrels reports the Persia as carrying provided it can be shown they were for defense purposes only. The rules of the United States in regard to guns on merchant ships were set forth in a memorandum sent by the state department to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador on Sept. 19, 1914.

Peter and Marya

A Story of a Russian Inventor.

By MARTHA V. MONROE

The harvest was ended, and the peasantry in a farming region in the province of Tula, Russia, were gathered in a barn to celebrate the event with a dance. A young man entered, his serious face contrasting with the joyousness on that of the others, and stood looking at the dancers, his eyes evidently searching for some one among them. Presently a young girl with the fair hair and soft complexion of the north sailed by laughing at something her partner was saying to her.

As she passed the place where the young man was standing she caught sight of him. Her laughter ceased, and the merry look on her face vanished, giving place to one equally troubled. She made the circle with the dancers, then, coming again opposite the young man mentioned, stopped, excused herself to her partner and hastened toward the former.

"Oh, Peter," she said, "what is the matter?"

"I have seen your father. He says it cannot be; he has no dowry for you. I can earn on the farm barely enough to keep myself alive. It would be a sin for two persons as poor as we to marry and bring forth children to suffer. He is right. We must withdraw from each other, Marya. There is no help for it."

The girl put her arm through his, and together they went outside. A full moon was looking down on them with its peaceful but cold light. Within were the sounds of mirth and music. For these young lovers their surroundings were in bitter contrast with the agony both felt.

"What are you going to do, Peter?" asked Marya.

There was a brief silence, at the end of which he said with almost a wail, "I am going into the factory."

The girl, who still held his arm, shuddered as if stricken by a deadly bolt.

The factory was a government institution where something was being made the nature of which no one knew. When a workman entered its portals he did so with the understanding that he would never come out. Once in possession of the secret contained within those gloomy walls, the government took care that he should not have an opportunity to reveal it.

Peter Marinoff, born and brought up among the farm class in Russia, was much out of place. His ancestors had been nobles who in one of the upheavals that country has suffered were impoverished. But in him was an inheritance of genius that had lain dormant through several generations. It had not yet been suspected either by him or any one else.

Under the cold moonlight Peter and Marya parted. No ray of hope found its way into the breast of either. "I cannot be yours in the flesh, Peter," she wailed, "but I will be yours in heaven. No one shall ever come between us." "In the factory there is no marriage, Marya. I shall join you in the hereafter." Then Peter pulled himself away from the girl, who clung to him pitifully.

The next morning he walked several leagues to the factory and presented himself for admission. There was always room for workmen there, for few cared to enter a service from which there was no retreat. Nor was it necessary that he should have any preparation for the work done there. When a man is to spend his whole life in a certain employment his employer can afford to educate him for his duties.

Peter's only pleasure in life was when the moon was at the full on a clear night—to stand in the factory yard, look at the orb moving like the hand of a great clock in a circle of the heavens and think of Marya. He was reminded of their parting, and as one's remembrance of a face is that of the last time it has been seen so he always saw Marya's with the moonlight streaming down upon it and wearing a look of despair.

The factory was a place where explosives were manufactured. The only protection for the secret processes in use there was to make life prisoners of those engaged in compounding the chemicals which constituted the explosive substance. Most of the men employed were kept from knowing these secrets by being confined to only a portion of the work. Many were not sufficiently intelligent. But there were persons who understood the whole of one or more processes.

Peter was a born scientist. He soon showed that he was capable of being made one of the principal compounders, and, since there were books in the factory suited to the work being done, he studied, though rather from a desire to escape his memories of the outside world than any desire to benefit himself. When absorbed in the fairy tales of chemical science, for the time being he forgot all else.

Peter was so serviceable that after awhile he was put in charge of the manufacture of a certain explosive. It was not only expensive, but unreliable. Peter, being a natural investigator, set himself to work to find some other combination that would not cost so much to manufacture, but would give better satisfaction.

were only women in the compartment. Ned made a grab, but his hand slipped over a fabric of woman's apparel.

One of the girls had kissed him. Whoever she was she must have made a careful observation as to his exact position, for she could not see him. She first struck his cheek, but instantly passed to his lips. The whole contact occupied only one or two seconds.

Nine or ten minutes of darkness remained, during which the perpetrator of this bit of mischief might compose herself. Doubtless all the girls were conspirators and would bear themselves in such manner as to protect the guilty one. Probably the kissing had been done on a bet. Ned's opinion was that Jack had been the perpetrator, but he could not be sure.

The matter must have been well arranged during the stop before the train entered the tunnel, for when it emerged there was not the slightest indication on the face of any of the girls that anything unusual had occurred. Ned scanned the features of each without observing any betrayal. As for Jack, she began at once as soon as there was light to read a guidebook. The only person in the party who did not seem to have a secret was the duenna, and Ned made up his mind that the mischief had been hatched without her knowledge.

The ride to Lucerne was not long. Though Ned kept his ears open for information, not a word was spoken that would give him even an inkling as to which one of the girls had kissed him. He watched to see if the party were going to a hotel, intending to go to the same hostelry. But they went to a pension, and he lost track of them.

One day while Ned was in Munich a clap of thunder came from a clear sky in a declaration of war by Austria against Servia. It was followed by another from Russia, another from [illegible] from France, England and the rest.

Ned, who was intending to return to America by way of England, had drawn the balance on his letter of credit, consisting of some $600. It was evident to him that he had better get out of Europe as quickly as possible. But by what route? To make his way through France seemed next to impossible. Italy was a neutral country, and the distance compared with any other route was short. He would go to Italy.

But the only mode of conveyance was legs. This did not trouble him. Indeed, he had been making pedestrian tours among the Alps. Putting what clothes he could carry in a pack on his back, he sallied forth to walk something like a hundred and fifty miles. Unfortunately he must pass through a portion of Austria. As soon as he struck the border he found everything in confusion. He was obliged to show his passport continually, and, as for getting a conveyance for any part of his journey, that was out of the question.

One morning while he was trudging along within ten or twelve miles of the Italian border he saw an Austrian officer with several soldiers stop an automobile and say something to some women in it, and they got out. Then the officer put one of his men in it for a chauffeur, and the machine sped away, leaving the women in the road.

Ned inferred that the machine had been taken by the Austrian government and hastened to offer his sympathies. He found a despairing group. And to his astonishment they were the duenna and the girls with whom he had passed through the St. Gothard tunnel. Forgetting that he was supposed to be a German, he said in good American English:

"Ladies, can I be of any assistance to you?"

"Oh, my goodness gracious!" exclaimed all the girls in a breath.

"For heaven's sake," said the duenna, "what are we going to do?"

"It is ten miles to the Italian border," replied Ned. "If you are able to walk it I think we can get a conveyance of some kind there."

"But we haven't a dollar with which to hire a conveyance."

"Don't trouble yourselves about that. I am well provided."

Under Ned's guidance and protection the party set out for the Italian border, striking it on a railroad north of Verona. They succeeded in getting transportation to Milan and thence to Genoa.

All expenses were paid by Ned until the party reached Genoa, where they found that certain Americans in Italy desirous of going home had chartered a steamer. The women were still without money, and Ned had just enough to carry them all home.

"I will pay the passage of each and all of you," he said to them, "on one condition."

"Name any condition you like," said the duenna.

"Tell me which one of you kissed me in the St. Gothard tunnel."

"Never!" exclaimed all the girls at once.

"Very well; then you'll remain in Italy."

Finally Jack broke the deadlock. "I cannot tell a lie. It was our chaperon."

There was a burst of laughter, and Brewerton gave in, pretending to take Jack's confession for a real one, though he knew that she was the guilty person.

The girls and their duenna occupied one stateroom on the return voyage, and Ned slept on deck.

Ned and Jaquelin on moonlight nights sat on deck a great deal. There is no further record of any more kisses between them, but Ned having tasted the lips of his companion once was not likely to sit in the moonlight without tasting them again.

A month after their arrival Ned and Jack became man and wife.

Most Awkward.

An old, steady going farmer was accustomed to ride to the market town upon a rather bad tempered horse.

One day his man Bob brought the animal, which was especially vicious that morning, to the door, the horse trying to bite and kick and giving a good deal of trouble.

The farmer mounted the horse with some difficulty and began to walk it out of the yard when Bob, who still entertained ill feeling against the animal, picked up a stone and flung it at him with all his force; but, alas, his aim was erratic, and the missile struck his master on the head.

Half dazed for a moment, the farmer turned slowly in his saddle, and, not suspecting the real cause of the blow, he measured with his eye the horse's hind hoofs and his own head and, settling himself in the saddle again, started off with the remark, "Well, he allus was an okard beggar."—London Mail.

Karlsruhe's First Family.

Sleepy Karlsruhe is amusingly depicted by Sir Horace Rumbold, who passed a dull part of his diplomatic career there. He found Karlsruhe society entirely composed of half a dozen families of long descent and small means, who had intermarried for generations. Whoever was not a Gemmingen was a Hardenberg or a Duerckheim or an Amerongen. Talleyrand had a tale of his first visit to the Karlsruhe theater. "Who is that lady in the third box on the first tier?" "That is a Gemmingen," said the young native who accompanied him. "And that general in the stalls?" "Also a Gemmingen." At last Talleyrand exclaimed, "Why, you all seem to be Gemmingens!" "Yes," said the youth in German-French, "but all are not good Gemmingens. I am a good Gemmingen—Gemmingen-Gemmingen-Gutenberg!"—London Standard.

The Answer.

Father (teaching his six-year-old son arithmetic by giving a problem to his wife; begs his son to listen)—Mother, if you had a dollar and I gave you five more, what would you have? Mother (replying absently)—Hysterics.—Brooklyn Life.

An Assurance.

She—I suppose it is a genuine antique? The Dealer—Why, of course it is, madam! And, besides, it is the very latest thing in antiques!—Puck.

Kalamazoo, Jan. 3.—There will be no wedding bells for Ralph Blanchard and Flora E. Cutler, of this city, for a time at least, Judge Weimer, alleging Blanchard got a divorce decree by fraud and by setting it aside, making him still the spouse of Dora Blanchard.

All arrangements had been made for the ceremony Sunday evening. Blanchard was given a divorce in circuit court. A few minutes after the decree was signed he obtained the marriage license to wed Miss Cutler. When this information reached Judge Weimer, he issued a writ setting aside the divorce and Blanchard again became the lawful husband of Mrs. Blanchard.

When giving his testimony in circuit court, Blanchard alleged that his wife, Dora, had called up his attorney many times for information regarding the divorce and he inferred that she was contemplating getting married as soon as the decree was granted. Judge Weimer ruled that the woman should not marry within two years.

RINGLING, CIRCUS MAN, DEAD

Recently an opera house built at Baraboo by Mr. Ringling at a cost of $125,000 was completed.

AN INSECT MARVEL.

Curious and Complex Is the Tongue of the Butterfly.

Of all the marvels in which the world of insect life is so rich none is more curious and remarkable than the tongue of the butterfly.

This is always of great length. When not in use it is coiled like a watch spring in a flat spiral close to the head. But when the butterfly visits the flower on which it feeds the tongue is uncoiled, the tip inserted deep in the heart of the flower and the juices sucked up.

The butterfly's tongue really consists of two tubes. Each of these has a concave inner face, whose edges interlock one with the other, so as to form a third or central tube.

In butterflies we have the highest development of the insect race, so far as beauty is concerned. In other respects, however, they do not hold so high a place. They are outranked in intelligence by ants, bees and wasps and in perfection of external parts and mechanical excellence of the joints by beetles.

The colors and patterns on the wings which make butterflies so beautiful are due to the arrangements of innumerable scales that can be distinguished only with a powerful microscope. In some cases these scales are themselves colored, but often the effect of color is only optical, due to the reflection of light from the delicate ridges on each scale.—New York American.

Blunderbuss.

In using the word "blunderbuss" we unconsciously imply a sense of disparagement for the shooting powers of our forefathers contrasted with the precision of the modern rifle. The word itself has, however, a terrible enough meaning and disdains all connecton with "blunder." "Blunderbuss," in fact, as we have it, is a strange corruption—perhaps not altogether untinged with the sense and sound of "blunder"—of the old Dutch word "donderbuss," which can be literally translated into the English "thunder box" or "thunder barrel."

Unfailing.

The prime minister sent for the wisest man in the land.

"I've got a lot of stuff about our country that I'd like to have known throughout the world, but it's pretty dry, and I'm afraid other peoples won't read it. What shall I do?"

"Put it in a book," said the sage, "and make the title 'Secret Diplomatic Memoirs.' They'll eat it up, statistics and all."—Boston Transcript.

AMUSING POLITENESS.

When a Couple of Natives Pass the Time of Day In Japan.

I had always heard that there was lots of politeness in Japan, but I had hardly expected to find that it often blocked traffic. When two Japanese meet on the narrow streets you've got to wait until the ceremony is over or go around. On meeting they do not shake hands and have it over with, as we do back home, but begin bowing and each asking the other the latest news from his worshipful ancestors. It would be an open insult—smack in the face—for one Japanese to meet another without asking him how his ancestors fared. Their ancestors are always an open subject for discussion. A Jap is never too busy to engage in conversation about his dear, departed forbears. The weather can look out for itself. The gripping topic is how some of the ancestors are getting along who passed to their reward a couple of hundred years ago.

When two Japanese meet they stop squarely in the middle of the street and begin bowing. Their bow is not just a twitch of the head. Instead of that it begins at the waist, sweeping over the entire upper part of the body, even to the outlying hands, bending the figure over until it looks like a great inverted V teetering for a moment on one prong. There are traces of the colonial in their bow, with a pronounced military strain running through it.

When they are doubled over one of them says to the other, "Oh, honored sir, to what do I owe my great good fortune that I have the pleasure of meeting such an esteemed man this day?"

The other man, with his head down, comes quickly back with "You do me a great honor with such words, and I only wish that I were worthy of them. May I crave your indulgence while I ask how your stomach finds itself this morning?"

The first concern of one Japanese on meeting another is to know how the other's stomach fares, and after this momentous question is settled they pass on to their ancestors, who while the conversation is on the stomach have to take a back seat.—Homer Croy in Leslie's.

TURNING THE HAIR WHITE.

How a Shock May Effect the Change In a Single Night.

That hair ever turns white in a single night has been emphatically denied by the doctors, in spite of historic instances—such as that of Marie Antoinette—to the contrary. But Dr. Lebar called the attention of the Societe Medicale des Hopitaux of Paris to an actual case. It was that of a young French soldier who was blown into the air by a mine and buried in the earth, from which he extricated himself with difficulty.

The man was deafened by the detonation, his face was burned, and there were several bruises on his head. He was taken to a neighboring hospital, where the following day he noticed four islets of white hair on the left fronto-parieto-occipital region of his head. The loss of color was complete from the roots to the ends of the hairs, and the white hairs were as firmly in his scalp as their brown neighbors.

According to the London Lancet, quoting Metchnikoff, when a hair begins to whiten there appear in the cortex cells with prolongations which gradually come into relation with the cells containing the pigment granules and absorb them. These "pigmentophages," as Metchnikoff calls them, descend toward the root of the hair to scatter in the skin, of which they are the pigmentary cells. They disappear as soon as the decoloration is achieved.

A nervous shock may hasten the mobilization of these cells, as the whitening takes place at points on the scalp which have been the seat of injury.

W. W. Foulke Quits as Indiana Candidate for U. S. Senate.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 3—William W. Foulke of Richmond, recently mentioned for the nomination for United States senator on the Progressive ticket, announces he will not be a candidate in view of the movement started by the friends of J. Frank Hanly, mentioned as Progressive candidate for governor.

Hanly believes the Progressive platform must favor amendments to the state and national constitutions calling for prohibition and planks opposing the initiative and referendum and recall of judges and judicial decisions. These things Foulke says he will not submit to.

C. A. Wright & Son Guarantees to Return the Money if Mi-o-na Does not Relieve You.

"It's a pleasure to sell a medicine when our customers come in afterward and tell us how much good it has done them," said C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist to a Hearld man, "and that is why we like to sell and recommend Mi-o-na, the dyspepsia remedy. We have so much faith in this article that we are going to guarantee it in the future, and will return the money to any purchaser of Mi-o-na whom it does not help. That may seem rash but our customers have said so many good words in its favor that we do not expect to have many packages returned.

Anyone who has dyspepsia, whose food does not digest well, and who has to take thought as to what he can eat, and when, can leave 50 cents deposit at our store and take home a box of Mi-o-na and if the remedy does not regulate his digestion and help his dyspepsia he can withdraw his money."

This shows great faith in the merit of Mi-o-na. It is really a most unusual medicine and the rapid increase of sales since C. A. Wright & Son introduced it in Tecumseh shows that it does all that it is claimed to do—relieves dyspepsia, regulates digestion and enables those who use it to eat just what they want with no fear of troubles after. adv

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH; CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. Rome, Jan. 3.—The dearness of food in Hungary, although not so marked as in Austria, is already leading to increased agitations in favor of peace. FORD IS BACK IN LITTLE OLD U. S.

Now Puts Blame for War on "Peepul" Themselves.

PEACE MAKER IS ENCOURAGED

He Thinks His Mission Has Done Some Good, but Admits One King Was Afraid to Visit Him Because Latter's People Got Wind of It—No Fights on Oscar II.

New York, Jan. 3.—Henry Ford, home again after failing to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas," but, nevertheless, emphatic in his declaration that he "did not regret what he had done and was sure that it had had a good effect," has arrived on the Norwegian American liner Bergensfjord. His home-coming was in strong contrast to his departure. Instead of the blazing bunting and the clamor of applause that sent the peace ship Oscar II on her mission, the returning pacificist was spirited away from the ship in a private cutter, landed at an out of the way spot somewhere between the Battery and Forty-second street and hurried in a taxicab to the Waldorf where he remained until he left for Detroit.

"I went over there to show the people that I was willing to give more than my money for cause of peace," Ford said. "I feel that I am only the custodian of my money. It was given to me by these very people who are being slaughtered in the trenches. I can't use any more of it than I am using now and I want to devote the rest to benefiting these people who helped me to earn it.

"I came back because I had a slight touch of the grippe and that hastened me a bit, but when I left New York I told Mrs. Ford that I would return in about five weeks. I had intended to take the steamer that sailed today. How do I fell now? Fine."

Ford Blames the "Peepul."

When asked what impressions he brought back from the war, Mr. Ford astonished his listeners by declaring sadly:

"I went to Europe blaming the capitalists, the bankers, the munition makers, for this war. I have come back blaming the people, the very same people who are being slaughtered in the trenches. They have neglected to select the proper heads for their governments, or to help them after they have been selected. When they get a man in office they do not keep in touch with him; they don't write letters to him, they do not tell him what they want. They select people to govern them and then allow the militarists to twist these same people for their own ends.

One Pusillanimous King.

"I remember that one poor king—I don't remember which one it was—wrote us when we landed that he could not see us simply because the newspapers had said that he was going to. He is a bad man, it seems to me, to keep a country out of war if he can't give a better excuse than that. We did not want to see any kings anyway." He laughed. "We didn't get any assurances of sympathy from any officials but we got them from other people who I think were just as good. I never saw a better body than the delegation that went from Sweden to Norway. I saw some of the Holland delegates and they impressed me just as strongly."

At this point, Mr. Ford paused to explain emphatically that the voyage of the Oscar II. was not really his own private venture at all, but a part of the Womans' International Peace Congress which is to be held at The Hague.

"The idea is not mine at all," he declared. "The fact is that I am merely using my money in a good cause to finance the congress. The people who sailed with me on the Oscar II. are going to elect delegates who will go on to The Hague, while the rest will return soon to this country. I have been advised that a ship has been chartered to take the delegates to Holland. I sent them word not to take any risks of an ocean voyage, but I understand that they have been assured that everything will be made safer for them."

Not Advertising Scheme.

Then he leaned forward and said:

"Now I want to ask you newspaper men a question. You know what the current opinion is. Tell me, is it generally believed as I have heard rumored, that I am doing all this for personal glorification?

"Why I don't need advertising. The Ford factory is 15,000 cars behind in orders now. Why should I do a thing like this for notoriety.

"Do I think he have accomplished anything? Yes I do. We have started the people to talking. When you do that you start them thinking and when people start thinking they think right and something good comes of it."

Mr. Ford denied emphatically that there was any fighting among the peace delegates.

TECUMSEH IS VERY FORTUNATE

Exclusive Agency for Tanlac Awarded to B. J Pulver

Bentley Woman Describes Benefits She got from Use of Remedy

Nothing in recent years in Tecumseh has created such widespread comment, as the announcement that Tanlac, the "[illegible] Medicine" that is being personally introduced in the large American cities will be distributed in this city through B. J. Pulver.

Tecumseh is indeed, very fortunate to secure an exclusive agency for Tanlac. Tanlac is entirely vegetable in its composition and is free from all harmful drugs. It has been found universally beneficial in all cases of stomach, kidney and liver trouble, rheumatism, catarrh, loss of appetite, unsound sleep and as a blood purifier and general tonic for run-down systems, it has no superior. That Tanlac is a preparation of more than ordinary merit is evidenced by the many testimonials from well known people all over Michigan.

Mrs Fred L Shook, of Bently, Michigan, says: "Some time ago my whole nervous system became upset due to stomach and kidney trouble. I suffered from the most terrible pains in my back and side and was unable to sleep. I had that tired all-the-time feeling. My stomach became upset. I lost my appetite and suffered from indigestion, I became to improve after taking one half bottle of Tanlac Now I have taken two bottles and my sleep is sound and refreshing and I do not suffer from my stomach and kidneys any more. I have a ravenone appetite and can eat anything and digest it." Taplac may be obtained here at the store of B. J. Bulver. adv

KING CONSTANTINE IS IN GRAVE CONDITION

Ruler of Greece Interests Office to Crown Prince.

Rome, Jan. 3.—The condition of King Constantine of Greece has rapidly become so grave that Prince George, the King's eldest son and heir to the throne has been officially entrusted with the regency.

The news is contained in an uncensored dispatch from Athens. The fact that Prince George, who is twenty-five years old, has taken his father's place, is understood to indicate that the king's condition must be very serious it is recalled that during his recent illness when he was extremely sick no such measure was considered necessary.

In addition to Professor Krauss, who is on his way to Athens from Berlin, several surgeons have been summoned from Vienna.

Upon their arrival a consultation will be held and an operation for pluerisy will probably follow. If such a measure is necessary, it will be some time before the king can hope to resume the responsibilities of his place.

The crown prince was born July 7, 1890. He has been educated in both the army and navy.

It is the greatest pain killer ever discovered. Simply laid on the skin—no rubbing required—it drives the pain away. It is really wonderful.

Mervin H. Soister, Berkeley, Cal., writes: "Last Saturday, after tramping around the Panama Exposition with wet feet, I came home with my neck so stiff that I couldn't turn. FORD IS BACK IN LITTLE OLD U. S.

Now Puts Blame for War on "Peepul" Themselves.

PEACE MAKER IS ENCOURAGED

He Thinks His Mission Has Done Some Good, but Admits One King Was Afraid to Visit Him Because Latter's People Got Wind of It—No Fights on Oscar II.

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Henry Ford, home again after failing to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas," but, nevertheless, emphatic in his declaration that he "did not regret what he had done and was sure that it had had a good effect," has arrived on the Norwegian-American liner Bergensfjord. His home-coming was in strong contrast to his departure. Instead of the blazing bunting and the clamor of applause that sent the peace ship Oscar II on her mission, the returning pacificist was spirited away from the ship in a private cutter, landed at an out of the way spot somewhere between the Battery and Forty-second street and hurried in a taxicab to the Waldorf where he remained until he left for Detroit.

"I went over there to show the people that I was willing to give more than my money for cause of peace," Ford said. "I feel that I am only the custodian of my money. It was given to me by these very people who are being slaughtered in the trenches. I can't use any more of it than I am using now and I want to devote the rest to benefiting these people who helped me to earn it.

"I came back because I had a slight touch of the grippe and that hastened me a [illegible] left New York I told Mrs. Ford that I would return in about five weeks. I had intended to take the steamer that sailed today. How do I fell now? Fine."

Ford Blames the "Peepul."

When asked what impressions he brought back from the war, Mr. Ford astonished his listeners by declaring sadly:

"I went to Europe blaming the capitalists, the bankers, the munition makers, for this war. I have come back blaming the people, the very same people who are being slaughtered in the trenches. They have neglected to select the proper heads for their governments, or to help them after they have been selected. When they get a man in office they do not keep in touch with him; they don't write letters to him, they do not tell him what they want. They select people to govern them and then allow the militarists to twist these same people for their own ends."

SISTER SHIP OF PERSIA IS SUNK

Geelong Is Reported Sent Down In Mediteranean.

WILSON CUTS OFF HONEYMOON

President Rushes Back to Capital—Attack on Steamer and Slaying of American Consul Raises Most Acute Crisis in Submarine Controversy—Japanese Warship to Suez.

LONDON, ENG. — The Peninsular and Oriental line steamer Geelong has been sunk in the Mediterranean. The Geelong was a steel steamer of 7,951 tons, about the same size as the Persia, and was built in 1904. This is the third announcement of the sinking of a big British liner in three days.

LONDON, ENG.—Reuter's correspondent at Gibraltar cables that Edward Ross of Denver, who sailed from England on the Persia, did not land at Gibraltar.

ROME, ITALY—"Survivors of the Persia saw the American consul McNeely struggle for a few moments in the water and then go down," said a news agency dispatch from Cairo.

Washington, Jan. 5.—His honeymoon cut short, President Wilson is back at Washington and in active charge of an increasingly complicated international situation. The sinking of the British steamship Persia with the loss of American life, has brought on a new crisis in the foreign relations of th's government. Indications are that it may become more serious than any that has preceded it.

May Send Identic Notes.

American consular officers in the various ports near the scene of the disasters have been ordered to obtain affidavits and statements from survivors as to the circumstances surrounding them.

As soon as the inquiries are answered and the facts determined, it is stated upon reliable authority that an identic note will be sent to Germany, Austria, Turkey and even Bulgaria stating flatly the position of the United States and fixing absolutely the responsibility for any further violation of international law.

Furthermore, there must be a clear statement of responsibility for the acts already committed and an inflexible assurance for the future.

Three More Sent Down.

LONDON, ENG. — Three merchant ships, one of them larger than any vessel sunk since the Arabic was torpedoed, followed the British liner Persia to the graveyard of hulks in the Eastern Mediterranean.

While the loss of life reported is small, the new series of disasters ascribed to Austrian submarines for the moment distracted the attention of the British press and public from the sinking of the Persia. The suggestion was heard that all British liners may hereafter change their routes to avoid the perilous zone where the submarines are operating.

The 9,000-ton steamer Glengyle of the Glen line of Glasgow was sunk in the Mediterranean on Sunday. She had on board 120 passengers and crew. All, with the exception of three Europeans and seven Chinese, were saved.

The steamer St. Oswald, in the service of the British government, was sunk while en route from Alexandria to Mudros island. The St. Oswald was of 3,810 tons gross. Her crew is also reported to have been saved.

The third vessel sunk was the Japanese liner Kenkon Maru of the Inuni Gomei Kaisha Shipping company. The crew was saved.

Japanese Warships to Suez.

TOKYO, JAPAN—Announcement is made by the Jiji Shimoo that a squadron of Japanese warships will sail for the Suez Canal, presumably to protect Japanese shipping. It is said the armored cruisers Kasuga, Tokiwa and Chitose have been assigned for this service. This action follows the sinking of two Japanese steamships in the Mediterranean.

CHICAGO HOSPITAL IS HELD UP IN DAYLIGHT

Auto Bandits Rush Into Office and Steal Payroll.

CHICAGO — Two armed robbers with drawn revolvers ran into the offices of St. Luke's hospital at 1420 Indiana avenue about the middle of the afternoon and held up Miss Mary Tobin, cashier, and cowed thirty or forty employes into raising their hands above their heads. They escaped with a cash box containing $3,500.

It was pay day at the hospital, and Miss Tobin earlier had $5,000 in her custody. She had paid out about $1,500 when the robbers, both middle aged men, ran in and found the line of waiting nurses and other employes.

REVERSES $30,000 VERDICT

U. S. Court of Appeals Acts in Kinney Breach of Promise Suit.

WASHINGTON — A $30,000 verdict for breach of promise, which Mrs. Ida M. McNabb of Milwaukee won in the district supreme court here several months ago against John S. Kinney, a millionaire mine owner and lumberman of Palatka, Mich., was reversed by the court of appeals.

Villa on Way to Border.

EL PASO, TEXAS — Arrivals from Chihuahua City report that advices brought there by some of General Francisco Villa's personal followers declare he is making toward the border in the direction of Columbus, N. Mex., with about a dozen followers. Rumors of the killing of Villa by General Carranza's troops are discredited.

ARGONAUTS MAY GO THROUGH GERMANY

Conditions So Strict They Are Virtually Prisoners.

COPENHAGEN, DEN.—The German government has granted the Ford peace expedition permission to travel to The Hague through Germany by special train. The party will leave Copenhagen next Friday.

The conditions under which the Americans will travel are strict. Their train will be sealed, everyone being locked within. No one will be permitted to touch German soil during the journey. The members of the mission will not be permitted to carry written, printed or typewritten papers. The concealment of any paper, even of an innocent character, will result in complications for the entire party. Other things that the party must abandon before reaching German territory are cameras, post cards, opera glasses and gold coin.

It is announced that the expedition will disband at The Hague on Jan. 12, most of the members returning home from Rotterdam on that day.

HUERTA IS DANGEROUSLY ILL

Former Mexican Leader Underwent an Operation for Gall Stones.

EL PASO, TEXAS — The condition of General Victoriano Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico, who underwent an operation late Saturday for gall stones, is described as unchanged by his physicians.

That Huerta's condition is critical was admitted when physicians said the operation disclosed symptoms of a more complicated disease.

KAISER REPORTED VERY ILL

Dispatches to Paris Tell of Operation Having Been Performed.

PARIS, FRENCH—Press dispatches from Switzerland and Italy continue to affirm that the illness of Emperor William is serious. It is said that he was operated on last Wednesday successfully, but the nature of the operation is not specified.

TYPHUS IS SWEEPING CAPITAL OF MEXICO

Disease More Serious, Report Says, Than in Serbia.

NEW YORK — Typhus is more serious proportions than in Serbia is sweeping over Mexico City and has assumed such proportions that unless it is checked it will go down as one of the greatest plagues of history. Less than a month ago American physicians in the hospitals of Mexico City estimated that there were then 30,000 to 50,000 cases of typhus in Mexico City alone. The many dead are interred at night as secretly as possible.

In Tachuca the disease was so wide spread that the officers of the United States Smelting and Refining company persuaded the city government to let it take over the health work on the place. There had been 3,900 new cases of typhus in one week. The Smelting company's men at once set to work shaving men and cropping their heads. Clothing was burned and houses were disinfected. It is not known what successes the effort to cope with the plague has had in Tachuca.

In the province of Oaxaca whole villages have been depopulated.

PETROGRAD — The multifarious rumors regarding the retirement of General Ruzsky, who stopped von Hindenburg on the Dwina, were silenced Christmas morning by the arrival in Petrograd of Ruzsky himself on a special train from the front.

Since last spring General Ruzsky has not ceased to work his staff and himself to the limit of human endurance, until he finally collapsed. He proceeded forthwith to the Caucasus for further rest and medical treatment.

WAR ENDS JULY 26, 1916.

New York, Dec. —"The war will end on July 26, 1916. On October 12, 1916, San Francisco will be bombared and destroyed by a hostile fleet."

Gunnery Sergeant Thomas G. Sterrett, United States Marine Corps, makes this dire prophecy, not from any advance military knowledge, but from the fact that he is a seventh son of a seventh son with no girls between and his comrades in the Marine Corps think him something of a forecaster.

Sterrett first gained fame when in 1892, he predicted a new railway station for Kansas City. In 1912, 1913, 1914 and 1915, he foretold with unerring accuracy the overflow of the Allegheny's banks and the flooding of Pittsburgh's downtown section.

North American Camels.

Camels were common in North America during the miocene epoch, and several forms have been found. One was about the size of a sheep and is supposed to be the ancestor of modern camels and llamas. Others were large and had long necks like the giraffe. All these ancient camels had hoofs like cattle.—Argonaut.

A Pungent Player.

The comedian had his benefit and, thankful for the patronage of "kind friends in front," let off this impromptu, which was applauded:

And were I not grateful, too,
A great fool I should be.

THE PAPER FROM HIS HOME TOWN

When the evenin' shades is fallin' on the ending of the day
And a fellow rests from labor, smokin' at his pipe o' clay,
There's nothin' does him so much good, be fortune up or down,
As the little country paper from his old home town.

It ain't a thing of beauty, an' it's print ain't always clean,
But it straightens out his temper when a feller's feelin' mean,
It takes the wrinkles off his face, and brushes off the frown,
That little country paper from his old home town.

It tells of all the parties an' the balls of Pumpkin row,
'Bout who spent Sunday with his girl, and how the crops'll grow;
How it keeps a fellow posted 'bout who's up and who is down,
That little country paper from his old home town.

Now, I like to read the dailies, an' the story papers, too,
An' at times the yaller novels an' some other trash,—don't you?
But when I want some readin' that will brush away the frown
I want that little paper from my old home town.

HERE'S NATURE'S OWN REMEDY FOR CATARRH

Hyomei Relieves Catarrh without the Use of Dangerous Drugs

Not until Hyomei was discovered has it been possible to truthfully say that a real remedy for catarrh was known.

Hyomei is an oil and its air is breathed through a small inhaler furnished with it, for a few minutes four times a day, and during that time every particle of this Hyomei laden air taken into the air passages and lungs is impregnated with a powerful germ killing and health giving antiseptic.

Sprays and lotions often cause disorders of the respiratory tracts or bring on some other diseases and never make a permanent cure of catarrh. But when the air of Hyomei penetrates to the inmost air cells of the lungs and enters the blood with the oxygen it not only kills the germs in the throat and nose, but kills the bacilli in the blood, freeing the mucous membranes from poisonous microbes and giving perfect health.

A complete outfit is inexpensive and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks' treatment.

C. A. Wright & Son have so much faith in the merit of Hyomei that they agree to return the money to any purchaser who is not thoroughly satisfied. adv

SPEECH RESTORED AFTER THREE YEARS SILENCE

Mrs. Tom Conlin of Tipton made Happy by an Accident.

We hear of people being seared speechless, but it remains for Mrs. Tom Conlin of Tipton to be scared into speech. For as she caught herself from falling from the back porch she uttered and audible Oh, and when Mr. Conlin asked what was the matter, she said "I almost fell". For the past three years Mrs. Conlin has been unable to speak above a whisper and this return to audible speech is something remarkable. We join with her many friends in wishing it may be permninent.

Queer Looking Worms.

New Zealand, Australia, the Samoan and the Solomon islands as well as portions of the Hawaiian group are the homes of various species of worms with thick, heavy bodies and with a well defined neck connecting the body with a head that is a startling reminder of that of the monkey. In the Sandwich islands they are called "me-ta-lu-ki," which means "creeper with a child's head." An old New Zealand legend says that at one time they were of immense proportions and threatened the extinction of all human life on the islands.

SYRIAN SAND STORMS.

Experience of a Missionary In Wrestling With a Whirlwind.

One of the remarkable features of the climate and atmosphere of Syria is the prevalence of whirlwinds and waterspouts, both on land and over the sea. They are most prevalent in the deep trough of the Jordan valley and also in Coela-Syria, where the Lebanon and anti-Lebanon form another trough for the winds. They sometimes do an immense amount of damage and often at most unexpected seasons.

As a touring missionary in northern Syria I often met the whirlwinds. They appear in the shape of a column of dust perhaps two to five feet in diameter, rising straight in the air for several hundred feet, opening like a large funnel at the top. The lower end touches the ground and swings over the surface, picking up dust and pebbles in its path. The chaff and even grain on the thrashing floors are sucked up and disappear. Small fish are sometimes drawn up when the swaying column passes over a stream or lake.

Many years ago I made the experiment of riding through the swaying column of a rather innocent looking whirlwind. My horse was terrified, and I had difficulty in keeping my seat in the saddle. It is impossible to say exactly what did happen. It took me some time to find my hat and several days to get the sand and dust from my eyes and ears and clothing, and I have never made it again.—Christian Herald.

He who has the truth in his heart need never fear the want of persuasion on his tongue.—Ruskin.

WHY DO YOU SUFFER PAINFUL TWINGES.

It is no longer necessary for any one to suffer with that headachy, all-rundown feeling that is often the result of kidney trouble.

It is no longer necessary for you to contend with disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders or be tortured with rheumatism, stiff or swollen joints or the heart-wrenching miseries that follow as a result of neglected or poorly working kidneys. Solvax quickly and purely relieves all such troubles.

Solvax is a wonderful discovery that has always been so uniformly successful that every package is sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not relieve the worst case of kidney disorder.

"Your money back if you want it," is the way C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist, is selling this great kidney remedy. A guarantee like that speaks eloquently for the merit of Solvax.

Do not suffer another minute. Solvax will relieve you. If it doesn't tell C. A. Wright & Son that you want your money back and they will cheerfully refund it. adv

THE REJUVENATION OF AUNT MARY

May Robson with her excellent company appeared at the Opera House Wednesday evening to a small but appreciative audience in the play entitled the Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary.

No attraction that has appeared in Tecumseh for a number of seasons more deserved a packed house than did May Robson. Had it been a Mutt and Jeff show or a good 10c reel a packed house would have been in order. Manager Marks certainly did his part in booking such a high class attraction. Of course the large number of people who are on the sick list and the inclement weather had a marked effect on the attendance.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" is a three act comedy dealing with a wealthy aunt, and her live and wide awake nephew who is striving to live up to the times and make his college courses. He is rather an expensive luxury for aunt Mary who disinherits him but finally takes him back, when he makes good.

A trip to New York and a whirl at the gay life of the City soon convinces Aunt Mary that the simple life she is living on her country estate is to slow for her and in the last act she makes some radical changes in her manner of dress and living.

As Aunt Mary, May Robson was superb and showed her unusual ability as a comedienne She was supported by a good cast and the story was acted out in a very interesting manner which will linger in the memory of Tecumseh people for many a day

FOR BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH; CROUP, COUGHS AND COLDS

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 cents.

If everything was sold in as liberal and fair a manner as the below named druggists are selling Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant, absolutely no cause for complaint or dissatisfaction could possibly arise from anyone. These druggists say—"Buy a bottle of this remedy and try it for Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Severe Cough, Croup or any Bronchial Affection, and we will return your money, just the same as we do with Schiffmann's famous Asthmador, if it does not give satisfaction, or if not found the best remedy ever used for any of these complaints." Why not take advantage of this guarantee and try this medicine, and get your money back, rather than buying another purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and also wasting your money?

In buying this remedy, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, which average from 20 to 32 teaspoonsful, because 50c worth makes a whole pint (128 teaspoonsful) when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee as Schiffmann's famous Asthmador of "Money Back" if not perfectly satisfactory. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, Saint Paul, Minn. Backache, headache, dragging pains Nothing relieved me until I took Peruna

Thousands of the best women in the world are bearing the burden of backache, headache, dragging pains, a miserable half-dead, half-alive condition, produced by chronic internal derangements. Mrs. Joseph Lacelle, 124 Glenora Ave., Ottawa East, Ontario, Canada, is one of the fair women of America who has had her experience with this sort of a burden. Her experience is similar to the multitude of other women whose letters are recorded in the "Ills of Life." A copy of this free booklet ought to be in the hands of every housewife in the United States. Read what Mrs. Lacelle says:

> "I suffered with backache, headache and dragging pains for over nine months, and nothing relieved me until I took Peruna. This medicine is by far better than any other medicine for these troubles. A few bottles relieved me of my miserable half-dead, half-alive condition. I am now in good health, have neither ache nor pain, nor have I had any for the past year. If every suffering woman would take Peruna, they would soon know its value and never be without it."

Rain.

There are so many things worse than rain that we refuse to fret about it. If we had the toothache every other day for two months straight we might growl. If an amateur cornetist lived next door and practiced regularly we should complain; if bills were sent in once a week instead of once a month; if bores never went home; if all friendship were mercenary and false in adversity; if sickness visited us oftener and stayed longer than health; if malicious people were many and the kind few we might justifiably be miserable and remain so.

But so long as so many worse things that could be don't arrive it can rain every day if it wants to. Most of our joy is weather proof.—Detroit Free Press.

Ben Franklin's Chair.

In his old age Benjamin Franklin's health failed him to a considerable extent. He suffered from gout and the stone, which, with complications, eventually carried him off. But he was always exceedingly cheerful, even when suffering, and, as one of his friends has recorded, "full of anecdotes and learning." Even at this time in his life he added to the already extensive list of his inventions, contriving among other things a most curious chair which, when desired, could be converted into a stepladder for the purpose of reaching the higher shelves in a library. As far as known, only one of these chairs was ever actually constructed for his own particular use, and this is owned at present by the Philosophical society of Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON — Justice Lamar, of the U. S. supreme court, is dead.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Thursday, Nov. 30.—Coupled with reports of a British bombardment of Westende for the purpose of landing troops to attack the German flank in Belgium, came announcements of a violent and general Russian offensive against the Teutons in Bukowina, a sweeping victory for the Montenegrins against the Austrians, the French seizure of the island of Castelorizo in the eastern Mediterranean, presumably for a base to combat the Turco-German invasion of Egypt, an Italian sea victory against the Austrians off the Albanian coast, and the reported check to the central powers' offensive in Macedonia.

Friday, Dec. 31.—The allies at Saloniki as a military reprisal for the air bombardment of their positions by Teutonic aviators arrested the consuls of the central powers, and placed them aboard a French warship. The Greek government entered a protest against the allies' action. The British landed a force at Kavla on the Greek coast.

Home Secretary Sir John Simon resigned from the British cabinet after a stormy session on conscription.

A French submarine was sunk by Austrian warships in the recent action in which three Austrian vessels were lost.

Sir Robert Borden announces that Canada's authorized force for the European war has been raised to 500,000.

Saturday, Jan. 1.—The British passenger steamship Persia of the Peninsular and Oriental line, with two or more Americans on board, has been sunk in the eastern Mediterranean by a submarine. The company estimated that after deducting the number of passengers leaving the ship at her various ports of call, about 160 passengers were aboard when the vessel was sunk. It is estimated that over 250 lives were lost.

A great battle is raging in Bukowina where armies of 1,500,000 confront each other. The German official statement says Russian attacks near Burkanow on the Pripa river were repulsed. Petrograd claims large gains at several points.

Sunday, Jan. 2.—Report from U. S. Consul Garrels at Alexandria that the steamer Persia was torpedoed in the Mediterranean without warning and that U. S. Consul to Aden, Robert S. McNeely lost his life was received at Washington. The state department ordered Consul Garrels to take depositions from survivors. It is believed 292 lives were lost in this latest submarine attack.

The great Russian offensive in Galicia continues, and Petrograd claims that the Teutons are being pushed back. Berlin admits a temporary Russian gain. It is said Czernowitz is about to fall to the Russians and the population is ready to evacuate.

Saltness of the Sea.

The saltness of the waters of the ocean maintains a certain uniform figure simply because the inwash of things from the continents by way of the rivers is also fairly uniform. The saline matter entering the seas year by year remains about the same, and consequently the ocean waters vary but little in their saltness. — New York American.

TECUMSEH IS VERY FORTUNATE

Exclusive Agency for Tanlac Awarded to B. J. Pulver

Bentley Woman Describes Benefits She got from Use of Remedy

Nothing in recent years in Tecumseh has created such widespread comment, as the announcement that Tanlac the "Master Medicine" that is being personally introduced in the large American cities will be distributed in this city through B. J. Pulver.

Tecumseh is indeed, very fortunate to secure an exclusive agency for Tanlac. Tanlac is entirely vegetable in its composition and is free from all harmful drugs. It has been found universally beneficial in all cases of stomach, kidney and liver trouble, rheumatism, catarrh, loss of appetite, unsound sleep and as a blood purifer and general tonic for run-down systems, it has no superior. That Tanlac is a preparation of more than ordinary merit is evidenced by the many testimonials from well known people all over Michigan.

Mrs Fred L Shook, of Bently, Michigan, says: "Some time ago my whole nervous system became upset due to stomach and kidney trouble. I suffered from the most terrible pains in my back and side and was unable to sleep. I had that tired all-the-time feeling. My stomach became upset. I lost my appetite and suffered from indigestion, I became to improve after taking one half bottle of Tanlac Now I have taken two bottles and my sleep is sound and refreshing and I do not suffer from my stomach and kidneys any more. I have a ravenous appetite and can eat anything and digest it." Tanlac may be obtained here at the store of B. J. Bulver.

Swords and Walking Sticks.

The walking stick, as we know it at present, gained its popularity in France during the eighteenth century, when it came to be carried by rich people who had no right to wear swords. The dandies twirled thin bamboo canes in their fingers, but the great financiers, who had considerable influence at that time, made the sticks fashionable additions to their wardrobes and sometimes paid as much as 10,000 crowns for one. This carrying of a walking stick was regarded as a democratic triumph over the nobility, who refused the commoners the right to wear swords.—London Standard.

SOME GOOD ADVISE

Strengthened by Tecumseh Experiences.

Kidney disease is too dangerous to neglect. At the first sign of backache, headache dizziness or urinary disorders, you should give the weakened kidneys prompt attention. Eat little meat, take things easier and use a reliable kidney tonic. There's no other kidney medicine so well recomended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Tecumseh people rely on them. Here's one of the many statements from Tecumseh people.

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, says: I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have procured my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

THE J. E. BARRETT CO.

"Wholesale Feeds" "The Red Mill" Jackson, Mich.

The Napoleon Girls in the big musical show "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" at The Bradley Opera House, Friday, January 14.

"THE NEWLYWEDS AND THEIR BABY."

"He's a great kid!" This is the enthusiastic assertion of all audiences where the latest offering in the line of musical entertainment "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" has been given and the precious youngster has "da-da'd" into the most popular favor. It was George McManus who discovered the Newlyweds and little Napoleon and placed them before the public in the shape of cartoons. For the entertainment of the theatregoing public who clamored for the same, the pictures have been put into words by Aaron Hoffman and Paul West, and Seymour Brown, Nat D. Ayer and John W. Bratton furnished the lyrics and music. Frank Smithson staged the production and Julian Alfred arranged the dances. Two gorgeous acts, and sixteen musical numbers are required to adjust the complications that arise from the kidnapping of Napoleon Newlywed and the substitution of Major Knott Much, both parts of which, or the dual role rather, are played by Harold West, a clever Lilliputian. In either role the little chap is a sure cure for the blues.

The chorus is handsomely and attractively gowned, can and does sing and includes a number of the best dancers that have bid for public approval. Particularly is this true of an octette of dolls called the "Eight Poster Pigeons", the big song hits are "Boogie Boo", "Can't You See I Love You", "Every Baby is a Sweet Boquet", "Down Red Rose Lane", and "Minstrels on Parade".

The scenic environment in both acts is magnificent. The play will be seen at the Bradley Opera House, next Friday, January 14th.

Perhaps the biggest hit with the entire show is Harold West, who plays the 'Newlywed' baby in his impersonation of the famous film comedian, Charley Chaplin. Mr. West certainly does this specialty to a queens taste. He never fails to get anywhere from one to a dozen curtain calls on this one number.

SOME COMPLIMENT

It is not often an editor hands himself a compliment.

But this is the exception, and that is just what we are doing, because a certain well known citizen of this community has and is persistently recognizing the value of this paper as a reliable disseminator of local news, and has paid us this compliment in a manner which speaks volumes for his knowledge of good things of life.

He is not destitute of this world's goods, but he possesses the rare faculty of holding onto that which he gets, lest the pangs of poverty overtake him in his declining years.

He possesses a wide knowledge extracted therefrom which is turned to good account in his own behalf.

If there is a bargain to be had anywhere in the community he is promptly apprised of the fact, because of that, too, he has read of it in this paper.

And if an acquaintance is sick, or death has overtaken some member of a family, or the stork has paid a visit to the home of a friend, he is among the first to extend his condolences or congratulations—because of these, also, he has read the paper.

He is a man of wisdom—a pillar of strength—with a brain which absorbs to the utmost of the essence of life

Few things escape his notice, for he is ever on the alert.

But the one thing which he never overlooks is this paper, and therein lies the compliment which we take unto ourself. It gives us a feeling that we are something more than a mere worm in human shape, that we may be even a whole cog in the community wheel.

True, he is not a subscriber to the paper—his dollar never reaches this office—but he reads the paper just the same.

For his neighbor is a subscriber to and pays in advance, and in his generosity he lends the paper to the "pillar of strength"—by request.

But it may not always be so. In time we have hopes that the "pillar" will pay us the super—compliment of permitting us to add his own name to our subscription list—paid in advance of course

Time sometimes works wonders, even in the newspaper field.

And we have hopes, strong hopes.

—Petersburg Sun.

How strange, we have just such a man in Tecumseh.

MASS MEETING

THE COMMUNITIE'S NEEDS ALONG CHARITABLE LINES DISCUSSED

At a Meeting at the Baptist Church Sunday Afternoon.

About 35 people answered the call to attend a mass meeting at the Baptist church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The object of the meeting was to discuss ways and means of taking care of the charity problem in Tecumseh About all of the churches, charitable organizations and others interested in charity were present. The object of the meeting was stated by Dr. Hartzog and Joseph H. Smith was called to the chair

Prof. Reed was called on to state the reasons leading up to the meeting and made a few remarks. Prof. Reed stated that he had made a study along these lines which affected scholars attending our schools. Many scholars were in attendance in our schools who were not physically able to attend, as they were not given the proper attention at home, such as proper food to make strength and good health. Many needed medical attention, defective eyesight, poor hearing, etc., which could be cured if proper medical attention was given. The families of many of the students were ignorant of these conditions and others who did know of them were not able to give their children this attention As a result of these conditions many of the scholars were unable to make their grades and were forced to take their work over again, thus making an extra cost to the school district. It was the opinion of Prof Reed that if these defects were corrected in the scholars that they would be able to carry on their work and keep up with their classes Many of the scholars were in need of proper clothing to keep them warm and comfortable.

Charles Patterson was called on and made a few remarks stating that the men's class of St. Peters church had at various times taken the matter of charity up, while the object in view of suggesting ways by which some plan could be worked out to improve the work in Tecumseh. Mr Patterson was followed by Rev. Hewitt, Rex, Jennings and Mrs. Harry Dunn Rev Hartzog was then called upon to give a report of his investigations pertaining to the work in Adrian. Dr Hartzog stated that he had made an investigation of the plan perused by an Association in Adrian known as "The Associated Charities." This Association had a membership of about 300 people, each member paying a fee of $1 00 per year which was used to carry on the work. A small committee from this association was chosen to take charge of the work. A president, Miss Alice Angell, is serving this association and is doing it without pay. Her office is a sort of clearing house for the various charitable organizations doing work in Adrian. A record is kept of families, helped. what is given them. what their needs are, etc. Each organization keeps its own idenity but reports its work to the central organization and in turn is able to learn of needy people who need help through it. A visiting nurse is hired who goes into the homes of the sick and takes care of those needing a nurse All cases reported are investigated by the central organization with the object in view of applying the proper help which is needed in each individual case Many people who wish to help are given an opportunity through this association, for instance, a child is found who is badly in need of a new pair of shoes. The president calls up John Brown and asks him if he would like to furnish this child with a pair of shoes, etc.

Charity work was discussed quite generally by those present and a motion was finally made that a committee composed of one member from each charitable organization, one member from each lodge and one from each church be chosen by these societies with Charles Patterson as chairman and the ministers of each church acting as ex-officio' members, to act as a committee to study this question and to hold their first meeting next Sunday at the Methodist church at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. A report to to be made later to another meeting which will convene subject to call.

It was the general idea of those present that some central organization should be created here in Tecumseh to make a study of this work, to work in harmony with the various societies for the betterment of conditions found here in our village. It was not the idea of those present to destroy the idenity of the various societies but to establish a central organization to keep them from duplicating their charities and to help carry on this work.

VILLAGE COUNCIL ESTABLISHES FIRE WARDS.

AT THE LAST REGULAR SESSION OF THE COUNCIL THE FOLLOWING RESOLUTION RELATIVE TO FIRE WARDS AND FIRE SIGNALS WAS PASSED:

There will be six Fire Wards in the village, and the water works engineer will blow the following signals for wards:

1 BLAST OF WHISTLE, 1ST WARD—The business part of town from Ottawa west to Pearl st, and Pottawatamie to Logan.

2 BLASTS, 2ND WARD—The southeast part of town Chicago east, and south on Evans st.

3 BLASTS 3RD WARD—The southwest part of town Chicago west, and south on Evans st.

4 BLASTS, 4TH WARD—The northwest part of town, Chicago west, and north on Evans st.

5 BLASTS, 5TH WARD—The northeast part of town Chicago east. and north on Evans st.

6 BLASTS, 6TH WARD—Brownville north of bridge over Evans Creek on Mills st.

The fire whistle will blow at 6:00 a. m standard time, week day mornings until further notice.

AT 6 O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING

Say, how many of you heard the fire whistle Saturday morning at 6 o'clock? It was amusing to hear the comments of those who were awakened by its shrill blast, and the telephone girls also had a good time in answering the calls "where's the fire, where's the fire?"

No more sleeping after six o'clock, every body must be up and doing after this, and every one is anxious to know the name of the city dad that sanctioned such an innovation, for we understand this is to be a daily occurrence.

How about a curfew bell!

This is the classic apology of a celebrated statesman of the last generation: "Mr. Speaker, in the heat of debate I stated that the right honorable gentleman opposite was a dishonest and unprincipled adventurer. I have now, in a calmer moment, to state that I am sorry for it."

NEWBURN—STARRETT

Miss Ethel Newburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Newburn of Cleveland, Ohio was united in marriage Thursday December 23, 1915 to Mr. Harry W Starrett, son of Mrs. H. S. Starrett of Springfield, Ohio.

Ethel has many friends in Tecumseh who will be interested to hear of her marriage.

CLINTON-MANCHESTER POULTRY SHOW.

Clinton will hold their Annual Poultry Show next week, January 17-22. The show will be held in the Clintonian Garage

H. Lancaster, proprietor of the garage announces that there will also be an Auto Show on the east side of the garage. Undoubtly this show will be quite interesting and will call out many visitors.

PICTURE SHOW OF 1916 SEASON

Detroit Stages Most Beautiful Show in Country, From January 15 to 22.

Detroit's annual automobile show again is setting the pace in beautification, at least that is the judgment of some of the dealers who attended the opening of the New York show. "The decorative scheme of our show is ahead of New York, also it is much more up to date than Chicago's plan," said Walter J. Bemb, who is secretary of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association.

"While we are handicapped by the lack of one building large enough for such a show as we would like to give under a single roof, perhaps this works out to our advantage, for in common terms, we have to hustle. Having three buildings we have an advantage of a changing scheme, all of them different, yet in harmony. Having left the designing up to architects and artists this time we have been able to secure from them ideas that never have been worked out at any other show.

"It is common talk in automobile circles that the Detroit shows always are new and novel in appearance, and we have gone to the limit this time, so that we have no fears that any of the rest of the cities will wrest from us the honor of staging the picture show of 1916."

"On Saturday night, January 15, when the doors of the Palace Auditorium, Palais de Danse and The Pier are opened to the public we will show how we have adapted ourselves to circumstances and built up a show that will be talked about from one end of the country to the other."

One Lesson Learned.

"In this practice to become a soldier your first lesson must be of prompt and unquestioning obedience to your superior officer."

"That's all right, captain; I'm married. What's the next lesson?"—Baltimore American

The Old Family Tree.

"What a lot of men get jobs on the strength of their ancestry!"

"Yes. A good family tree has produced many a plum!"—New York Telegraph.

TECUMSEH GRANGE

Because of the lateness of the season, farmers were a month late in securing their crops and, in consequence our Grange was late in getting started for the winter's work.

Last Saturday the newly elected officers were installed. Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Howard acting as installing officers assisted by Mrs. C. W. Benedict and Wilfred Waldron. Mr. and Mrs. Howard were given a rising vote of thanks for their work.

A good sized crowd partook of a bountiful farmer's dinner. In the absence of Mrs. A. W. Mills, Mrs E. J. Haines acted as chairman of the entertainment committee.

The newly elected master, Bro. A. W. Mills made a very timely and forceful inauguration speech.

The membership has been divided into two parts and a campaign for new members is on. Ex-Master Harrie A. Smith has appointed as captains of their respective sides, Mrs. W. J. Waldron and Mrs. Geo. Sanford. These girls are working overtime and it is plain to be seen that, by the first of March there will be nobody of any consequence in all the surrounding country who is outside Tecumseh Grange.

The newly elected lecturer Bro W. B. Hartzog announced that at the next meeting there would be a debate on the subject, "Resolved, that the United States should enter upon an extensive program of military preparedness." The affirmative will be led by the little old secretary. Great, big brainy, muscular Lee McConnell will lead the forces of the negative. It sure looks like the secretary would be up against it this time. Everybody come out and help gather up the remains.

Sec'y.

TO THE PUBLIC.

You all know when we advertise a Clearance Sale that it means a Great Big Money-Saving opportunity to all. This year, however, it means far more than in any previous year we can remember. Any one who has read the daily papers cannot help but understand that on account of war conditions making a scarcity of dyes and raising the price of raw cotton and wool, that nearly everything will be much higher in price beginning with the opening of new Spring Merchandise.

We have protected ourselves farther ahead than most concerns and will not raise prices until we have to pay the advance ourselves. Yet we urge you to protect yourselves the same as we have. At regular prices we are selling our merchandise cheaper than most stores, and when we offer you goods at sale prices given in this bill, we are giving you the chance to buy, in many instances, for less money than we can duplicate the same goods for. But in order to keep our reputation for a Brand New, Up-to-Date Stock each season and clean the short lengths and odd lots, we must do this.

Read every word of this bill. Come to this Sale. You'll be sorry later if you miss it,

Yours very truly,

MIGHTY IMPORTANT matter, the purchase of an automobile. So you are looking always and everywhere for information—facts—about the various rival makes of cars.

BUT YOU'VE NOTICED—and if you haven't, you will in the future, now we've brought it to your attention—that Reo owners without exception are unstinting in their praise of this model.

YOU NEVER HEAR an "all right, but" from a Reo owner.

THAT'S BECAUSE the Reo Folk see to it that every Reo is just as good as any Reo ever made—and as much better as today's product ought to be than yesterday's in this progressive world.

THEN ORDER QUICKLY—for that very factor of uniform excellence has resulted in such over-demand for the latest Reo models it is necessary to order several weeks in advance if you'd have your Reo when you'll want it.

A Voracious Monster.

The most voracious of all marine beasts of prey is the orca, or killer whale. It reaches a length of twenty-five feet, and its jaws bristle with teeth from four to six inches long and as sharp as a dirk knife. Its digestive power is proportioned to the tremendous efficacy of its jaws. It seems also to be an atrocious glutton, as one specimen examined contained in its stomach thirteen porpoises and fourteen seals.

A Boomerang.

"Call that art!" exclaimed a would be critic, pointing to a painting in a studio. "If that daub is a work of art, then I'm an idiot!"

"The latter part of your statement," rejoined the artist calmly, "would seem to furnish conclusive proof that it is a work of art."

A Lovers' Quarrel.

WET GUNCOTTON.

More Stable Than Dry and Explodes Only From a Severe Shock.

Owing to its high percentage of nitrogen oxide, guncotton when exposed to air in a dry state rapidly absorbs oxygen from the air and becomes very dangerous, exploding spontaneously or from slight shock. Dry guncotton in unconfined mass merely burns with a flash like gunpowder, only much more rapidly; it does not exert explosive effect unless confined, as in a shell. In its dry state guncotton is seldom used for primers and detonators, as it is too unstable and will explode with a slight shock or blow.

The guncotton carried aboard war vessels and submarines for the explosive charge of torpedoes is always wet guncotton, kept in air tight containers to prevent evaporation of moisture. Wet guncotton can be exploded only by a severe shock; hence primers or detonators of some more powerful explosive are necessary, these exploding on impact of the torpedo against a ship's side and in turn exploding the guncotton in the war head. Fifty to 100 pounds is the usual charge of a torpedo.

Ordinarily safe if properly stowed away from heat and kept moist, guncotton becomes dangerous from liability to spontaneous explosion when a slight excess of acid is present, and constant and regular tests for acidity are part of the duties of ordnance officers of war vessels and ammunition depots. Guncotton giving a high acid test is promptly condemned and either destroyed or reworked and washed.—American Druggist.

LAW OLD AND NEW.

A Cynical View of Past Methods and Those of the Present.

Law, more especially criminal law, has usually been an occult science. It is still the practice in Burma, we believe, to give two disputants candles of the same size, to be lighted at the same time. The one whose candle burns longest gets judgment against the other.

Less than 100 years ago a defendant in an English criminal trial appealed to the ordeal of battle, and the court was more or less surprised to find that the ancient law on which he relied had never been repealed.

Determining a man's guilt or innocence by his ability to walk on hot plowshares or carry a hot iron or drink a poisonous decoction or by throwing him bound into water has been practiced for ages among many peoples. The medieval method of letting accused and accuser fight it out with weapons was common over Europe.

Our modest ancestors confessed their inability to find the merits of the cause and so relegated the whole affair to the intervention of supernatural agencies. The main difference is that we are less modest. Instead of the ordeal of battle or the old key and Bible test or the "sieve witch," we have the defendant play a game of trip the court. If he can catch the judge putting down an "i" dot over an "e" he wins and is pronounced innocent.—Saturday Evening Post.

Snuff and a Crook.

Robert Pinkerton once told a story of his father, the founder of the detective agency, which illustrates the elder Pinkerton's caution. A noted criminal was detained in Pinkerton's Chicago office. The elder Pinkerton left the room and when he returned took the precaution of holding a revolver in front of him ready for use.

He saw the criminal standing by the door with a snuffbox he had picked up from Pinkerton's desk in his hand.

"This is good snuff," affably remarked the crook as he took a sniff.

"For the eyes or the nose?" asked Pinkerton, who knew that the crook had intended to blind him in an effort to escape.

"Well," remarked the criminal, "I'm sorry to say that the nose gets it this time."

Flexibility of English.

English is not only, as Richard Jefferies asserted, the most expressive and flexible of tongues, but also, in Swinburne's opinion, the most musical. He proclaimed the lines—

> Music that gentlier on the spirit lies
> Than tired eyelids upon tired eyes to be unmatched for melody in any language. And few would venture to contradict such a master of music and tongues. But surely French ranks next on the roll of languages. For clearness of diction it is unrivaled, and, thanks to its abundance of vowels (close on one for every consonant), it flows rhythmically from the tongue.

The Orkney Islands.

"The member from the Orkneys" is the only man in the British house of commons who can say he sits for 200 islands. Only sixty of the islands are inhabited, but the constituency embraces more than 60,000 people.

The Orkneys were once given by Norway to England as security for a queen's dower and never redeemed. In the islands the voters must go to the polls by boats, and in some cases the distance to be traveled is eight miles.

Oxen Cavalry.

Madagascar possesses the only oxen cavalry regiment in the world. The climate is so unhealthy for horses that some substitute had to be found. The oxen have been trained to maneuver with surprising skill, but of course are not speedy.

His Joke.

"Hicks has a job I wouldn't care for—pouring molten metal in a foundry."

"Must be hot work."

"You bet! He perspires at every pore."—Boston Transcript.

STOMACH MISERY QUICKLY VANISHES

Your money back if you want it is the way in which C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggist are selling Mi-o na the great dyspepsia remedy

This is an unusual plan, but Mi-o-na has so much merit and is so almost invariably successful in relieving all forms of indigestion that they run but little risk in selling under a guarantee of this kind.

Do not be miserable or make your friends miserable with your dyspepsia. Mi-o-na will help you. If it doesn't, tell C. A. Wright & Son that you want your money back and they will cheerfully refund it.

A change for the better will be seen from the first few doses of Mi-o-na and its continued use will soon start you on the road to perfect digestion and enjoyment of food.

Mi-o-na has been so uniformly successful that every box is sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not relieve. What fairer proposition could be make?

C A. Wright & Son give their personal guarantee of "money back if you want it" with every box of Mi-o-na that they sell. A guarantee like this speaks volumes for the merit of the remedy.

NEW MODELS ARE THE BEST EVER

They Will Be Shown in West for First Time at Detroit Auto Show.

Those who attended the New York show are unstinted in their praise of the 1916 models, which have met with such great favor among the tens of thousands who patronized that great trade exhibit. Taken all the way through the cars are far and away ahead of the models of other years in every detail.

In the first place there has been a refinement in the appearance of the cars, the streamline bodies are even more graceful than they were a year ago, there is something natty and extremely clever in the car in repose. Luxuriousness is the keynote in the finishing and the furnishing of all cars, even those that sell for from $500 to $800 rivalling the $1,500 jobs of 1913.

While the improvements to the mechanism of cars might not seem so important they are in the line of greater efficiency, the motors will do more with the same amount of gas and oil, the maintenance is less, hence there is a saving in operation, at the same time greater comfort on the part of the owner and his lucky friends who ride with him.

These cars, the finest that ever have come from the factories, will be seen for the first time in the middle west at the Detroit auto show, January 15 to 22, which will be staged in three connected and elaborately decorated buildings, the biggest show Detroit ever has given.

TRACED IN FIRE.

Glow Pictures Are Spectacular and Easy to Make.

To make glow pictures forty parts of saltpeter are added to twenty parts of gum arabic, and the whole is dissolved in forty parts of water. An ounce or two of this mixture will be sufficient to prepare a good many pictures. A few sheets of white paper should next be secured, and this should be rather thin, similar to that which is used for typewriting.

Now take a clean pen and draw the picture on the paper, using the solution, which should be slightly warmed by standing the bottle in hot water. Anything may be delineated, the only essential point being that all the lines must connect. The final line should be drawn down to the corner of the sheet, and this spot may be indicated with a pencil cross. Hang the sheets up to dry, and when the process is complete the lines are practically invisible.

To bring up the picture first of all turn down the borders of the sheet of paper in such a way that it is raised above the surface which will not be injured by the slight smoldering of the paper. Get a match and light it, placing the glowing end of the point where the pencil cross was made on the sheet.

A trail of red fire will at once start to burn out the picture, following the lines which have been drawn. No other part of the design catches on fire save that which has been treated with the solution. Finally the picture stands up in strong black lines, and the effect is very curious. There is absolutely no danger from fire in this little experiment.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

INTENSIVE WHEAT GROWING.

Startling Results Claimed For a Russian's Methods.

Some years ago, says an English publication, a Russian farmer discovered a method of increasing the yield of wheat in so startling a manner that no one believed he was telling the truth. The Russian declared that it was possible to get seventy pounds of grain from one seed and to make an acre carry forty-five tons.

That does sound like a miracle, and we do not vouch for it, but here is the method, and if any farmer has the patience to try it he will certainly be surprised at the result.

Each grain is planted separately in a sunken bed about fifteen inches deep and three and a half feet in width.

As soon as the grain sprouts the little blade is covered with a thin layer of earth about an inch and a half in depth. The result is that you get three stalks instead of one. At the end of three weeks the hoe comes into use again, and the three stalks being covered with earth, turn into nine stalks. This process on being repeated a third time results in twenty-seven stalks, and the Russian in question repeated it ten times in all, so that at last each grain produced 59,049 stalks. If the seed is first sown in the ordinary fashion and then transplanted to the pit before mentioned you get an even stronger growth, so that after only eight coverings more than 105,000 stalks have been produced from a single grain.—Youth's Companion.

Otsego Man Took Tanlac and Now is Relieved of Rheumatism

W. P Rubert, of Otsego, says: "When I first began to use Tanlac I was in a very bad state of health. I had suffered so much from rheumatism that I had nearly lost the use of my arms. My hands were all crippled up and I used them only with difficulty. My stomach was out of condition and I was very nervous. I suffered from severe pains in my limbs. I slept [illegible]. My appetite was poor and my digestion worse. Since using Tanlac my rheumatism is very much better and my general health has improved. I have a good appetite, plenty of energy and my nerves are in good condition, enabling me to sleep well. I think Tanlac is a splendid remedy."

COLOSSAL GRAVEYARDS.

Imposing Mountains That Are Built of Animal Skeletons.

Many of the most imposing mountain ranges of the globe are largely made up of limestones composed almost entirely of the hard parts of animals which once lived in the sea, the most important of these rock building forms being of a very small size. The solid earth is, in fact, a colossal graveyard, and many of its most imposing elevations are stupendous tombstones.

The chalk making up the white cliffs to which England owes her name of Albion (Latin, albus, white) is chiefly composed of microscopic shells closely resembling those now found at the bottom of the sea. Hills and mountain ranges largely made of this chalk extend from Britain and France round the shores of the Mediterranean and away into Asia and are largely represented in other parts of the world. Even more remarkable is the limestone of which the pyramids are built.

This is chiefly made up of coin shaped shells (nummulites), partly responsible, no doubt, for eastern legends of magic money. The limestone containing them attains a thickness of several thousand feet and is the material of which many mountain ranges are largely built. Beginning on the west, we have the Pyrenees and Alps, followed by the Carpathians, Caucasus, mountains of Asia Minor, north Africa and Baluchistan and, lastly, the Suleiman mountains, Himalayas and ranges in China and Japan.

THE JUDGE'S CHARGE.

It Dazed the Culprit's Lawyer, Who Felt He Had Won His Case.

The following experience of a Mississippi lawyer was related by himself years ago. He said:

I was defending a prisoner for horse stealing, and seeing no other means of defending him under the circumstances I set up the plea of insanity. I argued it at length, read many extracts from works of medical jurisprudence and had the patient attention of the court.

The prosecuting attorney did not attempt to reply to my argument or controvert my authorities. I seemed to have things my own way and whispered to the prisoner that he needn't be uneasy.

Then came the judge's charge, in which he reminded the jury that there was no dispute between counsel as to the facts of the case. Indeed, there could not have been, for several witnesses had sworn positively that they saw my client steal the horse.

"But," concluded the court, "the plea of insanity has been set up, and I charge you, gentlemen of the jury, that it should receive your very grave and serious deliberation, but I must be allowed to say, gentlemen, that for myself, upon a review of the whole case, I can discover no evidence of insanity on the part of the prisoner, except perhaps in the selection of his counsel."—Chicago News.

This Country of Bigness.

America is a quarter section, not a square foot country. It is the land of the biggest lakes, the longest rivers, the fastest trains, the tallest buildings, the land of the huge corporation and the spacious farm and the prodigious industrial enterprise. The inhabitant of this country of bigness feels the urge of these immeasurable interests; therefore his fascination for large figures and enormous scales of measurement. He feels that he must keep up to the pace of business or get out of the game or be run over. One advance step necessitates a longer stride to follow. He must always have his "next." * * * Big and swift business always fascinates the American mind.—From "American Ideals," by Clayton Sedgwick Cooper.

Habits of the Wildcat.

To say that a dog can "whip his weight in wildcats" is to pay about the highest tribute to his strength, courage and activity, and there are very few dogs that would care to earn such a tribute if they understood all it implied. Not that a wildcat is of a specially aggressive disposition. On the contrary, he would sooner mind his own business any time than fight. So anxious is he as a rule to keep out of trouble that he has often been accused of cowardice, but he has on so many occasions given evidence of the most desperate courage that it is doubtful if the accusation is a fair one. When wounded or at bay he is perhaps as dangerous as any creature of his size.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Thursday Jan. 6.—Petrograd reports the Russian advance continues in the southern extremity of the fighting area and that the Teutons will be forced back forty miles to the line running through Kolomea, Stanislau and Galich. Berlin admits a German detachment in the Riga-Dvinsk front was driven back by the Russians.

The British conscription bill passed the commons on first reading by 403 for to 105 against, an overwhelming victory for the government. The British labor congress by nearly a three to one vote urged its members in parliament to vote against the measure. Arthur Henderson, president of the board of education, and leader of the labor party; George H. Roberts, labor whip and junior lord of the treasury and William Brace, parliamentary under secretary for home affairs, resigned from the cabinet as a result of the congress's act, and will go before the people for reelection.

Friday, Jan. 7.—Germany has made further concessions in the submarine controversy with the United States. In a note given to the state department by Count von Bernstorff the kaiser's government promises that all vessels—passengers and freight—shall be warned and the passengers given an opportunity to escape in safe boats, before such vessels are torpedoed. Germany offers indemnity for lives lost on the Lusitania disaster but refuses to disavow the act, the ambassador contending that the acceptance of the principle of international law constitutes a disavowal.

There is quiet on all fronts in the war zone. The Germans retook the cemetery south of Czartovysk in Volhynia, captured by the Russians Thursday.

The position is said to be of strategic importance.

Russian reports claim a continued steady advance of their offensive.

Saturday, Jan. 8.—Vienna says the Russian [illegible] in Galicia and Bessarabia has been renewed, but declares all attacks were repulsed with about 1,000 prisoners.

Petrograd claims the cemetery at Czartovysk retaken by the Russians in the day's fighting 2,000 prisoners are reported taken.

Berlin reports part of a trench at Hartmannsweilers Kopf taken in Alsace.

King Constantine, in an interview to a press representative, asks that the people of the United States be told that he is neither pro-German nor pro-ally, but is for Greece.

Sunday, Jan. 9.—French troops were withdrawn from the summit of Hirsstein, south of Hartmannsweiler Kopf, due to the capture of a hill north of the position by the Germans.

Franco-British troops have been totally withdrawn from Gallipoli, with one man wounded as a casualty list. The Turks claim the troops were driven off, after having suffered severe loss.

The British warship King Edward VII, was blown up by a mine in the North Sea and sunk. The King Edward VII, was of 16,350 tons, being the third most powerful vessel lost by the British during the war. The crew was saved.

The Turkish government has seized 1,600 allied subjects and British and French embassy officials at Constantinople in retaliation for the arrest of Teutonic and allied consuls at Saloniki.

NEW YORK — Frank Howard Dodd, president of the American Publishers' association and senior member of the publishing firm of Dodd, Mead & Co., died at his home here from heart trouble following an attack of grip. SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Because of an engagement in Washington on the evennig of Feb. 11 President Wilson has informed Governor Dunne that he will be unable to attend the annual Lincoln day banquet in Springfield the evening of Feb. 12.

Governor Dunne had invited the president to attend and news dispatches from Washington several days ago said that Mr. Wilson probably would accept.

Backers Desert Reform Mayor.

TERRE HAUTE, IND. — The Good Government league, which, it is said, paid Frank S. Rawley, $500 attorney's fee to defend Mayor Gossom against the impeachment charges filed by the city council, has adopted resolutions condemning Gossom for his recent change of front in removing William A. Brandon and the Rev. A. R. Monger from the board of safety and appointing a board that has "tilted the lid."

Fire Wrecks Part of Krupp Plant.

AMSTERDAM — Fire destroyed the wheelshops of the Krupp gun plant at Essen, according to advices received here, and also damaged other buildings.

H. Samuel Named Home Secretary.

LONDON, ENG. — Herbert Samuel, postmaster-general, has been appointed home secretary, succeeding Sir John A. Simon, resigned.

Italy Requisitions Grains.

ROME — The Italian government has issued a decree requisitioning all wheat, grain and maise for military uses.

In a decision an echo of the "Mabray gank," famous several years ago for their connection with fake races, wire-tapping exploits, etc., until separated by the federal authorities, turned up in the supreme court when the court reversed a judgment secured by Peter Voorhees, of Alma, against Clinton Nelson of the same place for about $2,000.

BRITISH REPORT TIGRIS VICTORY

But Constantinople Claim Turks Surround Them.

ASSERTS ENEMY LOST 3,000

Turks Say British Force Is in Bern Straits—British Official Says Ottoman Troops Are Routed With Invaders Pursuing—May Cover Two Different Battles.

LONDON, ENG.—The Turks in Mesopotamia were in full retreat on Jan. 9 with the British pursuing them, it was announced in the house of commons by J. Austen Chamberlain, secretary for India. There had been heavy fighting on both banks of the Tigris on Jan. 7, Mr. Chamberlain said, and the British had taken two Turkish guns and 700 prisoners.

Reports at Variance.

Although Berlin reports a British retreat in Mesopotamia, at variance with the British announcement that the Turks are falling back after heavy fighting, Mr. Chamberlain's statement to the house of commons does not disclose the point at which the engagement referred to occurred. It is possible that this action took place south of Kut-el-Amara between the Turks and the main body of the British.

In telling the commons the news of the British success on the Tigris Mr. Chamberlain said:

"General Aylmer left Miam Alligrabi on Jan. 6 with troops marching to the relief of Kut-el-Amara. On the same day General Townshend at Kut reported [illegible] the previous night the enemy had opened a heavy fire on the northwest front and on the village opposite Kut, but had made no attack. On the night of Jan. 7 General Aylmer reported heavy firing on the south bank of the Tigris.

Capture 700 Turks.

"On the right bank General Campbell's column carried the enemy's position, taking two guns and 700 prisoners, and then intrenched. Meanwhile the main attack on the left bank was retarded by an enemy outflanking movement and General Aylmer reported that he aparently was opposed by three Turkish divisions.

"On the evening of Jan. 8 he reported that owing to fatigue the troops had been unable to make any progress that day. On the 9th he reported the enemy in retreat and that he was pursuing, but that heavy rains hindered the pursuit.

"From later telegrams it appears that the enemy has reached Khora."

Says British Are in Retreat.

BERLIN — The British army at Kut-el-Amar, in Mesopotamia, has been surrounded by Turks, according to Constantinople advices given out by the Overseas News agency. It is said the Turks have advanced to the main defenses of the British. The main British army in Mesopotamia, according to these reports, is in retreat, 10,000 men having been left at Kut-el-Amara to cover the movement.

URGES AID TO MONTENEGRO

Italian Press Tells of Dynastic and Strategic Reasons for Step.

ROME — The Italian press is significantly urging that the government assume the control and defense of Montenegro. Montenegro, they urge is dynastically united with Italy through the Italian queen, who is the daughter of King Nicholas.

In the second place, they point out that as Montenegro is now situated she is threatened by the Austrians with the loss of Mount Lowcen, which in Austrian hands would make Cattaro impregnable and defeat of the Austrian navy on the Adriatic impossible.

BRYAN'S LETTER AS WILSON HELP

Friends of President May Turn Document on Commoner.

PLATFORM PLANK NOT BINDING

It is Reported Nebraskan Practically Released Wilson from Obligation Under One Term Paragraph—Not Binding on Individuals, is Said to Be Its Purport.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is in existence a letter written by William J. Bryan in which the commoner practically releases President Wilson from any obligation under the single term plank of the Baltimore platform not to run for a second term. President Wilson's political advisers expect to use this letter against Mr. Bryan if the latter, as has been intimated, seeks to make any issue of a second term for Mr. Wilson.

Not Binding on Individuals.

This letter was written by Mr. Bryan back in 1913 when a resolution was pending before congress limiting the presidency to a single term. Mr. Bryan wrote to a member of congress that the one term plank was intended merely as a declaration of policy and should not be binding on any individual until legislation had been passed and it applied to all parties alike.

This information followed upon the heels of a disclosure as to President Wilson's own views on the one term plank. A letter was made public in which the President cites the rule by which he will be guided in deciding whether or not he shall run again. This is the way the President puts it:

"I shall most cheerfully abide by the judgment of my party and the public as to whether I shall be a candidate for the presidency again in 1916. I absolutely pledge myself to resort to nothing but public opinion to decide that question."

Wilson Willing to Run.

The President's willingness to run again provided he is satisfied that the party and the public want him is disclosed in a letter which he write to A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania a few weeks before the presidential inauguration in 1913. This letter also was written while the resolution was pending before congress which, if passed, would have limited the presidency to a single term in accord with the pledge in the Baltimore platform. Mr. Wilson's letter prevented the passage of that resolution and no attempt has been made since to revive it.

The general tenor of the communication has been known ever since it was written by Mr. Palmer but the full text is now made public for the first time.

NEGRO PLACE TO WHITE MAN

President Breaks Precedent in District of Columbia Appointment.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — President Wilson let it be known that he will not nominate a negro recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia. That office which has been filled by a negro for many years has been vacant for eighteen months and the National Negro Democratic league, headed by Bishop Walters of the Third district of the A. M. E. church, has urged the appointment of a negro.

The President indicated to Bishop Walters, howeer, that it ould be impossible for him to give the post to a negro but that in consideration of this he would look with favor on the suggestion of the appointment of colored men to several positions in the departments.

WILLIAMS TALKS IN BILLIONS ON BANKS

Those of U. S. Show Unparalled Growth, Says Comptroller.

WASHINGTON — "Development and growth never paralleled in the financial history of any country," is the way John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency, describes in his annual report to congress, the operation of the national banks under his charge, during the period from October, 1914, to November, 1915, the first year under the federal reserve system. The report was presented to congress.

Mr. Williams gives a comparative statement of the condition of the national banks to back up his statement. He shows that net resources of the banks increased in the year $1,743,878,648, that deposits increased $2,081,530,164 and that loans and discounts increased $917,450,502. Available cash increased in the same period $862,000,000 and on Nov. 10, 1915, the reporting national banks had excess reserves of $891,000,000.

Death Rate Is 9.8 to 1,000—Prohibition Is One Reason.

TOPEKA, KAN — Kansas, with a rate of 9.8 in each 1,000 population, has the lowest death rate of any state in the union because the pepole do not drink liquor, because they have money enough to live right and because they have the intelligence to read of the conditions that make for short lives and know how to dodge them.

That is the answer of W. J. V. Deacon, registrar of the Kansas vital statistics bureau, to Samuel L. Rogers director of the United States bureau of the census. The government official wrote to Mr. Deacon demandnig a nexplanation of why the Kansas death rate happened to be so law.

William Mehlberg was found dead at his home in Adair where he lived, alone, by neighbors.

Martin Noohan, aged 66, resident of Owosso for thirty years, and ill for over twenty years, ended his life by hanging, taking advantage of his wife's absence from his room.

Orther, Fennville sheriff, was robbed of a grip containing valuable papers in the Grand Central station. There was no diamond in his star, and therefore it was saved.

WHY DO YOU SUFFER PAINFUL TWINGES.

It is no longer necessary for any one to suffer with that headachy, all-rundown feeling that is often the result of kidney trouble.

It is no longer necessary for you to contend with disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders or be tortured with rheumatism, stiff or swollen joints or the heart-wrenching miseries that follow as a result of neglected or poorly working kidneys. Solvax quickly and purely relieves all such trouble.

Solvax is a wonderful discovery that has always been so uniformly successful that every package is sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not relieve the worst case of kidney disorder.

"Your money back if you want it." is the way C A. Wright & Son the popular druggist, is selling this great kidney remedy. A guarantee like that speaks eloquently for the merit of Solvax.

Do not suffer another minute. Solvax will relieve you. If it doesn't tell C A. Wright & Son that you want your money back and they will cheerfully refund I.. adv

Early Ballooning.

As early as 1786 the French government granted a sum of money to establish a balloon service between Paris and Marseilles with what were known as the Montgolfier air balloons, though the project never became more than a project.

Concerning the Dolomites.

The fairyland about Cortina is familiar to thousands of tourists as "The Dolomites." Dolomite, a rock compounded of carbonate of lime and carbonate of magnesia, takes its name from the French geologist Deodat de Gratet, Marquis de Dolomieu, who spent his time in 1789 and the following years, while his countrymen were busy with revolution and war, in visiting this and other Alpine districts. He first mentions this kind of rock in 1791, and the word "Dolomite" first occurs in a pamphlet of 1802 describing a tour of his in the Alps about the St. Gothard and the Simplon. The curious point, noted by Mr. Coolidge, is that the marquis seems to have paid no attention to the dolomite rocks in the neighborhood of his own home, Dolomieu, near Grenoble.—London Mirror.

JUST TO REMIND YOU.

That "The Newlyweds and their Baby" will be presented at the Bradley Opera house, tonight and that owing to the Y M C A banquet the curtain will be held until 8:30 instead of ringing up at 8:15 as usual. This will give you ample time to attend both, but get your seats early or you may be dissappointed It is no uncommon thing for every seat to be sold before the company gets into town so it is advisable to get your seats as early as possible.

No musical show of late years has met with such great success as that of "The Newlyweds and their Baby"

The Newlyweds, already famous for their supreme devotion to their wondrous child—a devotion which has been celebratek by the comic genius of George McManus, will arrive in our midst by the stage route. When Napoleon Newlywed first opens his rectangular mouth for a gap the house roars and when, in infantile satisfaction he remarks, "da, da, da, da," the roar becomes a shriek and the baby is a hit. This is entirely due the Lilliputian Harold West, who assumes the role and whose rare gifts and funny adventures form the basis for the play.

Two magnificent stage settings requiring a car load of scenery, a big chorus and 16 charming musical numbers besides a big cast of comedians go to make "The Newlyweds and their Baby" one of the really worth while attractions playing the Bradley this season. Seats are now selling at Hay's.

WHEN THE WAR IS OVER—

Curiously enough no excitement is caused by the authenticated fact that no more orders for shells are coming into this country;—for the simple reason, I repeat, that we are now in a position to be indifferent to war orders. The good that they could do is now fully accomplished, and the harm that might have come from their discontinuance in the past is now a purely speculative matter. It is true that a great many business men have real fears about war order discontinuance. But the wiser ones are paying almost no serious attention any longer to such fears Even in the matter of munitions, logic points to the fact that if peace is declared next week no nation at war will feel safe without a large store of war supplies. Munitions-making will unquestionably continue apace in this country for a period of several years after the war is over. The gradual diffusion of wealth now being affected will steady the natural momentary financial shock of the peace day (which, surely, under any circumstances, will be amply foreshadowed in time to ease the blow).

Business men of light and leading, used to caution weighing words, do not hesitate to say that the country is now nearer to being bomb proof from the depressions which have affected us than at any time in our history.

One of the signs that points unmistakably to the sure grasp and firm faith which American business men now have regarding the future of business, after the war clouds clear off, is the formation of the American International Corporation, capitalized at $50,000,000, to finance and conduct large constructive industrial and commercial enterprises in foreign lands Some of the brightest brains of American business are on the board of directors, and it is accepted as a foregone conclusion that the enterprise will represent the successful entry of the United States in the great drama of world-wide commercial supremacy, for which part, by common concession, the United States is cast It is already being said that young business men may well henceforth take upon themselves a dignity and preparation commensurate with the real commercial perspective which American business now begins to call for a the hour of its destiny and the passing of its insular point of view.—From "America's Business Boom," by J. George Frederick, in the American Review of Reviews for January, 1916.

Holland and Herrings.

To the sea the Dutch owe most of their wealth. The art of curing herring was discovered by a poor Dutch fisherman, William Beukels, in 1350, who found that the fish which they caught in great abundance could be smoked and salted away in kegs and then transported to the ends of the world in good condition. Such a trade resulted that it was said that "Amsterdam is built on herring bones." Several hundred years after the death of Beukels the emperor, Charles V., went to the tomb of the fisherman and there ate a herring in gratitude for the invention. And in a church in Biervliet today may be seen a stained glass window in honor of this man. Herring have been one of the chief means of trade to the Hollanders, so that even at the present day the first catch is taken to the royal palace in a coach and six.

The fact that the two dominant political parties of Holland for hundreds of years were called the "Cods" and the "Fishhooks" shows that maritime matters were the uppermost in the people's thoughts.—Exchange.

FLOYD SHERMAN WARING.

Floyd S. Waring, who passed away Tuesday, January 11, 1916, was born in Tecumseh July 24 1879, and has made this his home except for ten years in his early boyhood when he was with his parents Mr. and Mrs Alva Waring in Pratt, Kansas. In August, 1901, he was united in marriage with Miss Mertie Macham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Macham of Tecumseh To this union five children were born, Malcolm aged 13, Archie 12, Sherman 10, Clarence 7 and Mary Frances [illegible] who with the stricken wife, his father and mother, his brother Fred of Portland, Ore., his sisters Mrs Bertha Dunn of Grand Rapids and Mrs Adah Maus of Los Angeles, California, are left to mourn his early and untimely death. He was confined to the house for about ten days, but had not been well for several days before he gave up. He seemed to realize his condition from the first and made all his arrangements for his funeral, choosing his hymns. He called his boys to his bedside, and charged them to be good Christian boys, to care for their mother and to attend to business faithfully. When he was too tired to talk, he called for a tablet and pencil and wrote of his faith in Christ and a farewell message to his wife and children.

He was a member of the Methodist church and was a conscientious Christian, was secretary of the board and usher each Sunday. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., the K. of P. lodge and the Maccabees, being at the time of his death record keeper in the latter. In each of these lodges he was held in high esteem.

Probably no one in Tecumseh will be more greatly missed than Floyd as for a number of years he has been a daily caller at most of our homes and with his happy disposition and a pleasant word for everyone he has won his way into our hearts. His home ties were strong and when his [illegible] labors were over, his time was spent with his family. Here he will be sorely missed.

The funeral will be held at the M. E. church, Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Rev. Geo. W. Jennings his pastor, officiating. Burial in Brookside cemetery.

MISS AMANDA PILBEAM

Word was received Thursday night from Adrian announcing the death of Miss Amanda Pilbeam. Some 18 or 20 years ago Miss Pilbeam lived in Tecumseh and was employed at the home of Eugene Service. She was born at Ridgeway. One sister sister living in New York state and a brother Jeff of Britton survive her.

Her remains will be brought to Tecumseh today with burial from the home of Eugene Service.

At Balaklava.

The total Russian forces, infantry, cavalry and artillery, at Balaklava has been variously estimated at from 30,000 to 50,000 men, while the English force was much smaller in numbers. The two famous charges of that day were that of the heavy brigade of about 900 men against 3,000 Russians and the still more renowned charge of the light brigade of about 600 men against the Russian guns. No accurate figures seem to be recorded, as those given by various authorities differ greatly. The result of the first charge was the break of the Russian cavalry, which fled back to the protection of their artillery and were not pursued very far by the British. The second charge was unsuccessful as a military measure, for, though the Russian gunners were momentarily driven from their guns, they returned and fired upon friend and foe alike, while a superior force of cavalry engaged the British. It is said that evening parade saw only ten men mounted out of the 600 who had ridden in the charge.

Storekeepers seldom praise goods, but now and then they can't help it. For instance, when a simple liniment has cured external ills for 68 years, honest dealers cannot help but confirm what Mr. A. "Hang on Tight."

When a smoking car with thirty-five passengers jumped the track a railroad engineer in the car, off duty, yelled to the passengers to "hang on tight," and while the car turned over no one was hurt.

"Hang on tight" is good advice in most upsets. The man who hangs on tight to himself when his temper is upset will get through without hurting either himself or others. The man who "hangs on tight" to his earnings ends with a competence. The man who "hangs on tight" to his place when business upsets come generally holds down his job. The man who "hangs on tight" when discouragement or even disaster upsets others is a man to be hopeful about, because he will keep right side up whatever else turns over.—Philadelphia Press.

IF YOU HAVE CATARRH READ THIS

Breathe Hyomei Four Times a Day and Watch Results. Gives Prompt Relief.

The pleasantest, most convenient and most scientific method for the treatment of catarrh is Hyomei in the inhaler that comes with every complete package and then breathe its air for a few minutes, four times a day.

It seems remarkable that so simple a way of treating catarrh will effect such quick relief, but the most important discoveries of science have always been the simplest. By breathing Hyomei in this way every particle of air that enters the air passages of the throat and head and goes into the lungs is charged with a healing balsam that kills the germs and bacilli of catarrh and soothes and allays all irriation.

The first day's use of Hyomei will show an improvement and in a short time there should be no further trouble from catarrh. Its action is rapid and lasting.

You take no risk in buying Hyomei. A complete outfit is inexpensive but if after using you can say that it has not helped you C. A. Wright & Son will return your money. What other treatment for catarrh is sold under a guarantee like this?

MIGHTY IMPORTANT matter, the purchase of an automobile. So you are looking always and everywhere for information—facts—about the various rival makes of cars.

BUT YOU'VE NOTICED—and if you haven't, you will in the future, now we've brought it to your attention—that Reo owners without exception are unstinting in their praise of this model.

YOU NEVER HEAR an "all right, but" from a Reo owner.

THAT'S BECAUSE the Reo Folk see to it that every Reo is just as good as any Reo ever made—and as much better as today's product ought to be than yesterday's in this progressive world.

THEN ORDER QUICKLY—for that very factor of uniform excellence has resulted in such over-demand for the latest Reo models it is necessary to order several weeks in advance if you'd have your Reo when you'll want it.

UNEARTHING A FOSSIL.

A Delicate Task Demanding Great Care and Preparation.

When the bed of a fossil is found the serious work begins. In many beds the bones are without any infiltrated filling, so that, though perfect in form, they are soft and fragile. To remedy this defect a coat of shellac is applied and allowed to soak in. Then a second and third, and often more, are put on, until the sandstone, or matrix, and bone cease to take up shellac. As soon as the bone has hardened strips of cloth are dipped in flour paste and adjusted to make a firm bandage. When dried in this stage the whole is firm enough to work around, and the adjacent rock is gently removed, leaving the specimen on somewhat of a pedestal.

The preparation and the work of quarrying take three or more days of careful, patient work. Then finally the slab containing the bones and hardened with shellac is wrapped in straw and shipped to the institution which is to receive them. To take the bones from the slab and prepare them for mounting require all the patience and skill of a master mechanic. Very carefully, often with the finest of dental tools, it is necessary to dig away the sandstone covering the bones.

The work becomes more delicate as the fragile bones appear. As soon as exposed to the air the pulverized mass is given a coat of shellac, and this process is continued until it becomes firm and durable. After the preparator has the material in working shape he must add the missing parts, restoring them with plaster. This requires a careful study of other prehistoric bones. The skeleton is then mounted, a work which is comparatively easy as regards the fixing process.—Argonaut.

DANGER IN MUSHY FOODS.

They Affect the Saliva and Lack Necessary Mineral Elements.

If you want to prevent your teeth from decaying keep your saliva alkaline. The saliva has two functions, the first of which is to saturate the food while it is being chewed and to prepare it for the action of the gastric juice. The second, and no less important, is to keep the teeth and the cavities of the mouth clean.

In an article in the Medical Review of Reviews T. Benedict Furniss says that we have got so far away from natural life that only five persons in 100 have alkaline saliva.

Chewing stimulates the salivary glands. Soft, starchy, mushy foods from which the mineral salts have been extracted, need little or no chewing, so the salivary glands are not stimulated. And they do not supply the mineral elements that are necessary to the fluids of the body. Such foods stick between the teeth and in the recesses of the mouth, where they ferment and decay and become the breeding ground for bacteria. The bacteria generate acids which eat away the substance of the teeth, making holes in which more food lodges and so the evil process goes on.

The normal alkaline saliva is one of the best of the protectors of the body against the attack of bacteria. Not only is the saliva slightly bactericidal but its alkalinity counteracts the acids produced by these bacteria.

Starchy foods should always be accompanied by fruits or berries, for the acid in these has the peculiar property of changing to an alkali in the body, and besides, they are the best of stimulants for the salivary glands.

That Sufficed.

"Did he see your tongue?"

"No, but he heard my wife's."—Boston Transcript.

Miss Beulah Frayer died January 4, 1916, at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Frayer near Britton, at the age of 19 years, 7 months and 18 days. She was loved by all and will be greatly missed. She leaves her father, mother, three sisters and three brothers and many friends to mourn her loss.

When we sat beside the death bed
Of the one we loved so well,
God above in tender love called her
In his home on yonder Golden
Shore to dwell.
The God who gave has taken
And to Heaven our treasure has gone,
And, although our hearts are broken,
The will of God be done.
In life we'll meet no more,
Dear is the grave where our loved one is laid,
Sweet is the memory that never shall fade,
Roses may wither, hearts fade and die,

GOOD ROADS AND THE AUTOMOBILE

Fine Highway Exhibit Features Detroit's Annual Auto Show, January 15 to 22.

So intimate is the relationship of the automobile and the good roads movement that the stage in the Palace Auditorium has been turned over to the good roads committee of the Board of Commerce, for a comprehensive exhibit during the fifteenth annual Detroit auto show, January 15 to 22.

Wayne county has gained world fame through its road system on which more than $3,000,000 has been spent. The type of concrete roads which have been laid out of Detroit has been copied throughout this country and in Canada, England, Japan and Venezuela. More highway and road commissioners from other states inspect the system annually than any in the world.

To show the people of the city and state what has been done there will be a complete set of photographs of scenes in the townships before and after the laying of the concrete, of the actual work and other details.

The proposed East Michigan Pike, the central road across the state and other highways will be shown in pictures.

Then there will be an exhibit from the government, miniature models of roads approved by the department of agriculture. All of this will be interesting to communities where the good roads movement is making itself felt.

Mythical Horses.

Pegasus ("born near the source of the ocean") was the winged horse of Apollo and the Muses. Bellerophon rode this animal when he charged the Chimera.

Sleipnir ("the black horse of Odin") had eight legs and could carry his master on sea as well as land. This animal is believed to typify the wind, which blows from eight different points.

Al Borak ("the lightning") was the horse commissioned by Gabriel to carry Mohammed to the seventh heaven. He had a human face and the wings of an eagle. Every step he took was equal to the farthest range of human vision.

According to Thessalian legend, the first horse was miraculously brought forth by Neptune striking a rock with his trident.

ONE DEAD, MANY ARE HURT IN CHURCH RIOT

Sheriff Is Overwhelmed by Catholic Congregation.

Pittston, Pa., Jan. 17.—George F. Bush, of this city, sheriff of Luzerne county, with twelve members of the state constabulary went to Dupont near here to see what Rev. Francis Kurkowski, now pastor of the Secred Heart of Jesus, Polish church, was not molested in the holding of services. Five hundred men and women friends of Father Edward Guzwa, deposed pastor, filled the little church yard when the officers arrived.

A mob charged the sheriff and troopers. Captain Leon Pitcher of the constabulatory was hit over the head with a club and dropped unconscious. Ross Humer, a trooper, was struck on the head with a club receiving a fractured skull. Corporal Albert Carlson had his shoulder broken, other troopers had their teeth knocked out. None escaped injury.

When the fresh force arrived the battle was renewed. Four rioters were taken to Pittston hospital suffering from bullet wounds. One believed to be George Greisk, died soon after admittance. He was shot in the thigh and abdomen. Captain Pitcher and Trooper Humer are at the hospital. Humer is not expected to live. Pitcher's condition is serious.

The fire, which originated in the business district, gained rapid headway. The flames were fanned by a hurricane, and soon all the largest business buildings, hotels and newspaper offices as well as the telephone and telegraph stations were destroyed.

Efforts of the firemen and police to control the conflagration as the flames swept into the residential district proved futile and dynamite was used to blow up the buildings in the path of the fire.

The city frequently has suffered from fire, having been partly burned in 1792 and 1855, and broad open spaces which interrupt the streets are intended as safeguards against the spread of flame.

Among the principal buildings are the cathedral, a hospital, a diocesan college, naval academy, school of design and a theater. There is an observatory and biological station; also the Vestlanske Fishery and Industrial museum, which contains a picture gallery and valuable antiquities.

WHEAT YIELD TO SHOW INCREASE.

Farmers to get Rich Gift During Centennial Period.

East Lansing, Jan. 10—As a fitting climax to the Inaugural of Michigan's Agriculture Centennial, V. M. Shoesmith, department of farm crops, M. A. C., makes an announcement that indicates that Michigan is on the brink of becoming a leader in wheat production, which if true will mean $2,000,000 annually to Michigan farmers.

Experiments continuing over six seasons prove that select Red Rock Pedigree seed wheat on average Michigan soil produces over 40 bushels per acre. The average production of all other high grade types in Michigan is 20.9.

As these experiments were made under actual farming conditions, without fertilizer, the following comparison is interesting to farmers, millers, and to the ultimate consumer, who is paying a high price for imported flour.

Red Rock	40	bu

A concentrated effort is being made by the several farmers' organizations in the state to induce members to seed with the new Red Rock next planting time. They maintain it an economic duty to put Michigan near the top of the list as a wheat producing state.

Milling and bread baking tests show Red Rock pedigree wheat flour is equal in quality to the prevailing types of Michigan Winter Wheat flour which is rapidly replacing spring wheat as a household flour.

STATE INSPECTION OF PRIVATE BANKS URGED

Recommendatian Made in Report to Governor Ferris.

Lansing, Jan. 17.—If recommendations made in the annual report of State Banking Commissioner F. W. Merrick, submitted to Governor Ferris, are followed by the next legislature private banks in Michigan will be subjected to the same strict regulation now exercised over state banks or be totally eliminated.

The commissioner pointed out that since 1905 twenty five private banks in the state have failed, whereas in the same period only one state bank has been compelled to close its doors.

The report indicated a healthy gain in the business of state banks during the year, which was interpreted by the commissioner as reflecting the prevailing prosperity in all parts of Michigan.

DETROIT SHOW ATTRACTS THE MOTORING WORLD

Annual Exhibit, Bigger Than Ever, to Be Staged in Three Monster Buildings.

FIRST SHOW IN WEST OPENS ON JANUARY 15

Wonderful Decorative Scheme Will Make It Picture Show of Greatest Season.

With the very successful reign of the New York show a thing of the past, the motoring world is turning its attention to the fifteenth annual Detroit auto show, which will be held January 15 to 22. This show will be held in three spacious and connected buildings, the Palace Auditorium, Palais de Danse and The Pier, on Jefferson avenue at the bridge approach, hence very accessible either by motor or trolley car.

The fact that the Detroit show this year has the place of honor in the middle west, coming as it does ahead of Chicago, makes it more important than the others that have been held here. Appreciating this the dealers and manufacturers wanted about fifty per cent more space than there was at hand. While the officers of the association would have been pleased to accommodate them the space limitation has its compensations, for it is up to the exhibitors to display their best cars, which makes this a quality show.

The exhibits will be more numerous than in the past and the cars shown are the best that ever have been seen anywhere, the 1916 models putting all others in the shadows. More car for the money is the rule of the maker for the 1916 season and as the public is the gainer there is great interest in the crop that will be shown here two weeks hence. The refinements in the instance of the cars themselves are in design, mechanical efficiency and low upkeep, also they are luxurious and embody many conveniences that did not figure in other models.

To have the setting in harmony with the unusual display of cars the association is carrying out a decorative scheme that promises to make this the beauty show of the year. In the Palais de Danse, where pleasure cars will be shown, the black and white stripes on the sides and black and white checks on the ceiling reflect the style of the day. The Pier, which also will be filled with pleasure cars, will be done in the old rose and white of the Adam period. The Auditorium, where the trucks will be seen, is to have a commercial setting, a sky line of factories with smoke pouring from their stacks, showing the industrial activity in the city and state. This will be relieved by colors and in all of the buildings illumination will come through transparancies which will break the glare but flood the rooms with soft light.

"We look for the greatest attendance Detroit ever has had," said Frank N. Sealand, president of the dealers' association. "In the first place we are giving the best show, when you count the number of exhibits and quality. Then it will be the best looking in the country, and the fact that it is first in the west will bring to the city an unusual number of visitors from this and nearby states. Detroit, itself, w[illegible] welcome the show, judging f[illegible] what I have heard on all sides, t[illegible] location this year being so handy for everybody who has the show habit.

"Of course we would appreciate a big building where we would not have to work out such elaborate decorative schemes, but the novelty of the show is something and it promises to attract both the dealers from the outside and the buyers from many cities and towns."

In addition to the regular exhibits one of the strong features of the Detroit show will be the good roads department, conducted by the committee of the Board of Commerce. In this space will be shown photographs of the wonderful road system in Wayne county, now being copied in foreign countries, views along the East Michigan Pike and other proposed highways in the state and an exhibit of model roads sent by the Unite. States government.

While many go to automobile shows to look over the new models before buying their new cars there are thousands who have no thought of making any change, they are interested in what is new in the way of comforts and equipments. There is the same progress among the makers of accessories and other equipments, that is shown in the 1916 cars themselves, and this year Detroit will have its greatest display of these novelties.

WORDS IN FETTERS.

Many Expressions That Are Slaves to the Tyranny of Custom.

There is no bondage more galling than that of custom, and it is inescapable also. Words which by nature have a wide latitude of real and metaphorical meaning are fettered to a single significance by the custom of using them more commonly in one way than in another.

When it was announced that a preacher had been sued for "breach of promise" every one at all interested in the case immediately assumed that he had declined to marry a woman whom he had agreed to make his wife. As he had a wife already, there were the elements of a scandal in the report. But it seems that the minister is not accused of breaking his promise to marry, but his promise to pay certain sums of money in a business contract. "Breach of promise," however, is chained so securely to the post of a single meaning that it connotes but one idea in the popular mind.

"Elope" is another word that is not free. It means merely to run away, but only people who run away to marry surreptitiously are allowed to elope. "Notoriety" is simply the state of being known. A notorious man, however, is a man of bad reputation. "Suggestiveness" likewise means merely having the ability to suggest, but it is used in a bad sense. And "criticism," however much it would like to describe friendly as well as hostile comment, finds itself unable to convey any meaning save that of faultfinding. The number of such slaves might be multiplied indefinitely to prove that words are but symbols that mean what we agree they shall mean and not what their ancestry would justify us in supposing that they do mean.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Disgusted Lover.

When James IV. of Scotland went to London to propose for the hand of Margaret, the daughter of Henry VII., he was somewhat disgusted to find her at their first meeting so busily engaged in a game of cards that she was scarcely able to give him any attention.

Y. M. C. A. BANQUET

At Hotel Barrett, Friday Evening, January 14th

COLEMAN C. VAUGHAN AND PROF. [illegible] ARTMAN THE PRINCIPAL SPEAKERS

One hundred and forty six men and boys gathered at the Masonic Temple, Friday night at six o'clock for the Y. M. C. A. banquet. Promptly at 6:30 they marched across the street to the Barrett Hotel and took their places at the tables which were arrainged for them in the Barrett Tea rooms. Every seat was taken and a table had to be prepared in the Hotel dining rooms to take care of the overflow. The boys were seated by themselves and nearly filled a long table which reached from end to end of the Tea room.

A fine course banquet was prepared by Barrett Bros and was served very nicely by twelve young ladies from the High School. During the serving, a male quartet, composed of Will and Fred Dickinson, Floyd Juckett and Harold Lowry, gave a selection which called forth a hearty encore. Music was furnished by the Presbyterian orchestra, under the leadership of Miss Hazel Roberts. This was the orchestras' first appearance in public and from the favorable comment we heard from all sides and the applause given them, they may well feel proud of their efforts. Besides the leader the orchestra was composed of Burton Garlinghouse Lester Waring, Harold Lowry, Wilbur Boyce, Leon McLaughlin, A. B. McLaughlin, Parker Comfort, Gordon Bachman and Will Dickinson.

Dr. Hartzog was called upon to pronounce the invocation. Robert Moore, chairman of the committee on arrangements, called the meeting to order and while he introduced the Toastmaster as the "Silver tongued orator" we feel that he should have reserved some of the honor for himself. Chairman Moore expressed the committees' appreciation for the splendid attendance, spoke of the work the County Y. M. C. A. had been doing in our midst and what they hoped to do. "You are seated close together to-night", he said, "Not because of the crowded condition of the room alone, but purposely, so that you may touch elbows with each other." "In choosing a toastmaster," he announced, "great care was taken by the committee to choose one who measured up to the occasion, one who had a good appearance, good looking, keen witted, with brains and an orator." "We have found a man who measures up to our ideals, one whom we liken to our great silver tongued orator, 'William Jennings Bryan'" He then introduced George 'William Jennings.'

Rev Jennings accepted the honor very graciously but thought it a little hard on an old "stand patter" to be likened to William Jennings Bryan. He said, 'I thought while our chairman was saying all of these nice things about me that I was in heaven but after looking about and seeing a few here whom I know, I found it necessary to change my mind." Then in his usual happy way he proceeded to introduce the several speakers the first of whom was, County Secretary, E J. Arnot, who spoke briefly of the work which has been done here in Lenawee County and of some of the things they hoped to do.

Lenawee County, about 12 years ago, started the first Association for County Y. M. C. A. work which was started in the state and at this time has 19 groups established within the county. The work in Michigan has spread until now there are 15 counties who are doing organized county work. The greatest trouble experienced in Lenawee county and in all counties is to find suitable leaders, who are willing to devote a share of their time to this work among boys and young men.

Secretary of State Vaughan was the next speaker introduced. Mr. Vaughan said that he had not come to Tecumseh to make a speech but simply to say a few words about the work in his own county (Clinton county). For some time past he had been interested in this work and was chairman of the Clinton county committee. In Clinton county they have 21 groups. At first the money used to carry on this work had come in slowly but now that the people understood it, it was easy to raise the required amount. He spoke feelingly of what the association is doing, how it encouraged the boys in their sports, arranged contests of all kinds for them and that being one of them in their sports, contests, etc., they were able to get close to them and instil in their minds those things which stands for higher manhood and better citizenship. The county and state conventions were great things for the boys and they came home filled with enthusiasm. He would rather devote his time and thought to help make a good citizen out of a boy than to try and reform him after he had gone wrong. The State Reform School is doing a good work but a warden of one of our State Prisons had told him that some of the worst prisoners he has are those who have been Reform School boys

Prof J. M. Artman, Dean of Boys' Work, of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. College was next presented. Prof. Artman was a very pleasing speaker and took for his subject, "Father and Son."

He said that the gang spirit is strong among boys and even men, they like to bunch themselves in small groups, and in itself, it is a good thing, but it should not be allowed to continue. People should not center their activities and confine them to a few but should spread them to take in the many. They should not live for self or a few alone but live for their community, their state, their country and the whole world. A few years ago China was at the other end of the world but now in these days of rapid communication and transportation it is only at our back door. This is a day when character is becoming supreme. Way back in mediaeval times the church was supreme, then came a time when the church had to make way for the state, later the state made way for education, then love for money seemed to be the goal, but today all are being put aside for a higher and nobler ideal, that of character building. He pointed to the life of Christ as the perfect way, "he went about doing good." "I don't know what you call it," he said, "but I call it the 'Jesus way.'"

The church of today is doing a great good, but is not reaching out to the many but is centered more within itself. The work of the Y. M. C. A. is a general one and is trying to reach all boys an[illegible] to help them to build character and to prepare them for a better manhood. They are trying to make the movement statewide, nationwide and worldwide. "You boys of today will be the fathers of tomorrow." He urged the young man to place his hand in that of his fathers, the father to take the son out into the fields and show him the works of nature and lead him onward and upward in perfect manhood

In closing the toastmaster spoke of the splendid talks which had been given and pointed toward the one perfect manhood, "the life of Christ"

Rev. Rex pronounced the benediction.

In every way the banquet was a success. Over 160 tickets were sold and many business men purchased tickets which were given to the boys that they might be able to attend.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Thursday, Dec. 23.—Teutonic flyers have appeared within three miles of Saloniki, and dropped bombs, an Athens dispatch says. It is also reported that after a three hour battle a detachment of Bulgars were put to flight by Greeks.

Paris admits a reverse in the Vosges at Hartmanns-Weiler Kopf, but says that position on a front of two kilometers taken Wednesday are held and German counter attacks repulsed.

The new American note to Austria, though as firm as the former one and rejecting all Austria's contentions but less brusque in tone, is said to have had a pleasing effect at Vienna.

Montenegrins claim to have repulsed Austrian attacks.

Friday, Dec. 24.—In the region of Ipek, Montenegro, the Montenegrins drove the Austrians fifteen miles toward the Serbian border the Serbian consulate at London reports.

Twenty towns near Saloniki have been ordered evacuated by the entente commanders for strategical reasons.

Both Paris and Berlin claim possession of the heights of Hartmanns-Weilerkoff. Swiss reports state that the casualties number 15,000.

Arab outbreaks have forced the British to evacuate a small frontier post on the Egyptian-Tripoli border.

Berlin reports the Russians on the offensive at Bessarabia but repulsed.

Japan may be drawn into the European war through the torpedoing of the Japanese steamer Yasaka Maru. This disaster is known to be one of the greatest ship losses since the war. The cargo's value is estimated at $5,000,000.

Saturday, Dec. 25.—Reports from Athens say that the Teutons have begun a bombardment of the allies' lines northwest of Saloniki.

Turks claim their artillery silenced enemy guns at Gallipoli, besides sinking two loaded vessels.

In Persia the Russians are declared to have severely defeated Persian insurgents 25 miles from Teheran.

Sunday, Dec. 26.—Two days of fighting at Ypres and Armentieres on the western front are said by a Paris war correspondent to have lost the Germans 8,000 men. A dozen attacks, aided by poison gases, against the British positions failed.

The outstanding feature of the war reports was Lloyd George's appeal to British labor [illegible] to set aside union regulations to enable other workers to aid in furnishing the men in the trenches with munitions. Disaster to England might be caused by the acts of the unionists, he told them.

Montenegrins report driving the Austrians from three towns with heavy losses.

A Museum's Worst Enemy.

One of the worst enemies curators of museums have [illegible] with is a tiny beetle, which works so neatly that there is no evidence of its woeful work until the specimen is found dismembered or otherwise ruined. Neither in America or England has any effectual remedy been found. The tiny mischief worker is the Anthrenus museorum. The adult measures only or even less than one-eighth of an inch in length and is convex in form. The female lays eggs in specimens, and the larvae feed on them—the valued butterfly and the magnificent beetle—brought from afar. These larvae are small, plump, hairy grubs, and the sole sign of their presence, likely to be overlooked by the amateur, is a few specks of brown dust in the case.—Scientific American.

Tecumseh is very fortunate in this engagement as we are to get the No. 1 company and not the one that played through this section a week or so ago. At the time the No. 3 company was playing Adrian, Monroe, etc., the No 1 company, that will play here, was playing in Chicago. The complete route of these two companies will be published next Friday so that you can see exactly where the different companies are playing and which one come into our city. You will see that Tecumseh get the big city show and not the regular 'one nighter'. This same company played Detroit a short time ago, (Nov. 15-20) to $6755, some business for a week at the Lyceum, probably only one attraction ever played there to bigger business and that was Gus Hill's "Mutt & Jeff" company which played to something over $8000 on the week.

This big musical comedy offering was secured on a very short booking as the company is filling an open date going into Canada Patrons of the Bradley can look forward to one of the best offerings in this line, in this in this engagement of "Bringing up Father" which is full of good clean Irish comedy, the principal characters are all taken from the cartoons of "Bringing up Father" which appear in all of the leading papers, the same as "Mutt & Jeff", "The Newlyweds" etc.

This big city show carries 35 people and a 60 foot car load of special scenery The chorus is one of the best dressed, singing and dancing chorus on the road this year.

The local management guarantees this attraction to be A No. 1 in every way. The Adrian orchestra will undoubtly be engaged to furnish the music.

The Familiar Unknown.

Things you see every day and never notice form a favorite topic with those who probe curiously into our deficiencies. The watch trick is perhaps an open secret by now, and yet you may fail in reproducing the Roman figures that you confront in all moods many times a day. Can you describe the aspect of a shilling, which I hope you see as many times a day, or a penny postage stamp? I am sure that any postal maiden could sell me a dozen penny stamps with the wrong head on them and send me away contented. And yesterday I met a man who had lived for years in happiness on Haverstock hill and couldn't tell me the number of steps that led to the front door of his own house.—London Spectator.

BIG PULL OF THE ROBIN.

To See It at Its Strongest Watch Him Get Breakfast.

Relatively speaking, the robin has more pull than the willest politician that ever drew breath or a contract. We mean, of course, in comparison to their sizes. By similar comparison, he's stouter than a 100 horsepower stump puller or a steel magnet. If you want to see him test his strength get up early some seasonable morning, go out on the lawn and watch your friend, the robin, grubbing for worms.

You'll have to be early because the robin is. Likewise the robin is early because the worm is. Earthworms, you know, crawl out of their underground tunnels at nighttime and feed on dead leaves and grasses scattered over the lawns. The robin gets his breakfast before the worms have time to get far down in their burrows.

Mr. Robin goes hopping around over the grass like a boy in a sack race with his feet tied, stopping to inspect a hole so tiny that you'd never see it. He shoots his bill down in the hole, gives his head a little twist—yes, he's found a worm.

Then begins the tug of war. With the end of the worm fast in his bill the robin braces his legs and pulls. He doesn't jerk the worm out. If he did the worm might break, and you'll seldom see a robin get only half a worm. No, he plays with it like a skillful angler who has caught a big fish on his line. Little by little the worm gives way, and presto, the robin has him in his mouth.

Once in a great while a young robin, who hasn't learned the art yet, will be caught off his balance by a sudden release of the worm and go tumbling on his back. But that doesn't happen often.—Philadelphia North American.

MOVING PICTURES.

Why They Appear to the Eye as One Continuous Photograph.

Motion pictures depend for their successful operation upon the physiological phenomenon known as "persistence of vision." If, for instance, a bright light is moved rapidly in front of the eye in a dark room it appears not as a spark, but as a line of light. A so called shooting star produces the same effect.

This result is purely physiological and is due to the fact that the retina of the eye may be considered practically as a sensitized plate of relatively slow speed, so that an image impressed upon it remains, before being effaced, for a period ranging from one-sixteenth to one-seventh of a second, according to the idiosyncrasies of the individual and the intensity of the light.

So it will be seen that if a number of pictures are successively presented to the eye they will appear as a single continuous photograph, provided the periods between them are short enough to prevent one of the photographs being effaced before its successor is presented to the eye.

If, for instance, a series of identical portraits were rapidly presented to the eye a single picture would apparently be viewed, or if we presented to the eye a series of photographs of moving objects, each one representing a minute successive phase of movement, the movements themselves would appear to be taking place. This is the principle of moving pictures.—New York Times.

SOUTHERN DRUG MERCHANT MAKES UNUSUAL STATEMENT

Great Business Losses Due to Neglect

W. WITHERS MILLER

President of the Polk-Miller Drug Company, Richmond, Va., is authority for the following extraordinary statement:

"I estimate that the business men of this country could increase their efficiency fully ten per cent by taking an occasional laxative and not neglecting the bowels as most of them do."

He also said that if the Department of Commerce in Washington would present each business man in the country with a box of Rexall Orderlies, it would be of great benefit to the national welfare. Rexall Orderlies are prompt in action, pleasant to take and never gripe, can be used by men, women or children, and are just the thing for toning up sluggish livers.

We have the exclusive selling rights for this great laxative. Trial size, 10 cents.

Flexible Stone.

Itacolumite is a peculiar stone which is found in Brazil. When flexible itacolumite is cut into thin plates, and when examined with a microscope it is found to be composed almost entirely of fine grains of sand of peculiar shape, with indented edges which interlock like the fingers of clasped hands. The flexibility of the material results from this interlocking of the grains of sand, of which it is chiefly composed. Although but few persons know that this stone can be anything but hard, the flexible stone is not so much of a curiosity as it seems, for it is found in North Carolina, and there are specimens of it in a case at the Philadelphia collection. The sensation of handling a piece of stone which bends like a piece of rubber is a strange experience. If handled too roughly the stone breaks.—Indianapolis News.

PADEREWSKI IN ANN ARBOR

January 20, 1916

I. J. Paderewski, the distinguished Polish pianist who has been in the lime-light throughout three continents for the past quarter of a century and who will appear on the Choral Union Series in Hill Auditorium, Ann Arbor, January 20, in one of the new concerts which he will give this year, has chosen a most interesting program made up of numbers from Beethoven, Schubert, Liszt, Chopin and Rubenstein.

His appearances in the large cities of the East have brought out the fact that he is playing this year better than ever before, if that is possible, the great conflict abroad in which he is so greatly interested, seemingly having added to the warmth and sincerity of his performances. Through his efforts thousands of dollars have been added to the resources of the Polish Relief Fund in the management of which he has been closely identified.

At the close of the concert in Ann Arbor, opportunity will be afforded patrons to purchase photographs of Mr. Paderewski bearing his own signature and also Polish Refugee Dolls and various other souvenirs, the sale being conducted in the artists' rooms by Mr. Paderewski and Madame Paderewski. The entire proceeds is devoted to relief work among his stricken countrymen.

Persons desiring tickets for the concert should communicate with Secretary Charles A. Sink.

The program in full is as follows:

Sonata, Op. 53 .... Beethoven
Allegro con brio Adagio molto
Allegretto moderato Prestissimo
Impromptu, Op. 142 .... Schubert
Sonata in B minor .... Liszt
(a) Ballade in G major
(b) Impromptu in F-sharp major
(c) Mazurka in A minor, Op. 17
(d) Scherzo in B flat minor
Chopin
(a) Etude in C major
(b) Valse Caprice

MIGHTY IMPORTANT matter, the purchase of an automobile. So you are looking always and everywhere for information—facts—about the various rival makes of cars.

BUT YOU'VE NOTICED—and if you haven't, you will in the future, now we've brought it to your attention—that Reo owners without exception are unstinting in their praise of this model.

YOU NEVER HEAR an "all right, but" from a Reo owner.

THAT'S BECAUSE the Reo Folk see to it that every Reo is just as good as any Reo ever made—and as much better as today's product ought to be than yesterday's in this progressive world.

THEN ORDER QUICKLY—for that very factor of uniform excellence has resulted in such over-demand for the latest Reo models it is necessary to order several weeks in advance if you'd have your Reo when you'll want it.

THE NEWLYWEDS AND THEIR BABY

Manager Mark sustained his reputation of getting A 1 shows for Tecumseh by the engagement of the Newlyweds Friday evening. The show had been given before in Tecumseh and that fact and that there were other large attractions doing the same evening, together with so much grip and the bitter cold makes Mr Mark appreciative of the audience the show called out.

Of course "Snookums" was a large part of the show but it was all a first class musical comedy, some of the costums being new to the town. The chorus was well trained the dancing being much better than their singing, but Adolph and his tin horn orchestra brought down the house.

The Newlyweds will always draw good houses in Tecumseh.

HERE'S NEW VIGOR FOR OVER WORKED STOMACHS

C. A. Wright & Son, the popular druggists, have been in the drug business long enough to have their own opinion of the best way of selling medicines They say the plan adopted by Mi-o-na, the great dyspepsia remedy, is the fairest they have ever heard of. They don't believe that a medicine ought to be paid for unless it does the user some good. And Mi-o-na is sold under a positive guarantee to relieve dyspepsia or to refund the money. You simply leave 50 cents on deposit with C. A. Wright & Son and if, after you have used the box of Mi-o-na you decide that it has done you no good, all you have to do is to tell them so and they will return your money.

Hundreds of people have been relieved of stomach agonies by using this remarkable remedy. It is not simply a food digester; it is a medicine that puts all of the digestive organs into normal condition and gives ruddy, glowing, vigorous health. A change for the better will be seen after the first few doses of Mi-o-na, and its continued use will soon give the power to eat anything at any time and not suffer distress afterward. Use Mi-o na and see how much more there is in life. adv

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Garden peas either for family trade or for canning purposes are one of the surest and most profitable crops that amateurs can produce.

There is a high acreage profit in growing peas, and as the vines have unusual fertilizing qualities this crop should have a place on every farm, but more especially on small places which are largely given up to truck raising.

Peas belong to the legume family and have the power of taking nitrogen from the air and mixing it with the soil, but this nitrogen cannot be made use of till the plant dies and the roots rot. Consequently the vines should be plowed in as soon as the peas have been picked in summer or early fall. This, with a supply of ordinary barnyard manure, will prove sufficient fertilization unless the ground is badly in need of rejuvenation. In this case good results may be obtained by applying in the spring 400 to 600 pounds of a fertilizer carrying 4 per cent ammonia, 6 per cent phosphoric acid and 4 per cent potash. Half of this fertilizer should be drilled into the seed bed and half through the planter in such manner that the peas do not come in direct contact with it.

PEAS ARE A PROFITABLE CROP.

Peas are adapted to early planting. When warm weather comes the harrow and disk are used just as soon as the ground will work. The peas are then planted in succession so that the ripening will come on gradually enough for easy picking and marketing. Cultivation must be reasonably thorough so that no crust forms. As soon as the peas are large enough to cover three-fourths of the surface cultivation is discontinued. Seed is generally sown at the rate of two or three bushels to the acre. Reliable dealers will furnish the quality and quantity required in different localities. In order to get uniform tenderness the crop should be harvested while the peas are green and juicy.

While pea vines should be plowed in as a fertilizer, it is well to keep in mind the fact that they make excellent fodder for cattle and sheep. There will be times of shortage in hay when a few acres of peas will help a farmer out of a serious pinch. The crop pays best, however, when the vines are turned under as soon as possible after the crop has been secured.

Do not be afraid to raise or can a big crop of peas. There is a constant demand at fair prices. It is easy to work up a private trade which will consume a good sized crop. Canning factories exist in all parts of the country and are usually ready to contract for any acreage that farmers will offer. The work of canning is simple, however, and as this process just about doubles the value of a crop every farm family should give attention to it. Nor is it to be overlooked that a great deal of money is to be picked up by selling the green peas in pods as the crop slowly matures. Farmers located near cities can easily build up a family or restaurant trade that will consume the entire crop, either as the peas are picked or when they have been canned, thus securing retail prices.

In neighborhoods where there are no canning factories and where farmers are too remote from large towns to permit of serving private customers it is feasible for a number to join in a co-operative or joint stock company and establish a suitable canning plant. This will encourage the growing of peas and add to farm profits. They will find that in starting an institution of this kind they can just as well handle cucumbers, beans, corn and other products, according to the neighborhood requirements. Thus a good business can be started with small capital, and farmers will be the beneficiaries all the way through. In the ordinary little farm scheme of diversified crops it is best to start with about two acres of peas. As experience is gained it may be found advisable to increase this to five or eight acres.

Wood Ashes Supply Potash.

To bring about an agreement whereby potash shipments from Germany may be recontinued for agricultural purposes only efforts are being made by representatives of commercial concerns and some of the experiment stations.

Such is the information which has been received by A. R. Whitson of the soils laboratory of the University of Wisconsin. Without potash from the German mines much of the development of reclaimed marsh lands in this country is at a standstill. It has been found that a limited supply can be obtained from the chemical treatment of hardwood ashes, and a valuable grade of potash is also being secured from alunite beds in certain western states.

Mr. Whitson estimates that there are hundreds of tons of ashes in Wisconsin which would yield large quantities of potash. It is not improbable that a plant for transforming wood ashes into commercial potash will be located at some central point in the state.

GEORGE WILLIAMS PRAISES TANLAC

Marion Man Says Nothing Helped Him Like the "Master Medicine."

George Williams, Box 28, Marion, Michigan, writes the following regarding the benefit he has derived from the new remedy, Tanlac:

"Although I have had catarrh for years and seemed to be unable to get rid of it, I find that, after taking one bottle of Tanlac my condition is very much improved. Friends have noticed and commented on the change and I feel better in every way. I have tried nearly every remedy on the market but have never been benefited by anything until I started using Tanlac.

"Catarrh of the head is very prevalent in this section of the country, manifesting itself as it does in accumulation of mucous in the throat, watery dripping of the nose, frequent coughing up of mucous, offensive breath, pains across the forehead and throbbing pains in the back of the head. It is very disagreeable. Tanlac has proven especially valuable in relieving these conditions."

Tanlac may be obtained here at the store of B. J. Pulver. adv

OUR GIANT TREES

Over a Million Monster Sequoias In One National Park.

THE OLDEST LIVING THINGS.

No Other Form of Life In This World Can Compare In Age With These Mighty Monarchs of the Forest, Some Having Seen Thirty Centuries.

The Sequoia National park is twenty-four years old, yet east of the Rockies it is scarcely known. Yellowstone and Yosemite are the only two names which the enormous majority of easterners think of when national parks are mentioned. Nevertheless Sequoia is perhaps, in point of average beauty, the superior of all. It was dear to the heart of John Muir, father of national parks, and Chief Geographer R. B. Marshall, who knows them all as no other man knows them, having surveyed or traversed them in person, has declared in print that it possesses beauty as great as all others combined.

Perhaps the most potent reason for its lack of celebrity is that this is the big tree park, and the general public associates the big trees of California with Yosemite. The Mariposa grove, within easy reach of the Yosemite valley, contains several enormous sequoia trees. In fact, the Yosemite National park contains three groves of these giants, the two others being the Merced and Tuolumne groves, which lie within easy reach to the northwest.

The Sequoia National park, however, which lies many miles south of Yosemite, was created to preserve, for the use and pleasure of the people of the United States, by far the greatest groves of the oldest, the biggest and the most remarkable trees living in this world. They number 1,166,000. Of these 12,000 exceed ten feet in diameter. The General Sherman tree, most celebrated of all, is 279.9 feet high, with a diameter of 36.5 feet. The Abraham Lincoln tree is 270 feet high, with a diameter of 31 feet. The William McKinley tree is 291 feet high, with a diameter of 28 feet.

The General Grant National park is usually mentioned with Sequoia because, though separated by six miles of mountain and forest, the two are practically the same national park. It contains only 2,536 acres and was created only for the protection of the General Grant tree, a monster sequoia 264 feet high and thirty-five feet in diameter. But General Grant shares his domain with distinguished neighbors, notably the George Washington tree, which is only nine feet less in height and six feet less in diameter.

The sequoias are the oldest living things in this world. "They are the connecting link," writes Ellsworth Huntington, "between the ancient east and the modern west.

"Three thousand fenceposts, sufficient to support a wire fence around 8,000 or 9,000 acres, have been made from one of these giants, and that was only the first step toward using its huge carcass. Six hundred and fifty thousand shingles, enough to cover the roofs of seventy or eighty houses, formed the second item of its product. Finally, there still remained hundreds of cords of firewood, which no one could use because of the prohibitive expense of hauling the wood out of the mountains. The upper third of the trunk and all the branches lie on the ground where they fell, not visibly rotting, for the wood is wonderfully enduring, but simply waiting till some foolish camper shall light a devastating fire.

"Huge as the sequoias are, their size is scarcely so wonderful as their age. A tree that has lived 500 years is still in its early youth, one that has rounded out 1,000 summers and winters is only in full maturity, and old age, the threescore years and ten of the sequoias, does not come for seventeen or eighteen centuries.

"How old the oldest trees may be is not yet certain, but I have counted the rings of seventy-nine that were over 2,000 years of age, of three that were over 3,000 and of one that was 3,150."

The sequoias are found scattered all over the park, which has an area of 161,597 acres, but the greater trees are gathered in thirteen groups of many acres each, where they grow close together.

The general country is one of the most beautiful in America, abounding in splendid streams, noble valleys, striking ridges and towering mountains. Some of the best trout fishing in the world is found here. The park is the home of the celebrated golden trout, which is found nowhere else in such perfection of color.

In laying out the boundaries of Sequoia National park some of the most superb of American scenic country was unaccountably omitted. Just to the north lies the wonderful valley of the Kings river, with its spectacular canyon and picturesque mountains, while directly on the east, over the great western divide, is a region noted for its beauty. Mount Whitney, on its east bank, is the loftiest mountain in the United States. These two districts are easily reached from the national park, of which they are, in effect, though not in administration and protection, a natural part.—Geographical Survey Bulletin.

A REBUKE BY POLK

[illegible] a Reform in the House of Representatives.

BAD MANNERS IN CONGRESS.

In the Early Days Our Lawmakers at Washington Were Addicted to Indulgences and Free and Easy Customs That No Longer Survive.

In the early days the senators at Washington were noted for their rich attire and their great gravity of manner, whereas most of the representatives persisted while being in the house during debates in wearing their big cocked hats set "fore and aft" on their heads. The custom of wearing their hats while transacting business was continued by the representatives for fifty years or more.

The senators, however, always sat with bared heads. They also avoided the habit, common in the house, of putting their feet up on the nearest elevated object, usually a desk lid, and lolling on their spines. English visitors, though accustomed to the wearing of hats in their own house of commons, nevertheless found a text for criticism in the way the American representatives did it, and they all had something severe to say of the prevalence of tobacco chewing in the house. Thus writes Francis E. Leupp in his book, "Walks About Washington."

Less offensive to the taste of our visitors from abroad, continues the writer, was the indulgence in snuff taking, which was so general that boxes or jars were set up in convenient places inside of both halls, and it was made the duty of certain employees to keep these always filled with a fine brand of snuff. Any of the most eloquent orators in congress was liable to stop at regular intervals in a speech to help himself to a large pinch, bury his face in a bandanna handkerchief and have it out with nature.

While we are on the subject of indulgences we must not overlook a drink called switchel, which was very popular, being compounded of rum, ginger, molasses and water. Every member was allowed then, as now, in addition to his salary and traveling expenses, a fixed supply of "stationery," and this term, which was elastic enough to include everything from pens and paper to jackknives and razors, was stretched to cover the delectable switchel under the thin guise of "sirup."

In later years, when a wave of teetotalism had swept over Washington and the open sale of alcoholic drinks in the restaurants of the capitol was under a temporary ban, any member who wished a drink of whisky ordered it as "cold tea," and it was served to him in a china cup. This strategem fell into marked discredit when one of the most respectable and abstemious members of the house, who had never tasted intoxicating liquor of any sort, ordered cold tea in entirely good faith to clear his throat in the midst of a speech and became maudlin before he was aware that anything was amiss.

Many old time representatives felt free to read newspapers while debates were going on around them, indifferent to their disturbance of both orators and audience. The first pointed rebuke of this practice was administered by James K. Polk when speaker of the house. He noticed one morning that substantially every representative had a newspaper in hand when the gavel fell for beginning the day's session. The journal was read, but nobody paid any attention to it, and then the speaker made his usual announcement that the house was ready for business. Still everybody remained buried in the morning's news. After another vain attempt to set the machinery in motion Mr. Polk quietly drew a newspaper from his own pocket, seated himself with his back toward the house, spread the sheet open before him and ostentatiously immersed himself in its printed contents.

One by one the representatives finished their reading, and perhaps a quarter of an hour passed before there came from all sides an irregular volley of calls: "Mr. Speaker! Mr. Speaker!" Mr. Polk ignored them till one of the baffled members moved that the house proceed to the election of a presiding officer to take the place of the speaker, who appeared to be absent. This brought Mr. Polk to his feet with the remark that he not only was present, but had notified the house that it was ready for business and had received no response. The house took the joke in good part and showed by its conduct thereafter that it was not above profiting by the speaker's reproof.

Although women were admitted as spectators to the sessions of both chambers on the same terms as men, there was for many years an undercurrent of feeling against their encroachments. In the house one day John Randolph drew attention to them by halting a debate to point a long, skinny finger in their direction and snarl out: "Mr. Speaker, what, pray, are all these women doing here, so out of place in this arena? Sir, they would much better be at home attending to their knitting!" In spite of that, they continued to come and to attract attention till the number of members who habitually quitted their seats to repair to the gallery and pay their devoirs to their lady friends threatened to play havoc with the roll calls. This abuse did not last long, and nowadays the visit of a member of either house to the gallery is an incident.

Reports from over the state reflect that Michigan has prospered during 1915 and that the prospects for the new year are even brighter than the last.

E. D. Coveyou of Petoskey, who is noted leaders in bee culture, went violently insane and has been removed to the state hospital at Traverse City.

Houghton news says a 10 per cent increase in wages for 14,000 employes of the Calumet and Hecla and subsidiary mines, mills and smelters took effect January 1.

An effort by Grand Rapids people is being made to get Major General George W. Goethals, builder of the Panama canal to attend the Lincoln club banquet in February.

L. Ryl, a pleuropneumonia patient paid with life for his heroism in rescuing two patients, when Butterworth hospital at Muskegon burned Monday night, it has become known.

The steamer Nyack, Crosby Transportation company and one of the oldest vessels in the passenger [illegible] on the great lakes, burned at her dock here and sank to the bottom.

Grand Rapids police are somewhat skeptical about the bold holdup of Pawnbroker Woolfan when he was hit on the head by a stranger and relieved of $5,000 in money and jewelry.

In the Hillsdale court Henry M. Lyons, negro, filed suit against Dennis & Huff, barbers, charging discrimination, alleging they refused to cut his hair except after the closing hour, 7:30 p. m.

By requiring all beggars to earn what they ask by chopping wood, which is distributed among the poor families of the city, a noticeable decrease in the number of wayfarers has taken place at Jonesville.

Three men burned to death in a fire which practically destroyed the Farmers' inn, the leading hotel of Traverse City. The victims were Ben Powers of Manton, John Shone of Kingsley, and Jacob H. Kinter, the proprietor.

The Michigan state university hospital has been badly hit by influenza. Fifteen of the nurses are in bed with severe cases of grip, while several of the physicians would themselves be in bed were they patients instead of physicians.

O. C. Johnson, head of the Oakley C. Johnson, head of the Oakley grade school, has had inserted in the "agony" columns of a Chicago newspaper a liner offering to sell his head after his death for $100 in order that he might complete his education.

After six months, St. Joseph lawfully had a jag on by the wholesale dumping by Sheriff Franz of $300 worth of local option booze seized during Berrien's first half year on the water wagon. The river drank it all up.

At Kalamazoo there will be no wedding bells for Ralph Blanchard and Flora E. Cutler, of this city, for a time at least. Judge Weimer, alleging Blanchard got a divorce decree by fraud and by setting it aside, making him still the spouse of Dora Blanchard.

At Grand Rapids about 7 o'clock at night, while hundreds of people were passing his store, William E. Woolfan, diamond and loan dealer, was held up and robbed of more than $5,000 in cash and goods, and then was knocked insensible and left for dead by two strangers.

The hospital car equipped for use in France with money raised by the women of Ann Arbor, will be dedicated to Richard N. Hall, son of Dr. and Mrs. Louis P. Hall, of the University of Michigan, who met death in France Christmas eve, while serving in the American ambulance corps.

Despite the attorney general's ruling regulations formulated by the college could not regulate student boarding and rooming houses in Ypsilanti, President Charles McKenny, of the state normal, announces that most of the landladies and college students in Ypsilanti would continue to observe the regulations formulated by the college.

F. R. Devilliers, taken at St. Louis, Mo., as a fugitive from justice, played the social lion in the fashionable tourist colony at Canon City, Colo., defrauded two Grand Rapids, Mich., girls, Misses Alice Clapp and Isabelle Maud Powers, who were sojourning at Canon City, out of money and jewelry, then gave the "younger set" a banquet and paid for it with forged checks.

Saving and Small Earnings.

In the Scotch parish where the savings bank originated a great majority of the inhabitants were poor cottagers. Their average wages did not run over 8 shillings (about $2) a week.

"It seemed," wrote Samuel Smiles, "a very unlikely place in which to establish a bank for savings, where the poor people were already obliged to strain every nerve to earn a bare living, to provide the means of educating their children—for, however small his income, the Scottish peasant almost invariably contrives to save something wherewith to send his children to school—and to pay their little contributions to the friendly society of the parish."

In four years this unpromising field yielded to the Rev. Henry Duncan's bank at Ruthwell nearly $5,000. The bank became self sustaining and all over Scotland and England the new savings bank idea spread.—Chicago News.

England's First Scientist.

The first great English scientist was Roger Bacon, who died in 1294. The exact date of his birth is unknown, but it is believed that this year marks the seven hundredth anniversary. He was persecuted and condemned and much of his work destroyed, so that the extent of his discoveries cannot be definitely known. It is certain that he was centuries ahead of his ignorant and credulous times in chemistry, mechanics and mathematics. Branded as a magician, he was thrown into prison. From 1277 until a short time before his death Bacon was immured in a filthy cell. He is said to have invented the camera obscura, the air pump and the diving bell, and he was acquainted with the uses of optical lenses and the nature of gunpowder, although the projectile power of gunpowder appears not to have been discovered until the following century. It is said that during a war Bacon set fire to the chief buildings in a town by using burning lenses.

Next Door to It.

An acquaintance of the late Josh Billings was one day talking with him about the remarkable increase of imitations and substitutes for original articles, as oleomargarine for butter, celluloid for ivory, and so forth, "and," said he, "many of the substitutes go ahead of the real thing. I guess in time there will be a substitute for everything, though I don't know about wisdom."

"No," replied the humorist, "up to the present time at least there is no really good substitute for wisdom. But silence is the best that has so far been discovered."

Slow Fathers.

"Mamma, I'm afraid papa was pretty slow when he was a young man."

"Perhaps he was. He always paid his debts, and used good English, and knew nothing about cigarettes, and never saw a taxicab, and hadn't any clubs, and was able to support a wife before he married. I guess he was [illegible] slow."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PEOPLES OF THE WORLD.

The Aryan or White Race and Its Numerous Divisions.

The division of the earth's population according to race is as follows: Indo-Germanic or Aryan race (white), occupying Europe, America, Persia, India and Australia, about 775,000,000; Mongolian or Turanian (yellow and brown), living in Asia, about 622,000,000; Semitic (white), living in Asia, Arabia, etc., about 65,000,000; negro and Bantu (black), found in Africa, about 150,000,000; Malay and Polynesian (brown), inhabiting Australasia, about 35,000,000; American (Indian red), found in North and South America, number, including halfbreeds, about 25,000,000.

The Slavs are one of the chief divisions of the Aryan race. They are divided, as a race, into two leading families, the eastern and western Slavs. The eastern Slavs comprise the Russians (Great Russians, Little Russians and White Russians), Bulgarians, Serbo-Croats, including the Servians and Montenegrins, and Slovenes in Carinthia, Carniola and part of Styria. The western Slav family is divided into the Poles, in Russia, Austria and Prussia, and the Kassubes; the Czechs, or Bohemians, and the Moravians, with the Slovaks in Hungary, and the Lusatian Wends or Sorbs in Saxony and Prussia. The theory is that their original home was in Volhynia and White Russia.

VICTIMS OF NIAGARA.

Water Birds Go to Sleep and Are Swept Over the Falls.

Swimming too near the brink of the falls, hundreds of water birds, even swans, ducks and geese, go over Niagara falls to their death each year in the migratory season. So many birds pay the penalty for their daring each year that bird lovers on both the American and Canadian sides of the falls are considering steps to lessen the annual toll of the feathered life.

Since a majority of the victims are claimed in the night, the theory is advanced that the birds go to sleep while swimming and don't wake up until the rapids have carried them over the danger line. Usually they are killed outright in the fall. Sometimes they are only stunned and are picked out of the river below the falls and sold for food.

In 1912, so Ernest Harold Baynes, the naturalist, relates, 140 whistling swans went over Horseshoe falls. Boys and men fished the birds out, knocked them on the head and sold them.

"James Savage, of Buffalo," Mr. Baynes says, "with some friends once saved a flock of swans by chasing them in a power boat and making them fly away just before nightfall. It was a daring thing for these men to do, for if by any chance the engine had become disabled nothing could have prevented their going over the falls."—Philadelphia North American.

African Marriage System.

You cannot fancy how deeply complicated the African marriage system is nor how many ramifications there may be to a woman palaver. One day Mr. Heminger was sitting in a hut talking with two members of his congregation, wives of one husband. He was talking to them about their sins, which were of an obvious character. The younger woman had been accused of stealing food. Then he turned to the elder, Wawa, she of the ten children, five of them dead and five of them cruel.

"Wawa," said he, "why cannot you live at peace with this wife of your husband? Why are you always quarreling?" (They are notorious scrappers.) "Well," said Wawa, "she was bought with one of my children, and I cannot forget it."—Jean Kenyon Mackenzie in Atlantic.

Turks' Names For Greeks.

The Turks have definite names for the Greeks who inhabit Ottoman territory and for those who are their own masters. The latter are Yunan and their country Yunanistan—names derived from "Ionia"—while the Greeks and Turks are Rum. By origin this is simply "Romans," and is an inheritance from the Byzantine days, when the inhabitants of Constantinople, the New Rome, were called Romaioi, while the provincials were known as Helladikoi. "Rum" was the conquering Turks' name for the Byzantine empire. It survives in Roumelia, while the popular Greek language of the present day is still known as Romaic. But every Greek, in Greece or in Turkey, calls himself a Hellene.—London Chronicle.

Clean Up the Garden.

[W. W. Robbins, Colorado station.]

In the control and prevention of plant diseases sanitation of the garden is important. There are a number of our fungus diseases which rest over the winter on or in decayed stalks, leaves or fruit. The resting stage of the fungus is resistant to winter conditions. Among such diseases which rest over in the above manner are:

Clubroot cabbage, onion mildew, leaf spot of strawberry, leaf spot of beets, early blight of celery, late blights of celery and asparagus rust.

If a disease is not destructive one season it is no sign it will not be another season. Rake up and burn the old stalks, leaves and fruit left in the garden patch.

Waste of Good Crops.

Crops grown at a potential profit may by being fed to a poor grade of live stock be turned into an actual loss.

His Handicap.

"My most disturbing thought is that I may die and leave my son unprovided for."

"But won't he be able to make his own living?"

"No; the poor fellow is too sadly handicapped. He is a genius."—Houston Post.

TIMELY FARM HINTS.

Cover crops can be converted into hay.

The legumes gather nitrogen from the air for the building up of the soil.

Winter cover crops protect soil from washing, prevent soil from blowing away, prevent soluble plant food from being lost by leaching, furnish winter and early spring grazing and enrich the soil by adding vegetable matter and humus.

INSECT METAL BORERS.

Wasps With the Ability to Eat Their [illegible] Steel Plates.

The voracious and destructive habits of the white ants of the tropics are widely known. Metal is almost the only substance that they are unable to destroy. There is an insect, however—and it is not necessary to go to the tropics to find it—that can bore through metal as easily as the white ant can bore through wood.

Any one can hear this insect buzzing in the pine woods in midsummer or perhaps see the flash of its yellow wings. Sirex gigas is its formidable scientific name, but we know it simply as the horn tailed wasp. This wasp bores into the tree in various places with its long tail and in each hole leaves an egg.

The ensuing larvae, a white, six legged grub, fitted with powerful jaws, takes up the work of boring into the wood and as it advances closes the passage behind it with sawdust. If uninterrupted the larvae continues boring deeper and deeper into the tree, and since it is, of course, growing all the time, it makes a larger and larger passage.

After about two years it makes its cocoon of silk in the burrow. Then, after the pupal skin is cast off, the winged insect breaks through its cocoon. Immediately, with feverish haste, it begins boring toward liberty. Finally it reaches the bark of the tree and then the open air.

It is often the case that during the larval period the tree in which the horn tailed wasp is burrowing may be felled, sawed into planks and used in building operations. Sometimes for some particular purpose the timber may be incased in a metal sheathing. That does not disturb the wasp at all. When its time comes it applies itself with energy to its task and soon bores a hole through which it can escape.

Holes made by these insects have been found in tin roofs, and in the mint at Vienna was a safe the half inch steel plates of which the wasps had perforated. Some extraordinary cases of their activity were brought to the notice of the Academy of Sciences in Paris.

A barrel of cartridges that had been stored away for some time showed the ravages of the wasps in their search for light and freedom. The insects had not only eaten their way through the wooden barrel, but through the cartridges and leaden bullets as well.

Other boxes of cartridges, dating from the Crimean war, were shown completely riddled by wasp borings, an excellent illustration of the tremendous strength and the determination to accomplish their purpose that these fragile insects possess.—Washington Star.

JUVENILE SEED CORN WORK.

Campaign of Great Value Carried on by Public School Children.

The seed corn work of the children of the public schools has assumed gigantic proportions. The superintendents of country schools have given splendid support to this movement.

The boys and girls are encouraged each to select a farmer partner. It is noticeable that there are just about the same number of farmers as pupils in the average district. In any event the children are so apportioned that each farmer has a young partner. Each pupil calls upon his farmer partner to learn how he cares for his seed corn, asking him the name of the variety, how many bushels he secured per acre, what date the crop was planted, what date gathered, how hung up, how protected from rats and mice, how much he has on hand and how much he is willing to take for what surplus seed corn he may have for sale.

This information is taken back to school, where the pupils compare notes and each writes his findings. The farmer partner is invited to come to a school meeting, and the best essays are selected and read.

If it is found that the seed corn is scarce the next duty of the young partner is to locate all of the 1914 corn still in the crib and to test it for vitality. These tests are to be made with corn during February and March. The "rag doll," which is the most popular modern testing method, is being supplied through the co-operation of the grain men, millers, bankers, commercial clubs, etc., to all of the schools whose pupils will sign an agreement, each designating his willingness to select and co-operate with a different farmer.

The value of this campaign will be beyond computation. If in the average corn county there are 100,000 acres of corn land an increase of ten bushels per acre, which is entirely reasonable through seed selection alone, would add millions of bushels of corn which might not otherwise be grown. It would therefore seem that children, in addition to obtaining this practical training, would greatly add to the wealth of the community.

County Agriculturists Active.

The county agriculturist in Washington state has made himself felt in the development of a better agriculture, notwithstanding that the movement is new, and only nine counties have thus far availed themselves of the privilege of the law creating the office of county agriculturist. (Chapter 18, Session Laws of 1913, establishing "The Bureau of Farm Development.") In the last year these county agriculturists, nine of them, have called together in public meetings 20,000 people for lectures or agricultural demonstrations. Twenty registered bulls have been introduced into farming communities on the initiative of the county agriculturists. A similar number of "scrub bulls" have been disposed of. Seed testing, seed selection in the field, farm sanitation, improvement in farm buildings, the introduction of rotative methods of farming, improvement in drainage systems and widespread distribution of literature pertaining to agricultural development are included in the activities of the county agriculturists.

The counties provided with county agriculturists at present are Wahkiakum, Benton, Adams, Spokane, Walla Walla, Douglas, Okanogan, King and Thurston.

Oranges.

Oranges are a most valuable fruit. Orange juice allays thirst and with few exceptions is well borne by the weakest stomach. It is also a laxative, and if taken at night or before breakfast it will be found most beneficial.

Reporting A Battle

An Experience of a Newspaper Correspondent

By MILLARD MALTBIE

"Kitson," said the editor in chief to me when the pan European war broke out, "you must go to Europe at once to report the big fight that's on. Take the first steamer that sails, and don't fail, for it may be the last. The ships by which you must cross the ocean fly either the British or the German flag, and the cruisers of each will be trying to capture the other's vessels."

"Which army shall I accompany?"

"Any army. Go where there is the severest fighting."

My chief's surmise that the ship on which I sailed might be the last proved correct. At any rate, it was the last for awhile. I reached England when the Germans were attacking Liege and asked for permission to go over with the British troops that were being sent across the channel. I was refused. No newspaper correspondents were to be allowed with the army. I lost some time trying to convince the war office that the world was hungry for news of the fighting, but made no impression. I crossed the channel as soon as I could find a boat to take me and reached France at a time when the Germans were sweeping southward toward Paris.

How I got to the scene of the fighting I wouldn't like to say. I went by motorcar till the Germans took it away from me, then bought a horse cheap. The owner expected hourly some cavalryman would take it without paying for it, and when the animal was taken from me on the same terms I walked.

The great scene of my life was one morning when I reached an elevated point where I could look down on the battle raging between two lines, each so long that, though I was raised several hundred feet above them, I could not see either end of either army. Near by the thunder of heavy ordnance, the b-r-r-r-r of machine guns, the rattle of rifle firing, sounded like a storm, while on either side the sounds grew fainter and fainter in the distance, like rolling thunder dying away. Directly beneath me was a battery of large cannon screened from the enemy by a thicket. On a knoll slightly in advance of it stood an officer with a telephone receiver to his ear and a transmitter at his lips, giving the gunner the range. They were firing beyond the point they intended to hit, and he was doubtless giving them orders to reduce the distance, for I noticed that with every shot their shells exploded nearer to the French lines till at last they burst in a field where infantry were standing under arms and the shrapnel scattered among them caused frightful gaps in their ranks.

Above aeroplanes were moving hither and thither, some darting away to the east, some to the west and some coming from both east and west. Doubtless those moving on long distances were carrying news of the battle on the wings to the commander in chief in the center.

At that time the Germans were entering French territory and soon began their rapid movement toward Paris. Before nightfall the roar of battle had been moved so far southward that it now sounded like the mutterings of a storm that had passed. My work consisted of seeing the fighting, reporting it and sending my communications to my paper. So I remained behind to attend to the last two parts of my duties. About sunset, seeing beneath and in advance of me a hamlet, or, rather, the ruins of a hamlet, one house of which seemed to have been but little damaged, I descended from my perch, intending to use the remaining house for shelter and a place to write my dispatch.

I found the house in better shape than one would have supposed. True, several shells had made openings in the walls, but had not exploded within. Some of the furniture had been knocked into kindling wood, but there were a bed and bedding which had not been even disarranged. It occurred to me that after I had finished my scribbling, in case no opportunity occurred to reach a point where I could send it, I would use that bed for the night.

I found eatables, lights, almost any article I needed. So, having helped myself to the contents of the cupboard—cold meat and bread and butter—I lighted a kerosene lamp and wrote out a description of the fight I had seen.

When I had finished my work I went outside to reconnoiter, undecided whether it would be better to attempt to send off the report at once or wait till morning. I stood alone, surrounded by ruins. All was still except for an occasional distant boom and the creak of ambulances, farther on, taking up the wounded. A young moon cast a dim light over all. I walked down the street that separated the ruins and saw not a living thing. But here and there I passed a corpse of a soldier. Two, the one wearing the French uniform and the other the German, lay near together, the German having fallen upon the Frenchman so that they seemed to be sleeping in an embrace. A German boy—he looked no more than seventeen—was sitting with his back against a stone wall, where he had bled to death from a wound in his chest. He had doubtless been thinking of home.

Rather than remain among these gruesome scenes I preferred to take my dispatch to a station where I would be permitted to send it, but I knew not which way to go, and if I moved about in the dark I was liable to be shot. So I returned to the house where I had prepared it with the determination of sleeping on the bed I had seen till morning. Throwing myself on it dressed and without turning out the lamp—I did not relish darkness in such a place—I tried to sleep, but the exciting scenes I had witnessed during the day and the grewsome scenes about me kept me awake for awhile; then, tired with the exertion I had been put to, I fell asleep.

But not for long. I dreamed a shell had exploded above me, and I woke up in a tremble. And n[illegible] first living thing that appeared to me in this wrecked [illegible] a door stood ajar, and in the opening was the face of a girl peering at me. On it was an expression of dread. The moment she saw that I was awake she drew away and closed the door.

Starting up, I ran to it and pulled it open. I could see nothing, but heard steps descending a pair of stairs.

In a twinkling I understood what it all meant. When the tide of battle had surged over this house the inmates had hidden in the cellar. I called out: "Je ne suis pas Allemand, mademoiselle. Je suis Americain." (I am not German. I am American.) Then, taking up the lamp, I descended the stairs. Huddled together was an old man, an old woman and several children. The girl I had seen stood between me and them.

Never have I seen a more pitiable sight. These people were living in a cellar, into which little light permeated. The old persons and the little children suffered most, the former being chilled by the damp atmosphere, the latter deprived of proper food. They had evidently entered their place of concealment in haste, for they had no bedding or other articles to make their imprisonment less distressing than it might otherwise have been.

I stood looking at them, pitying them; they looked at me, supposing that an enemy had discovered their retreat and expecting I know not what calamity. My first thought was to reassure them.

"The soldiers are gone," I said in French. "There is no danger. Come upstairs."

"Are you sure, monsieur?" asked the girl.

"Come and see for yourself."

I retraced my steps, and she followed me, but on reaching the floor above stood looking about her, as if dreading to see some fierce creature who would butcher her. As soon as she was satisfied that there was no such person about she called to the others, who came straggling up, looking furtively about them.

It was some time before I could quiet them so that they would communicate anything to me, but presently I gleaned from the girl that they had been in the cellar nearly two days, during which time they had had nothing to eat. They were all, especially the children, nearly famished. I helped them to get out what eatables there were at hand, and in a few moments they were eating ravenously, though before the girl began to eat she returned to the cellar and brought up a bottle of wine. For there are few persons in France but drink the wine of the country.

The family insisted on my occupying the only bed that had escaped being wrecked, but I resolutely declined, taking my blanket to an upper room, where I could see the stars through a hole in the roof made by a shell. There I stretched myself on the floor, feeling that if the dead were without the living were within. Consequently I went to sleep and slumbered till the sound of distant cannon awakened me, and I knew the slaughter had recommenced.

I decided to spend the day hunting an opportunity to send off my report, and after partaking of a breakfast of what was left in the larder I sallied forth. But I did not get very far. Guns, provisions, ammunition, were being hurried forward along the roads, and I concluded when evening came to find a place between thoroughfares to spend the night. So I repaired to the house I had occupied the night before.

I was disappointed to find the family gone. But when I reflected that they had nothing to eat I saw that their going was necessary. Not caring to spend another night amid such lonely surroundings, I determined to look for other quarters and found them in a barn that had escaped being leveled by shot or fire, though the uhlans had taken the contents for their horses. I succeeded in scraping together enough hay to make me a bed, on which I slept quite comfortably.

The next morning I had no difficulty in reaching a point where I could send my reports, for I was arrested by the French and hustled off to Calais. There again I met with grewsome sights, for the place was full of wounded.

Finding that reporting battles and fighting my way to the battleground without any assurance of being permitted to stay there was discouraging, I concluded to make a virtue of necessity and chose another field for my labors.

The war has changed much since then. There are more men, more guns, more shells, more aeroplanes. And that new kind of fortification, the trench, has become the principal defense in military engineering. More men are upon the air and more down under the sea. They fly higher and dive deeper. If so great have been the changes within a few years, what shall we have in another quarter of a century?

His Double Loss.

"I've been robbed in that hospital!" shouted the loony ex-patient as he met a policeman.

"Who robbed you, and what did they take?" asked the policeman.

"Why, one of the orderlies took my watch, and all the doctors took my temperature."—Baltimore American.

Inherited.

They were jollying the man about his enormous appetite, but he kept "putting away," undisturbed by the taunts. Finally he said in defense:

"Well, you see, I take after both my father and my mother. One ate a long while, and the other ate a great deal."

The Old Trouble.

"Every residence should have a servants' bath," says a housekeeping magazine. Oh, what's the use? The servants don't stay long enough to need a bath.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Easily Managed.

First Girl—I mean to be engaged when I'm nineteen. Second Girl—But supposing you can't manage it? First Girl—Then I shall remain nineteen until I am engaged.

More Effective.

Husband—I saw the doctor today. He says I must go away and rest. Wife—Did you show him your tongue? Husband—No, but I told him about yours.

KIDNEY DISORDERS QUICKLY RELIEVED

C. A. Wright & Son the popular druggists, have established a new record in the sale of medicines he says they don't believe any medicine ought to be paid for unless it does the user some good and they have adopted the plan of selling Solvax, the standard kidney remedy, under a positive guarantee of quick relief from all kidney or bladder misery, or money back without a question. This speaks eloquently for the virtues of the remedy that already has created such a widespread demand in Tecumseh. Solvax is not just merely a kidney treatment it is a medicine that puts the entire, pain-racked body into normal condition and gives vigorous health after the many painful disorders caused directly or indirectly by sick kidneys. A change for the better will be seen after the first few doses of Solvax and its continued use will soon tone up the entire system of improperly working organs and give you the desire to live and enjoy life to its fullest.

Solvax is sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure. Ask C. A. Wright & Son about it.

Why the Sea Has Pearls.

A few weeks ago I was talking with a woman of deep religious sentiment who was in great distress because her very young baby had died before it could be baptized.

I was led to ask natives of Norway, Finland and other places their views on this very delicate question, and so I came across a bit of very pretty, Sicilian folklore.

To the babies in Sicily life is very kind and death is gentle. Those who die unbaptized are doomed to wander, but do not wander grieving. Madonna Mary sends to them every week end an angel, who lays aside his lily crown and romps with the dead babies. When he leaves them he gathers up in a golden chalice all the tears they have shed during the week. These he casts in handfuls into the sea, "and that is why the sea has pearls." I like that story.—Vancouver World.

FROM CALIFORNIA

Letter Written to the Wit and Wisdom Club by

MRS. O. A. SLAYTON

Which is Interesting to Us All.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 10, 1916

DEAR F[illegible] OF THE WIT AND WISDOM CLUB:

Before leaving Tecumseh I believe we promised to write you of our goings and comings in sunny California. So far personal letters have been all we have been able to attend to, for we keep busy all the time though we are resting(?).

We had a fine trip here and a wonderful week at the exposition which no one can describe so will not attempt it. We expect to go to San Diego before we return and think all who can make a trip to California should see the country and that exposition before its close.

We have pleasant rooms in the "Moss Rose Apartments" as follows: Sitting room, dining room, two drawing rooms, two bedrooms, small breakfast room, two dressing rooms, kitchen, bathroom and two closets. This is not quite as much to care for as it sounds for the sitting room and dining room are bedrooms at night and dressing rooms in the morning and drawing rooms when we draw the beds down. The breakfast room is the kitchen after we have eaten our morning meal in it.

When you do not rise till 7:30 the morning is short. Yes, C. A. does sleep till that hour so you see he rests just as faithfully and conscientiously when at that as when at work. Fine for him, is it not? I know every farmer around Tecumseh is having a rest too while he is absent from his accustomed field of labor, but he will be around again in the spring after them unless he takes to building bungalows. Looking over the courts here and the houses built in back yards, he thought he might build about eight bungalows on our lot, so he may be occupied with that. If anyone wants one of these up to-date homes, write him at once.

The Christmas time was so different here. Every day in December was warm and sunny. No frost, ice or snow, though one day they brought in snow on the autos from the foothills and sold snow-balls on the street at ten cents apiece—and we could hardly get into the Christmas spirit.

When we did start out shopping though, we found the same call for spending money as at home. Charley does not often tire out but a shopping excursion floors him. He can't see why a woman wants to stop and look at things she does not expect to purchase. We heard a man say to his wife who asked where they should go next, "Anywhere, so we can sit down." No, when shopping, woman is not the weaker vessel.

We went with Percy Christmas eve to Whittier for dinner and the Christmas tree and for Christmas day had Miss Denney with us—the smallest gathering in many years. In the evening we went to see the big Christmas tree in the park and hear the choir of 100 voices sing the grand old hymns.

New Years Day we went to Pasadena to see the "Tournament of Roses." The rain came just as the parade passed by and we went back home at once for California rains are wet. We had experience two years ago. The floats were beautiful and such a display of flowers in January seems wonderful.

We have not been about much yet, for we came to make a home this winter for Percy who has been here five years next summer. We went out one day to his lemon grove. It is looking fine and had green and ripe lemons and blossoms on the trees.

Bert Garlinghouse took Charley out to his grove in Azusa, and a fine ride to different points. Mrs. Hessen and Mrs. Glover are near us and we see them often. Have met Judge Watts and wife of Adrian also and talked with Mrs. Knapp this evening.

We enjoy the church privileges here and attend Immanuel Presbyterian church and Dr. Torrey's Friday evening class where he teaches the S. S. lesson at the Bible Institute.

The rains that began on New Years Day continued several days. It rained nearly all last night and has begun again this evening, but they are very welcome here when there has been none since April and the brown hills and mountains soon turn to green.

The Club has lost a faithful member and how we shall all miss dear Mary Dingman. I was not there to lay my flowers on her casket but want to speak of her wonderful faith. The Valley of the Shadow of Death is nothing to the shadow of approaching dependence and failing strength and in the face of these she was courageous and cheerful. In her last letter, written the day before she was ill, she spoke of being lonely on the coming Christmas day and said "but I have so much to be thankful for." Of her we can surely say "She hath done what she could." Other homes are so lonely without the dear ones who have "gone away" and we sorrow for them.

We would like so much to just step into your next meeting, but it is too long a step. Charley and Percy went Thursday evening to the Michigan Club and heard Wm Alden Smith speak on "Preparedness," but no California club can take the place of dear old "Wit and Wisdom."

Wishing you a happy and prosperous winter and hoping to hear from every one of you.

Sincerely your friend,
ALICE M. SLAYTON,

C. B. SMITH WAIVES EXAMINATION

Failing to produce bail of $1500 is taken back to Adrian and lodged in jail.

C. B Smith appeared before Justice Hosmer Wednesday afternoon to answer to the charge of wife desertion, brought by his wife Olive Smith of Ridgeway.

Sheriff Henig and Prosecuting Attorney Bean of Adrian accompanied him. Smith waived examination and was bound over to the Circuit court, with bail fixed at $1500.

Being unable to secure bail, he was taken back to Adrian, where he will remain in the County jail until the day of his trial. His father was in the court room and offered to go his bail, if he would go to his home and family and care for them. This he refused to do as he preferred to return to Ohio, where he expected to get work.

Quite a large delegation of his old neighbors and friends from Ridgeway who were interested in the case were present in the court room.

"QUALITY STREET"

The people of the town are indebted to the ladies of the Westminster Guild for this excellent series of entertainments, the C W Best Series of which Mrs Fenetta Haskell gave the opening number Tuesday evening at the Presbyterian church.

Her reading of the play "Quality street" was enthusiastically received and her protrayal of the play was excellent showing an unusual versatility in her line. The play as the name indicates is a story of society life of the time of the Corsicon wars. It is pretty and quaint and she reads it so beautifully that you can fairly see the different people and hear them talk.

The audience were so pleased that they demanded an encore when she gave "Them Fool children."

Mrs. Haskell showed other splendid traits. As well as being a courteous and pleasant lady she has grit and lots of it as the following will show. While giving her play a nice fat mouse scampered up the steps at her side and she saw it as it went behide her chair. It closely examined her beautiful gown and after quizzically looking over the audience ran away. Mrs Haskell said she wondered several times where Mr. Mouse was but it was her business to put on the play. She never hesitated an instant or lost a syllable.

MESSAGE OF JOY TO CATARRH SUFFERERS

Hyomei Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to Relieve or Money Refunded.

The popularity and increase in sales of Hyomei here in Tecumseh are unique in the annals of medicine. Such astonishing successes have been made by this remarkable remedy that the proprietors have authorized C. A. Wright & Son to sell every package of Hyomei under an absolute guarantee that it will knock out catarrh for good. If it does not, the purchaser can have his money refunded by C. A. Wright & Son.

Hyomei is no ordinary remedy. It is pronounced the only method of treatment that sends by direct inhalation to the most remote part of the air passages, a balsamic air that destroys all catarrhal germs in the breathing organs, enriches and purifies the blood with additional ozone, and gives permanent and complete relief from catarrh.

The complete Hyomei outfit is inexpensive and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the vest pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a life time, and if one bottle does not cure, an extra bottle can be obtained for a trifling sum. It is more economical than any remedy advertised for the cure of catarrh, and is the only treatment known to us that follows nature in her methods of treating diseases of the respiratory organs. adv

In these days when San Francisco is as familiar to every one as New York City and regular mails are received every day. It seems hard to believe that in 1860 the first regular overland mail communication was established with the East by Pony Express and while today millions of post cards at one cent a piece and letters at two cents come and go at that time it cost $5.00 for every half ounce of mail. Surely this is a wonderful age and time works many wonderful changes, for greater than all else is the telephone that unites these two cities so that vocal communication is made possible.

BRINGING UP FATHER
The Biggest Laugh on Record

Absolute Proof That Tecumseh Gets The Big City Show, No. 1 Company of "Bringing Up Father"

If you will note the following routes of the No. 1 and the No. 3 companies you will see the class of cities the company coming to Tecumseh is playing and the towns that the No. 3 company (the one that played Adrian) is playing. If you will note the different dates you will see that No 1 with Chas Yale as Manager was playing in Chicago at the same that No. 3 with Griff Williams as manager was playing Adrian. The following routes are absolutely correct and taken from the "Billboard" a weekly theatrical paper published in Cincinnati:

"Bringing Up Father" No. 1 Chas Yale, manager, Chicago Jan. 9-15; Cleveland 17-22; Toledo 23-26; Ann Arbor 27; Tecumseh 28.

"Bringing Up Father" No. 3 Griff Williams, Manager, Tiffin O, Jan 8; Fremont 10; Monroe 11; Adrian 12; Mt. Clemens 13; Pontiac 14; Flint; 15; Saginaw 16; Bay City 17; Cadillac 18; Petoskey 19; Traverse City 20; Manistee 21; Muskegon 22; Benton Harbor 23; Kalamazoo 24; Coldwater 25; Goshen 26; Dowagiac 28 and South Bend 29

You can see by these routes that on the night that the No. 1 company is playing in Tecumseh (coming here from the Valentine theatre, Toledo after playing a four days engagement there) that the company that played in Adrian on January 12, is playing in Dowagiac.

Patrons of the Bradley will see the big city show not the regular one nighter. The company carries over 35 people and a 60 foot car of special scenery and effects. The No. 1 company of "Bringing Up Father" plays all week stands of city time and it is only on account of other bookings at the Valentine these last three days of the week that Tecumseh and Ann Arbor get the big city company.

The local management never has stooped to a falsehood in presenting arrangements to his patrons and from the class of shows coming into Tecumseh would say that it would be entirely uncalled for now. You will see that we get the No. 1. company and direct from Ann Arbor, the only other one night stands in Michigan

"Bringing Up Father" will undoubtly be one of the musical comedies coming this way. "Bringing Up Father" will be at the Bradley Opera House, Tecumseh, next Friday, January 28. The advance sale of seats opens at Hay's Bakery Thursday morning at 8:00.

SANE AUTOMOBILE LAWS

Some of the soundest common sense ever put into law, is embodied in the new automobile law, which is now effective, Here's a paragraph that makes it safe to travel a main road and which will cause some of the "speed fiends" to rave and get arrested:

"A person operating a motor vehicle shall, at the request or on signal by putting up the hand from the person riding, leading, or driving a horse or horses or other draft animals, bring such motor vehicle immediately to a stop, and if traveling in an opposite direction remain stationary so long as may be reasonable to allow such horse or animal to pass "

In approaching a person or animal on the road warning must be sounded and speed slowed down to ten miles an hour."

Every car must be equipped with dimmers.

This new law gives the driver of horses an opportunity to drive in safety. The law should be enforced and every country, township and village officer should see that the laws enforced.

FARM USE OF THERMOMETER.

May Be Applied to All Crops Injured by Frosts.

It is sometimes desirable before planting to test the temperature of the ground. The experience of every farmer has taught him that every species of seed has a minimum temperature below which it will not germinate. There also appears to be an upper limit. One is apt to find too high a temperature, but seeds under this condition is dependent largely on the moisture content of the soil.

Much has been written regarding the uses of thermometers in the orchard at frost time, but they may be applied to all crops that are injured by early or late frosts, such as tomatoes and late onions. Some means of protection may be applied to them all.

The farmer should first know his farm. He should know what places are colder than others. He may not wish, nor is it necessary, to have a thermometer for every little hill and hollow, but he should by actual test find out the cold and the more favorable places. A knowledge of this kind will help the farmer not only in protecting his fruit and other crops, but also in planting. There should be a regular station somewhere convenient on the outside where a thermometer can be exposed. Knowing how other places on the farm compare with the regular station the farmer may, by reading his station thermometer, estimate the temperature at any place on his land fairly accurately.

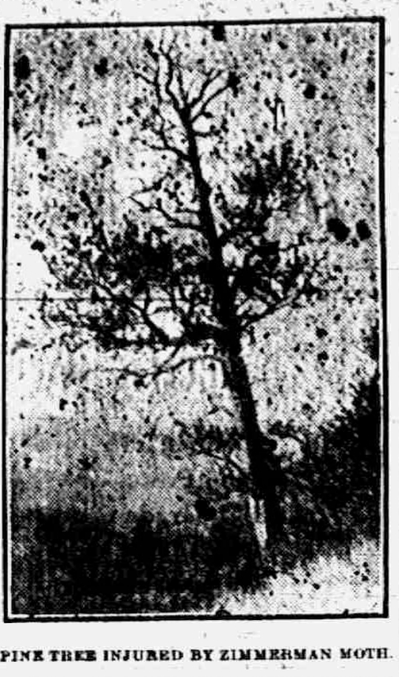
THE ZIMMERMAN PINE MOTH.

How to Control Damage Done by This Pest.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

The damage which the Zimmerman pine moth does to pines throughout the country can be greatly reduced by cutting out the few "brood" trees in each stand. These are usually overmature, spike topped, lightning struck, gnarly branched or otherwise defective trees. Great numbers of the caterpillars hibernate in them, and the resulting moths lay numerous eggs also in trees of second growth.

The caterpillar of the Zimmerman pine moth is about three-quarters of an inch long and in color ranges from dirty white through reddish yellow to a vivid green, according to the kind of tree on which it is feeding. By boring under the bark of pine trees it causes extensive pitch deposits in the wood, making the lumber too pitchy for the better commercial use. Portions of the infested trees are also killed.



PINE TREE INJURED BY ZIMMERMAN MOTH.

The moth which develops from this caterpillar lays its eggs mostly in July. Mature trees are attacked from ten to thirty feet from the top down and second growth from about breast high up to thirty or forty feet. The moths, however, prefer mature and injured pines. If these are cut out during the winter, while the insects are hibernating, and the infested parts burned it will contribute to the control of the lighter infestation in the young trees.

This method is particularly recommended by entomologists in the department of agriculture for wood lots By first using the brood trees for fire wood the damage from the moth is either absolutely controlled or greatly minimized. In many cases the elimination of two or three of the worst trees is all that is necessary.

Getting Rid of Ants.

The surest way of preventing injury by ants is to destroy their nests. Usually the nests can be readily found, but if there is any difficulty a little watching of where the ants travel will show where the nest is located. If the nests are out in the field punch a few holes with a stick in the nests and place a couple of tablespoonfuls of carbon disulphide in each hole, covering up immediately with the foot so as to throw a capping of dirt into the hole. The fumes of carbon disulphide are very heavy and will suffocate the ants. Care must be taken in using it, as it is extremely inflammable.

Ants in houses can be trapped to a sponge moistened with sweetened water. When many ants congregate on the sponge they can be destroyed by a little boiling water from the teakettle.

If ants crawl up fruit trees and destroy the blossoms of young shoots they can be kept from doing so by tying a fluffy band of cotton around the trunks. Ants will not walk over fluffy cotton unless they are very much excited.

VITALITY OF SEEDS.

Seeds with high vitality possess the power of germinating quickly and of producing healthy, vigorous plants. Seeds with low vitality sprout slowly and produce weak and spindling plants. The chief influences affecting seed vitality are as follows:

Age.—Vitality of seeds decreases with age.

Maturity.—Although seeds will germinate when not fully mature, the plants produced are weaker than those from fully matured seeds.

Size.—Large and heavy seeds have a greater germinating power and produce plants with more vigor than small seeds.

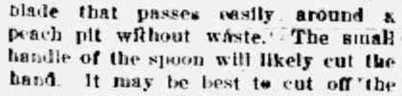
Percentage.—Seed should come from plants whose pedigree is known to be good. Strains that are run out produce seeds of weak vitality.

Methods of Curing and Preservation.—Seeds cured and stored in a very moist atmosphere lose their vitality quite rapidly. Seeds should be stored in a dry, cool place.

Variety.—Similar storage conditions do not affect all sorts of seeds the same. Vitality is a variety character.—Colorado Station.

Spoon to Pit Peaches.

Put an old, heavy kitchen spoon on a grindstone or use a file to cut it down from each side until it is half an inch wide. Grind each edge until sharp and you have a semicircular blade that passes easily around a peach pit without waste. The small handle of the spoon will likely cut the hand. It may be best to cut off the spoon handle halfway up and attach a round wooden handle over this



A Novel Cozy.

The woman whose duty and pleasure it is to sit behind the tea table is always pleased with a pretty cozy. A parrot shaped one is a novelty. It is of velveteen, the head being made of pale orange red, with a little white topknot. The body is of pale parrot green velveteen, with a few lines to indicate feathers. Two thicknesses of wadding are added, then a thin lining of silk. The edges are bound with velvet, and a black bead eye gives the finishing touch. Flat embroidery on the velvet will bring out the features, or they may be hand painted.

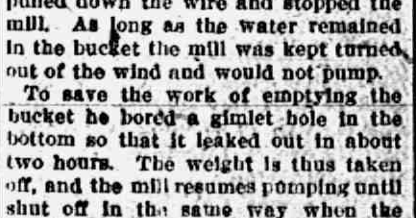
When You Call At Our Drug Store
Mr. Robert H. Norris, No. 1333 Henry St., North Berkeley, Cal., writes: "We have never had any other medicine but Peruna in our home since we have been married. I suffered with kidney and bladder trouble, but two months treatment with Peruna made me a well and strong man. My wife felt weak and was easily tired and was also troubled with various pains, but since she took Peruna she is well and strong."

Overflow Stops the Mill.

Here is a device for shutting off the windmill when the tank is full. It is simple as it is ingenious and was contrived by a neighbor of mine, says a Farm and Fireside contributor. The supply tank stands within a few feet of the windmill, and when full the waste ran out of a hole near the top. This he fitted with a short length of pipe. Then he made a lever from a piece of 2 by 4. He bolted one end to the windmill frame so that the other end reached a point under the waste pipe from the tank. The "pull out" wire from the windmill head was fastened to the long lever. Then he hung a large candy bucket near the end of the lever under the waste pipe. The overflow water ran into the bucket, and when it was nearly full its weight pulled down the wire and stopped the mill. As long as the water remained in the bucket the mill was kept turned out of the wind and would not pump.



To save the work of emptying the bucket he bored a gimlet hole in the bottom so that it leaked out in about two hours. The weight is thus taken off, and the mill resumes pumping until shut off in the same way when the tank is full. The waste water causes but little inconvenience.

The device could be made to work in winter by digging a pit to prevent water freezing in the bucket and having the waste pipe inclosed and run to the ground.

Farm Home Consumption.

The average annual value to the farm family of food, fuel, oil and a roof overhead as reported for several hundred farms studied by the department of agriculture was found to be $506.08, of which $421.17 was furnished by the farm.

Six-year-old had Croup

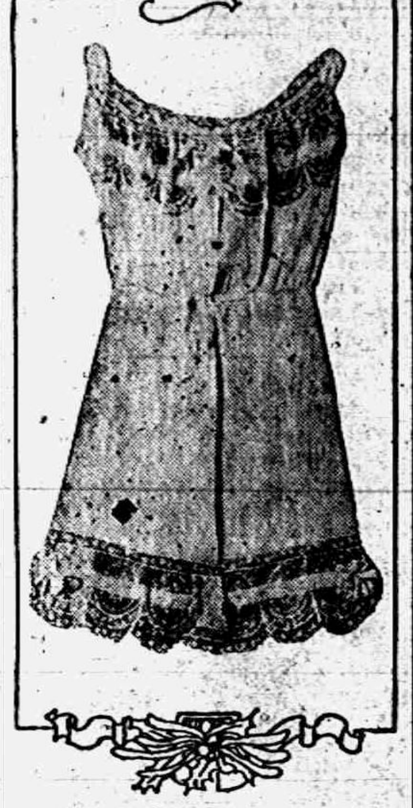
"I have a little girl six years old who has a good deal of trouble with croup," writes W. E. Curry, Evansville, Ind. "I have used Foley's Honey and Tar, obtaining instant relief for her. My wife and I also use it and will say it is the best cure for a bad cold, cough, throat trouble and croup that I ever saw." Sold everywhere in Tecumseh. adv

HANDSOME PRESENTS FOR FEMININITY

Dainty Lingerie Always a Charming Gift.

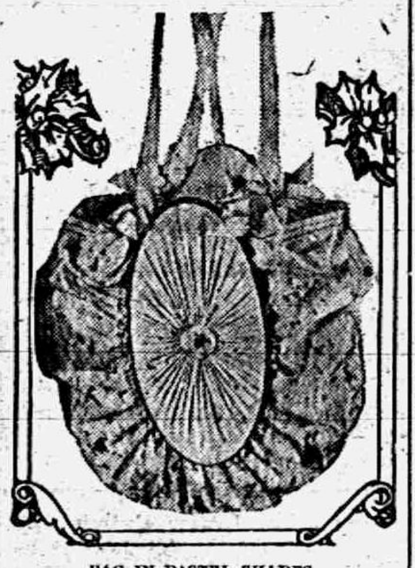
Let milady be frivolous occasionally. Life is serious enough at best, and if the fripperies of femininity delight her soul let's provide her with them. So here is a suggestion: Buy a few yards of sheer batiste and some lace and ribbon and fashion her the bit of lingerie in which her soul delighteth. The picture of a pretty piece of combination lingerie is shown herewith.

Traveling has become so common in the average American home that little conveniences for the trunk or grip are always welcome. A tray cover will help the girlish traveler to keep her waist fresh, and it is easily made. A strip of linen, denim or crash is cut the exact size of a trunk tray and bound all the way around with braid of a contrasting color. The center is embroidered with the initials of its owner in mercerized floss to match the braid, and pieces of tape are fastened near the corners of the cover in length sufficient to tie under the tray. Such a cover, of course, is not needed with the old fashioned trunk, whose single tray has a lid attached, but the new trunks are made up from innumerable trays without lids, and here the washable cover is most useful.



DAINTY COMBINATION.

A most welcome gift to the woman who goes out much in the winter is an opera bag. Crochet in very open stitches, rings in single stitch or squares made by crocheting four solid stitches to a chain of four stitches until a long piece has been made which, when folded and overseamed on the edges, forms a bag. Into this place a bright colored silk lining and then twist a thick cord of the silks used in the lining and crochet, with tassels at the ends. Crochet over eight brass rings in single stitch and then sew the rings to the bag, one inch below the top, and run the cords through these rings before the tassels have been added, one cord entirely around each side, to draw together.



BAG IN PASTEL SHADES.

Caps for children, purse covers, book covers, pillowshams and small table covers are now made of solid crocheting.

A stock and cuffs of crocheted lace are also acceptable gifts, and mittens are by no means despised by either women or men.

Farm That Was Made to Pay.

A significant instance of what proper methods of farm management can accomplish is afforded by a certain 500 acre farm in central Michigan. For ten years this farm failed to pay interest on the capital invested. One year after the owners had been induced to make certain radical changes the farm paid all the expenses of operation and returned them 5 per cent on an investment of $60,000. The changes which accomplished this financial revolution were as follows:

Four horse machinery was substituted for two horse.

The unprofitable cows in the dairy herd were weeded out and sold and the money received for them invested in better stock.

A silo was built.

The foreman was allowed, in addition to his salary, 10 per cent of the net income from the farm. The expenses of operating the farm, but not the interest on the capital, were deducted from the income before the foreman received his percentage.

It was this last suggestion which met with the most opposition from the owners of the farm, but when it was pointed out to them that for every dollar the foreman got under such an arrangement they would get $9 they yielded.

PEST BOUNTY MUCH SOUGHT

Michigan Rat Slayers Keep City Clerk Busy as Delicatessen Owner.

Iron Mountain Jan. 24.—Since the rat bounty law went into effect on Aug. 24 bounties amounting to $6.45 have been paid on 129 dead rats slaughtered by Iron Mountain persons. The bounty for a rat is five cents. The leading rat hunter in this city so far is James Minnucci who has earned over a dollar by bringing in the heads of twenty-four rodents. There is also a bounty for sparrows and since Jan. 3 fifty-eight dead sparrows have been brought to the city clerk's office and bounties amounting to $1.16 have been paid the persons who killed the birds. Two cents is the value of a sparrow's corpse, and Putman Robbins is in the lead with a flock of forty-one sparrows.

Babylonia.

The northern part of Babylonia is generally dry during the greater part of the year. The lower part, near the junction of the rivers, is generally a great malarial swamp overgrown with reeds. Officials Believe Slaying of F. M. Sprague Was for Greater Gain.

Grand Rapids, Jan. 24.—Lawrence Page, who is held on suspicion of murdering his grandfather, Frank M. Sprague, has been grilled severely by the police.

Officers are coming to the conclusion that robbery was not the motive, but that Sprague's death was sought in the hope of greater gain than a mere robbery would produce. The prosecutor is probing the statement of Mrs. Sprague that she was in the house Wednesday afternoon but did not see her husband. It is known positively that the old man was then dead.

London, Jan. 24.—The British war office announces that taking advantage of the bright moonlight, a hostile aeroplane swept over the east coast of Kent at 1 o'clock in the morning. After dropping nine incendiary bombs in rapid succession the aeroplane disappeared out over the North sea.

Neither naval or military damage was done, but private property suffered, the incendiary bombs causing several fires, all of which were extinguished within an hour.

One man was killed and two men, a woman and three children were injured.

In a second raid, made upon the same locality in the afternoon by two aeroplanes, no one was injured and no damage was done.

MINERS PREPARE DEMANDS

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—Delegates to the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, representing more than half of the 763,000 men employed in the coal mining industry in the United States, expect this week to decide upon the specific demands they will make upon the coal companies in the negotiatitons for the renewal of contracts most of which expire March 31.

Many district officers express the opinion that the convention will not make what they consider radical demands.

WOODY TIGER VS. TEDDY BEAR

New Campaign Animal to Be Introduced by Democrats.

New York, Jan. 24.—It's a death struggle between the Teddy Bear and the Woody Tiger. The Woody Tiger made its debut at the Hotel McAlpin in the form of a five-foot model created by Mrs. R. P. Hampton and done in Princeton colors. After it has basked in the limelight of publicity for a few days it will be sent to President Wilson.

Democratic politicians are said to have adopted this idea and are ordering little tigers for campaign purposes.

New York, Jan. 24.—According to advices from Havana, a bill has been introduced in the Cuban congress to appropriate $25,000 to entertain Colonel Roosevelt when he visits the West Indies.

Munchausen.

Perhaps the most voluble liar that ever lived was the Baron Munchausen—that is, the fictionized baron. The real baron was a kindly soul who lived in Germany and who in nowise deserved the evil reputation that attached to him through the use of his name in a series of highly colored adventures that appeared in print in London in 1785.

The authorship of the absurd tales is a mystery. It is generally believed that Rudolph Erich Raspe, a questionable character, wrote the stories first, but there is no absolute confirmation. Following the original series a number of additional adventures were written by less skilled pens.

The real baron found little in life to enjoy after the stories became generally circulated. Curious tourists haunted his estates and tried to trap him into relating some wild story. At first he resented their attention in a vigorous fashion, but in his declining years he grew sour and morose and finally died, a most unhappy person, in 1797.—Kansas City Times.

Love and a Cathedral Altar.

The high altar of the Freiburg cathedral, with its matchless carvings, tells a story not only of love, but of love's triumph through the sharp wit of the lover. The simple woodcarver, Hans Lefrink, who had been the early protege of Maximilian I., 200 years before Alsace was captured by the French, had dared to love the daughter of a rich man, and she was foolish enough to love him in return. The indignant parent, when the youth had received the commission to carve the high altar, and on the strength of this honor asked for the hand of his love, received the haughty response, "When you carve an altar as much higher than the church in which it stands, as my daughter is higher than you, you may lead her to that altar in marriage." It was an impossible condition, but nothing is impossible to love. When the altar had been installed it was observed that the topmost point of it was bent forward, extending in a curve, and was actually about fifteen inches higher than the church. It merely stooped a little in order to conquer.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DEFENSE PLAN FACING CRISIS

Fate of President's Policy Rests with His Trip.

HE MUST STIR MIDDLE WEST

Unless Administration Can Arouse Sufficient Interest in His Preparedness Plan to Get That Section in Line, It Will Be Defeated—President's Prestige at Stake.

Washington, Jan. 24.—In the trip which President Wilson is about to take through the middle west will depend the fate of the national defense program in congress. This trip, too, is likely to have a vital effect upon the political fortunes of Mr. Wilson.

Unless the President can stir the middle west from its apathy towards preparedness his plan for increased expenditures for the army and navy is certain to be sidetracked in congress. Also, if the President fails to arouse sufficient enthusiasm to force a victory on this issue, his leadership in the Democratic party will have suffered a blow from which it will be hard for him to recover. If the President goes down to defeat before Wm. J. Bryan and other Democratic leaders in the fight that is just beginning there is some doubt whether he will consent to become a candidate for renomination.

It Is Important Move.

It is apparent therefore that the trip on which the President will start the last of this week will be one of the most important moves he has made since he entered the White House.

The presnt situation in Washington as regards national defense is discouraging for those who had hoped to see prompt action on this important matter. Not in years has there been a big question before congress about which there seems so much confusion.

Looks Too Artificial.

A leader in the house of many years' experience said to your correspondent the other day:

"The trouble with this national defense situation is that it has too much of an appearance of being artificial. Here is the President urging on congress a program that he refused even to consider a year or two ago. Here is Daniels calling for large additions to the navy after having diligently tried to create the popular impression that the United States navy under his administration is second to none. Here are the experts of the army differing among themsmelves as to what ought to be done and finally yards and yards in and out of congress of speeches are being delivered daily claiming conflicting opinions. It it any wonder that some members of the house and the senate and especially the folks in the middle west whose interest in national defense is not seemingly so vital, should be confused over the situation."

It is this very condition of affairs that convinced the President and his advisers that he must carry his fight direct to the people; that he must overcome the impression created by his earlier indifference to national defense; that he must divest the present situation of its artificial appearance and bring it home to the people that they have a vital interest at stake."

Japanese Houses.

A number of causes have affected the size of the Japanese house, which seems much too small for a comfortable habitation in the eyes of the foreigner. In the first place, the people themselves are small, the average height of the Japanese male adult being five feet three and one-half inches and that of the female four feet nine and one-half inches. As it is the usual custom to sit on the floors upon cushions, with the legs bent beneath, great height of ceilings is not desirable. The low ceilings may also be attributed to the lack of any heating systems other than the small charcoal brazier known as the "hibashi." The frequenty of earthquakes throughout Japan has been a largely contributing cause as well, and the question of expense in a country where economy reigns supreme has also had a powerful influence.

DEATHS NUMBER ONE IN FIVE

Nearly 3,000,000 Men Believed to Have Been Killed in Fighting—Austrians Have Taken All Montenegrin Ports—German Drive in Belfort Has Begun, Belief.

London, Jan. 24.—The gross casualties in the war up to the beginning of January are 14,960,000, according to the computations of a prominent statistician and student of war estimates. The basis for the figures is official and other reliable information. The number of killed is estimated at one in every five and prisoners taken average one in every seven or eight.

The experts estimate of gross casualties suffered by each warring nation follows:

Russia, 4,000,000; Germany, 4,000,000; Austria-Hungary, 2,800,000; France, 2,300,000; Great Britain, 560,000; Italy, 300,000; Belgium, Serbia, Bulgaria and Turkey, 1,000,000.

21,000,000 Under Arms.

In the present war at least 21,000,000 men are under arms.

Figures furnished by previous wars show that in the Balkan struggle of 1912-13, 350,000 men were killed out of 1,250,000 engaged. In the Russo-Japanese war 550,000 were killed out of 2,500,000 engaged.

German Drive on Belfort Begins.

London, Jan. 24.—What is regarded in London as the opening of a German drive against the entrenched camp of Belfort, the great stronghold which for many months has prevented a German invasion of southeastern France, was announced by the Berlin office in the statement that military establishments of the French east of Belfort were bombarded.

The Germans have made no attacks against Belfort for many months, both armies in Alsace having lain quiescent with the exception of a few spiritless skirmishes at intervals. The new attack may mean the beginning of a new effort to break the deadlock in France which has existed for more than a year.

Effects of Lying.

Lying is a great sin against God, who gave us a tongue to speak the truth and not falsehood. It is a great offense against humanity itself; for where there is no regard to truth there can be no safe society between man and man. And it is an injury to the speaker; for besides the disgrace which it brings upon him, it occasions so much baseness of mind that he can scarcely tell the truth or avoid lying, even when he has no color of necessity for it, and in time he comes to such a pass that as other people cannot believe he speaks the truth, so he himself scarcely knows when he tells a falsehood. As you must be careful not to lie, so you must avoid coming near it. You must not equivocate, nor speak anything positively for which you have no authority but report, or conjecture or opinion.—Sir Matthew Hale.

AMERICAN'S SLAYERS EXECUTED IN MEXICO

Military Tribunal Metes Out Swift Justice in Akers Case.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 24.—Swift punishment was meted out to the Mexican cattle rustlers who murdered Bert Akers on Friday afternoon at the Mexican village of San Lorenzo, twelve miles east of Juarez, according to General Gabriel Gaviera, commander of the Juarez garrison, who announced that Bernado and Frederico Duran, the men who confessed to the killing, had been summarily executed at 5 o'clock in the morning in Juarez.

The execution he said, took place at the Juarez cemetery. The Duran brothers, who were natives of New Mexico, had been in th Juarez jail since the killing. Instead of letting the civil courts handle the affair, General Gaviera presented the testimony in the case to a military tribunal Saturday afternoon and the verdict was death for the two men.

Before the verdict was returned the Juarez judge of letters, the civil official who ordinarily would have handled the case, was given an opportunity to read the testimony and the judgment of the military court was approved.

PEACE OFFER TO BELGIUM

Germany Reported to Be Considering Plan to Withdraw Troops.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Information has been received in diplomatic circles in Washington that Germany is considering making Belgium a proposal of separate peace. The evacuation of all Belgian territory would follow.

Officials in close touch with the German embassy expressed the opinion that the offer, if made, probably would be accepted. Belgium is not one of the signatories to the document to which Sir Edward Grey obtained the signature of the French and Russian, and later the Italian governments, and which binds those nations not to conclude a separate peace. The restoration of Belgium would leave the allies no room for protest, in the opinion of this authority, as it has been this one point on which the allies have been most insistent as a condition of peace.

If You Make a Tobacco Pouch.

If you are contemplating embroidering a tobacco pouch for a man of your acquaintance please keep in mind his color preferences.

Don't make it too big—he doesn't want to carry his entire supply of the "weed" in it—nor yet too small. Remember the size of his pockets and think how large the bag will be when filled.

Line it with oil silk to keep the tobacco in good condition and get good oil silk while you are about it.

A Cretonne Twine Box.

A necessary fitting in every household is a twine box. An ordinary square box, such as some jewelry comes in—as a small clock box or wooden salt box, for example—is covered with some pretty stuff. A hole is punched on the top, a ball of twine is put into the box, the end being drawn through the hole. A cheap pair of scissors may be fastened to the box, so that the string and the scissors for cutting it are always in a convenient place.

Tosti's Thanks.

One day a lady called on Tosti, the famous song writer, and announced her intention of singing two of his songs at a concert.

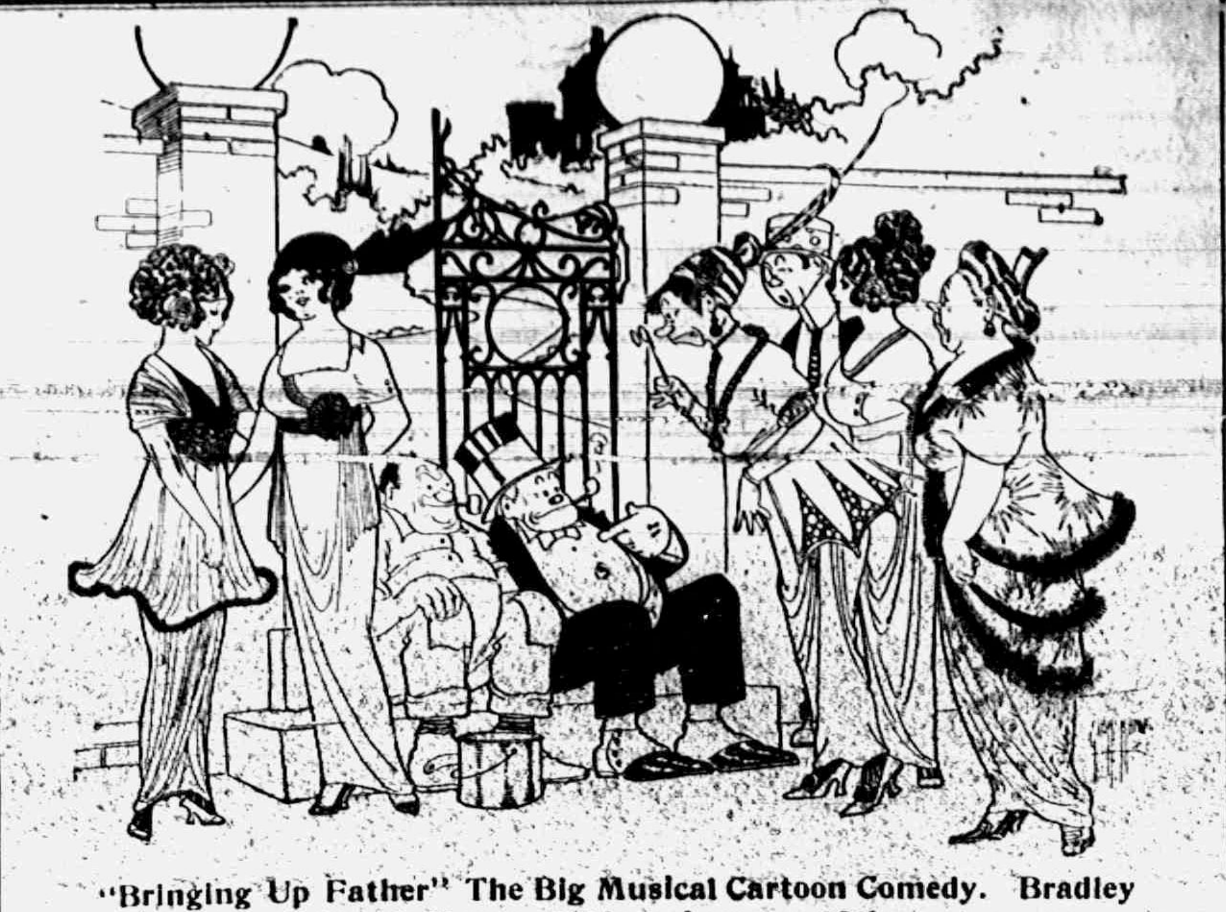
"I thought I would just run round and try them over with you," she said.

Tosti remarked that he was not in the habit of giving lessons in that manner, whereupon the lady retorted:

"Very well; I will not sing your songs then."

Tosti's face beamed as he advanced toward her with outstretched hands.

"Madam," he said, "I thank you very much for that favor."



"Bringing Up Father" The Big Musical Cartoon Comedy. Bradley Opera House, Friday, January 28th.

WHAT DETROIT, CLEVELAND, ST. LOUIS SAY OF

"Bringing Up Father"

They're "Bringing Up Father" at the Prospect theatre this week in the presence of much tuneful music, many pretty girls and some fine scenery. "Bringing Up Father" is one of the best musical shows seen at the Prospect this season.

—Cleveland Daily News, Tues. Jan 18

Clever comedians, pretty girls and artistic stage settings unite to make the musical comedy, "Bringing Up Father," one of the best productions seen at the Prospect theatre this season. Unusually pretty girls, who sing and dance, vivaciously, comprise the chorus.

—Cleveland Leader, Tues. Jan. 18

Tunes and cartoons occupy the boards at the Prospect this week with the rollicking bill, "Bringing Up Father." There are Irish songs with a lilt to them and Irish heels with a tilt to them and clever little maids who dance as if they liked it. That the audience liked it too at the first night performance was evident by the hand clapping welcome they received.

—Cleveland Plain-Dealer, Tues. Jan 18

"Bringing Up Father" is lively and exceedingly entertaining when it comes to doing it in a musical comedy built upon the characters made familiar by George McManus' cartoons. The action is swift, the lines and situations mirth producing so that the ripple of one laugh melted into the climax of another throughout the entire three acts. When the laughter did die down last night at the Princess it was just that a song properly placed and most ably interpreted, could be enjoyed.

—St Lewis Globe Democrat, Monday, January, 3.

"Bringing Up Father" a new musical comedy, based on George McManus' cartoons, extracted much laughter from an overflowing audience last night at the Princess theatre. The piece is punctuated with a score of musical numbers and encores were numerons. A large company, including a chorus who can really sing and dance, is required in the presentation. The comedy is presented with much "dash and go" and there is not a moments let up in the action from start to finish

—St. Louis Times, Monday Jan. 3.

Roaring musical farce comedy of the old Charley Hoyt variety, but clean and wholesome, and brought up to date by the adoption of characters from the modern world of newspaper comics, is Gus Hill's "Bringing Up Father" based on the George McManus' by that name which came back to the Lyceum Sunday for a return week's engagement. John E. Cain as Jiggs Mahoney "father" does all that Geo. McManus has ever made him do in pictures, and that is saying a good deal. The musical numbers are especially catchy and were taken up at once by the audience. This was proven by the avidity with which they purchased copies of the songs in the foyer after the performance. Some of the songs which made a hit were "Tango Moon" as sung by Marion Davis and Ranier Cain: "Back In Old Dubuque" and "There's A Little Lane."

—The Detroit Journal, Monday Nov. 15,

Gus Hill's elaborite and melodic farce, erected upon the foundation of Geo. McManus' cartoons, and bearing the title "Bringing Up Father" is again the joy of thousands who find their theatrical pleasures in attendance upon the Lyceum offerings.

They are a loyal community of playgoers, and when possessed of such an opportunity for shricking delight as the present offering affords, they will not brook restraint.

Also they remember how "Bringing Up Father" clutched them last February, and during the last four days they have made certain a nightly sell out for the entire term of the engagement. The musical comedy form of the entertainment enables the producers to show us anew what can be done with colors, attractive women in fetching costumes, songs that jingle merrily, dances that exemplify race-old poetry of motion and stage pictures that stir the imagination and satisfy the eye.

Little chance, if any, in the cast is observed. The principals are John E. Cain as "Father" and Miss Lida Kane as Mrs. Mahoney. The chorus consists of 12 college chums of Elinore Mahoney. They are active in all of the scenes of the production and participate effectively in most of the 24 musical numbers.

—Detroit Free Press, Monday Nov. 15

"Fawther" and his unquenchable thirst have returned to the Valentine with all the principals and chorus girls necessary to make "Bringing up Father" a brilliant and active array of rampant revelry. Pleasing two capacity audiences Sunday. They have come to the Valentine to remain until Wednesday night.

"Bringing Up Father" is a lively, tuneful and colorful combination of music, laughter and dancing. Most anyone would enjoy John Cain as "Fawther" and Lide Kane as "Mother" and all the other principals in their respective parts.

—TOLEDO DAILY BLADE, Monday, Jan. 24

This original No 1 company of "Bringing Up Father" will be at the Bradley Opera House this Friday, January 28. The seat sale opens at Hay's Thursday morning at 8 a. m. Best seats only $1.00. If you want to see one of the best musical shows on the road get your seats early.

Story of a Fortune.

Peter Thelussen, a London merchant, died in 1797, leaving a fortune of £700,000. By his will £100,000 went to his wife and children. The rest of his fortune was committed to trustees, with the stipulation that it should be allowed to accumulate during the lives of the sons and grandsons. When they were all dead the fortune was to go to the oldest living great-grandson, or if there should be no great-grandson it should go to the government and be applied on the national debt. The will was contested, but the heirs were unable to break it. The last grandson died in 1859, and the fortune was delivered to Charles Thelussen, the oldest living great-grandson. At the time the will was made experts figured out that the fortune would amount to something like £1,900,000 by the time it should be turned over to the great grandson, but the expenses of litigation and administration had been so great that he received only about the amount of the original fortune, £700,000.

Squeaky Shoes.

While conducting a research for information on the origin of certain fashions of the past I discovered the reason for the existence of the squeak in shoes.

The squeak was once deemed fashionable, and men of great importance in the affairs of the country demanded it in their footwear, and cobblers were paid 2 shillings extra for putting it in. The squeaky boot denoted the approach of some one of importance, and the way was made clear at once in the same manner as a bicycler's shrill whistle warns you to look to your interests.

During the squeaky period men found it difficult to sneak into the house after 12 midnight without being discovered and disgraced. Removing the shoes before entering the home is an invention which followed the squeaky shoe era, and while the former is now almost obsolete, the latter is still in vogue and as popular as ever with married men!—Zim in Cartoons Magazine.

Bits About Beasts.

You think you know something about animals, eh? Well, let us put your knowledge to a few simple tests.

Frogs, to begin with. Can they breathe with their mouths shut? Certainly they can. As a matter of fact, they always do. If they kept their mouths open they would suffocate.

Next, hares. When do they close their eyes? Answer, never. You see, they haven't any eyelids, so they can't. But they have a thin membrane, which performs the service of eyelids when they are asleep.

What is the color of a horse's eyebrows? That's a difficult one. Think hard and then learn that a horse hasn't any eyebrows.

You may like to know, in addition, that turtles and tortoises have no teeth; that parrots, unlike the majority of birds, can move both mandibles of their beaks, and that fishes never masticate. They simply haven't time between breaths.—London Answers.

More Rope.

In July, 1836, General William Henry Harrison, who had been spoken of as a candidate for president, visited Philadelphia. Many of his political friends were at the steamboat wharf to meet and escort him to his hotel. He was placed in a four horse carriage, but after proceeding a short distance the horses became unmanageable and had to be taken out of the harness. The people began to draw the carriage, and there was a call for ropes. They were soon procured, but proved too short, and as the enthusiasm increased the cry arose, "More ropes!" and still more ropes. The Democrats saw only the funny side of the case and adopted "more ropes" as a ridiculing slogan. It did not last long and could not have hurt Harrison much, for four years later he was elected president.—Philadelphia Press.

La Pouteese.

The Fair One—Oh, I wished I had lived a hundred years ago. The Other One—But then you would be a long time dead and would not be sitting here happily by my side. The Fair One—True, true! So I couldn't! Forgive me, dearest!—New York Post.

JOHN FREDERICK BOWERS

John Frederick Bowers was born Oct. 16, 1854 in Chatfield, Crawford County, Ohio. Departed this life at his residence at Ridgeway December 1, 1915 aged 63 years, 1 month, 15 days. He was raised by good German Christian parents who died years ago.

He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and four children, Edward Bowers of Ridgeway, Mrs. Cathrene Preilipp of Palmyra, Leroy and Wilfred Browers of Ridgeway, two brothers George Bowers of Wellsville and Frederick Bowers of Freemont, Ohio. He has been a great sufferer.

Dear father thou hast left us
And our loss we deeply feel,
But the God who has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heals,
Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the lights of life has fled.
When in heaven with joy we greet thee.
